NRA's Future Seen as Topic Of Roosevelt Talk Sunday

Radio Speech to U. S. Advanced; Answer to Critics Likely.

May Try to Dispel Fears of Business

Chamber Meets Rebuke for Questions; Reply Won't Be Made.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt will go on the air Sunday night to give an accounting of his stewardship at a time when the policies of the New Deal are drawing increasingly heavy fire from business.

The White House announced last night that the President's next "fireside chat" with the Nation has been arranged, over both Nation-wide hook-ups, for 10 o'clock. He is expected to speak about 20 minutes.

Although the subject of his talk was guarded closely, it was considered likely that he will give an optimistic outlook for the future, together with an interpretation of plans for the NRA and possibly a reply to recent criticism.

Date Moved Up.

This seemed especially true because the radio address was moved up to an earlier date than originally planned. In some quarters it was believed the President is anxious to assure business that it is needlessly jittery.

Meanwhile, the cleavage between the United States Chamber of Commerce, which is regarded by the Administration as a bulwark of conservatism, widened appreciably yesterday when it came in for one of those indirect White House rebukes reserved for organized opposition.

Following closely his commentary on the Liberty League, which he "praised with faint damns," the President indicated, clearly and curtly, that he regards the recent action of the chamber in propounding to him a list of questions as distinctly hostile.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt asserted he does not share the apprehension of business groups. He has neither as many reactions as business men, he said in reply to an inquiry, nor, smiling broadly, as many inhibitions.

Team Still Scoring.

In fact, relapsing into the vernacular of the gridiron—in accord with his old habit of likening the Administration to a football team—the President expressed the opinion his team is still scoring.

Beyond this he did not—and indicated he would not—reply directly to the questions put to him by the Chamber of Commerce. The latter has sought a definition of policy on a number of points, including balancing the budget, further monetary experimentation, currency stabilization, Government "interference" with business and spending for public works.

Explaining his reticence, Mr. Roosevelt said that in the first place the chamber is only one of several hundred such organizations, National in scope. If he were to answer the questionnaires of all, he said, it would impose an impossible burden on the White House.

Moreover, besides taking exception to the manner in which the chamber submitted its questions, Mr. Roosevelt indicated he found objection to the questions themselves. They reminded him, he said, of the lawyer who asked the accused man, "have you stopped beating your wife."

What Mr. Roosevelt had reference to by this, apparently was the

Joe Cronin to Marry Griffith's Niece Today

Team Members Will See Youthful Manager Take Bride.

Joe Cronin, youthful manager of the seventh-place Washington Senators, and Miss Mildred June Robertson, niece and adopted daughter of Clark Griffith, president of last year's American League pennant winners, will be married today.

The wedding will be in St. Matthew's Catholic Church at 10 a. m. Arthur Crowley, intimate friend of Cronin, will act as best man, and Miss Thelma Griffith, younger sister of the bride, will be maid of honor. It was announced yesterday that only close friends of the bride and bridegroom and members of the team have been invited to attend.

Cronin and his bride will motor to New York immediately after the ceremony. They then will sail for San Francisco, Cronin's home.

Since 1925 Miss Robertson has been an office assistant in the Nationals' headquarters. She came here after Griffith had adopted the seven children of his wife's widowed sister.

The engagement had been rumored since last spring, but both Cronin and Miss Robertson had denied it persistently.

They will be married by the Rev. T. J. Murray, of Branford, Conn., a close friend of the young manager.

Cronin, who is 28 years old, piloted the Washington Club to a championship in 1933, his first year as manager, but an unprecedented series of injuries wrecked the team's chances this year.

Crowley, who will be best man for the couple today, is the son of a former police chief of Boston, and has been an intimate of Cronin's since 1928, when he began his major league career.

3 Appointed For Textile Settlement

Steel Board Members Named to Rule on Strike Issues.

'Discrimination' Faces Inquiry; $50,000 for Expenses.

A board to decide many of the issues raised in the recent Nation-wide textile strike was appointed yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Those named were Walter P. Stacy, chief justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, chairman; Admiral Henry A. Wiley, U. S. Navy, retired, and James Mullenbach, of Chicago.

In an executive order the President instructed that the board "immediately investigate" all complaints of discrimination by mill owners against participants in the walkout and "take appropriate action" in all such cases.

The board, created on recommendation of Gov. John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, and other Presidential mediators in the strike, was granted other broad powers to seek a return of normal conditions in the textile industry.

Also On Steel Board.

Named to the new agency because of their experience as labor conciliators, the members also constitute the existing Steel Labor Relations Board.

A White House announcement explained that Stacy agreed to serve "through the formative period of the board, or about two weeks." He has served on five railroad arbitration boards.

Wiley also mediated several railroad labor disputes. During the World War he served with the Sixth Battle Squadron of the British Grand Fleet. He became commander of the United States fleet in 1927.

Mullenbach is a member of the Petroleum Labor Policy Board as well as the steel group, and for many years was a peacemaker in Chicago clothing trade quarrels. He was graduated from Fargo College and studied at the Universities of Halle and Berlin in Germany. He is a former member of the Chicago Board of Education.

Mr. Roosevelt's order abolished the NRA Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board, bitterly criticized by the United Textile Workers during the walkout as controlled by management and unfriendly to workers.

In addition, the President instructed the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics to investigate and report on hours, earnings and working conditions in the industry. He also called on the Federal Trade Commission to delve into labor costs, profits and investments to decide whether economic conditions would sustain wage increases.

Bargaining Rule Upheld.

For the first time, the President gave his personal approval to a decision of the National Labor Relations Board, under fire in the courts, which would give majorities of employes in individual plants authority to bargain collectively for all workers. The order said on that point:

"The board shall certify the results of all elections conducted by it or by its agents to parties concerned, and the person, persons or organization certified as the choice of the majority of those voting shall be accepted for the purpose of collective bargaining as the representatives of the employes eligible to participate in the election, without thereby denying to any individual or employe or group of employes the right to present grievances, to confer with their employers or otherwise to associate themselves and act for mutual aid or protection."

Many Slated For Dismissal In New NRA

Gen. Johnson's Friends Expected to Quit With Him.

Richberg Confers With Roosevelt on Plans to Revise Unit.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

First steps in NRA reorganization since the resignation of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson were taken yesterday when President Roosevelt conferred with Donald R. Richberg, recovery coordinator.

The withdrawal of Johnson inspired reports that several hundred recovery unit employes would be dismissed shortly in the expected merger of many codes. Official confirmation of personnel slashes, however, was not forthcoming.

Another development was publication in Fortune Magazine of an article signed by Richberg in which he hinted NRA soon would have a new price-fixing policy and said the Blue Eagle must continue its flight to prevent "chaos" or "State Socialism."

Johnson's Future Debated.

There was much speculation over what niche Johnson would fill in private life. His friends were divided over whether he would accept reputed offers to head large business firms or become a corporation lawyer.

From New York came word that Johnson was busy applying the finishing touches to a story of his hectic life. The autobiography, supposedly written in recent weeks, is due to reach a publisher at once.

Mr. Roosevelt talked with Richberg for more than an hour, Stephen Early, of the White House secretariat, later declared they discussed plans to reorganize NRA into three distinct branches—legislative, administrative and judiciary.

Richberg himself was noncommital when he emerged from his chat with the President. He grinned broadly when a reporter asked if he would head the new NRA, but the question went unanswered.

Earlier, at a press conference, the President indicated the reshaping of the recovery machinery would be an evolutionary process, to be undertaken deliberately and gradually. He reported several of the Administration high command would be consulted.

Friends Expected to Go.

An exodus of many of Johnson's friends probably will begin shortly. First on the list of those expected to quit is his secretary, Miss Frances Robinson, who has been much in the public eye as she accompanied him about the country.

Other NRA executives likely to resign include Col. George A. Lynch, George Buckley, A. R. Glancey and C. E. Adams. In addition, Leon Henderson, research and planning chief, and Blackwell Smith, acting chief counsel, tendered their resignations to Johnson several weeks ago. It is possible they will be prevailed upon to stay.

Col. Lynch is on a leave of absence from the Army. He is due

Heard Kidnap Plot, Former Convict Says

Hauptmann Was There, Is Belief of Beggar Arrested in N. Y.

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—A former Welfare Island prisoner, who told detectives he had heard the Lindbergh baby kidnaping planned in a New Jersey speakeasy before his arrest, was rushed to police headquarters tonight by detectives who said they expected another "important break" in the case in the next 24 hours.

The prisoner was reported to have told the detectives the two men he heard plotting the crime were named "Bauer and Kaupman." He now believes the man he knew as Kaupman was Bruno Richard Hauptmann, indicted today for extortion in the case.

Detectives identified the man being questioned as George Fitzgerald, 50, and homeless. He was arrested in a park tonight for soliciting alms.

When he told his story he was hurried from night court to police headquarters, where he was closeted with police officials.

Location of the New Jersey speakeasy where the plotting allegedly occurred was not revealed.

Fitzgerald was sentenced to Welfare Island for burglary. He is free on parole.

Riding to night court, he turned to a patrolman and said:

"Will you give me a break if I give you a break in the Lindbergh case?"

Suspect Fleeing Country Hunted

Chartered Tug to Catch Liner; $840 Ransom Bills, Pistol Found.

By Francis A. Jamieson.
(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

New York, Sept. 26.—Indicted for extortion after Col. Charles A. Lindbergh had appeared today before the Bronx County grand jury and told of his futile $50,000 ransom payment, Bruno Richard Hauptmann will be arraigned tomorrow on the charge growing out of the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby, and his attorney said, will plead not guilty.

Hauptmann will be arraigned in the Bronx County Court and it is possible a date for his trial will be set. Within a week it is expected authorities will have decided whether to try the alien former convict on the extortion charges or extradite him to New Jersey for trial on kidnaping and murder charges.

Bail would be set after the plea. District Attorney Samuel Foley would not say how high a bail would be asked, but indicated it would be a large sum.

Other Developments.

Meanwhile, more ransom bills and a small-caliber revolver, loaded, were found cached in secret cubbyholes of Hauptmann's garage.

Coincident with the finding of the money and revolver, there were two further developments.

1. Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan, of the New York police, disclosed he was seeking information about a man possessing a huge roll of bills who chartered a tug to catch the North German Lloyd liner Columbus when it sailed down the bay Saturday.

2. J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, indicated in Washington he looked for further arrests in the case.

Detective Assigned to Clew.

Linked to the Columbus sailing, Sullivan cabled Detective Arthur Johnson information reported to have a highly important connection with the case. Johnson, who has been in Europe on another case, was instructed to proceed to an unnamed city to await further orders.

It was at once conjectured whether Johnson was sent to Bremen, where the Columbus is due to dock, or to Leipzig, where the body of Isadore Fisch is buried. Fisch was a close friend of Hauptmann. The latter has declared steadfastly since his arrest that the ransom bills were found in Fisch's possessions, left at the Hauptmann home when he sailed for Germany. Fisch died suddenly in Leipzig. It has been thought likely his body would be exhumed to determine if he met a violent death.

Department of Justice agents have assured that "by no means" are they through with the Fisch-Hauptmann connection.

Army Downs Mexico Again At Polo, 12-8

Second Victory Gives U. S. Series; Invaders Lack Team Play.

By John R. Vosburgh.

The steady click-click of a special telegraph wire flashed through 3,000 miles of space late yesterday afternoon to tell the Mexican people that their fighting Army polo team had fallen before the Americans.

To the waiting thousands of the southern republic, the news of the 12-to-8 victory, which the finest poloists of the United States Army won over the invading Mexicans, at West Potomac Park, was disheartening. It meant the failure of their second attempt for an international polo conquest inside of a year.

The American triumph was the second of a series for the best two out of three games, coming after an 11-to-6 United States victory in the opening match. The United States took two out of three games in a similar series in Mexico City last spring.

But to the 10,000 spectators it left the impression that their neighbors from across the Rio Grande are game and gallant sportsmen. The silver-helmeted invaders were battling against almost hopeless odds. Coming from a country where polo is a newer sport than baseball is in Japan, they were facing a team of which three members have been playing the game for at least 15 years, and the fourth a rough-and-ready youngster who takes to the sport like a duck to water.

Superb, daring and dashing horsemen, the Mexicans have yet to master the knack of team play. They have yet to realize the vital significance of the passing game; the importance of covering up on the defense. They were defeated because they were drawn out of position, lured into costly faults by the vet-

Ickes Warns He May Refuse District Loan

Demands Faster Work on $8,000,000 Sewage Disposal Plant.

Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior and boss of the Public Works Administration, yesterday sharply warned the District Commissioners he might not lend them $8,000,000 for construction of a sewage disposal plant.

In a letter bristling with criticism of the District, Secretary Ickes put Col. Daniel I. Sultan, newly named District Engineer Commissioner, "on the spot."

Unless District officials gave him definite assurances the work on the sewage disposal plant would be begun soon and pushed fast to completion he would revoke his approval of the $8,000,000 loan which Congress, by special act, authorized him to make, Secretary Ickes said in his letter to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners.

Sultan Is Silent.

Col. Sultan was irascible when asked for a comment on Secretary Ickes' letter.

"I haven't seen it," he said. "I certainly am not going to make any comment on such a complicated matter until I have had time to study the letter and the whole proposition."

Several weeks ago Secretary Ickes transmitted to the Commissioners a contract. Terms of the contract were regarded as severe, inasmuch as they took major control of the project away from the Commissioners and reposed it in PWA.

This contract was signed by the Commissioners and returned to PWA, together with a copy of a letter to Comptroller General McCarl. The letter to the Comptroller

Doctors Accused Of Selling Babies To Get Their Fees

Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 26 (AP). Charges that physicians were selling babies to obtain compensation for themselves and for hospitals in maternity cases were made to the Governor's council today by Elizabeth Owens, of the State department of social welfare.

Miss Owens said several complaints of a baby market in the State have come to her attention.

In most instances, she said, the mothers were poor. For the most part, Miss Owens said, the babies were adopted in the method provided by law and the money was paid secretly to the doctor or hospital in exchange for release of the children signed by the mothers.

Missing Girl Is Sought In Vermont Mountains

Bennington, Vt., Sept. 26 (AP). Officials today pressed their search for 16-year-old Katherine Kearns, missing since September 10, in the mountains near her home community on the theory that she had wandered into them and became lost.

They based their belief on information given them by Mrs. George Bush, wife of a local hotel manager, who said she saw the girl in nearby Williamstown during the week she was reported missing. Other persons also told them, officials said, they had seen the girl in Bennington at approximately the same time.

Navy Supply Officer Found Shot to Death

Bremerton, Wash., Sept. 26 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. John B. Daniels, 47, of the Naval Supply Corps, was found shot to death in the cabin of the Navy fuel ship Ramapo here today. A service revolver lay nearby.

Investigating officers expressed the opinion he had killed himself. His widow and a 16-year-old son are in San Diego.

Philippine Cabinet Approves Tariff Rise

Manila, Philippine Islands, Sept. 26 (AP).—A tariff bill raising rates to protect Philippine-American commerce was approved today by the insular cabinet. It is expected to be submitted to the Legislature in a few days.

The proposals have drawn criticism from Japanese interests and are being considered by the United States Government to determine their probable effect on trade and international relations.

Democrats Hail New Deal At N. Y. Rally

Its Perfecting Pledged by Senator Wagner in N. Y. Keynote Talk.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 26 (AP).—The Empire State Democracy, with Postmaster General James A. Farley again heading its ruling committee, heard its leaders call today for an "overwhelming confirmation" of the New Deal and victory over "utility-minded" Republican opposition.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, in the State convention keynote address, termed the Roosevelt Administration policies the single issue in both State and Nation and added:

"We pledge, not a reversal of policy, but the perfecting of the New Deal."

With thunderous applause for Senator Wagner's speech still ringing in their ears, the delegates heard Mayor John Boyd Thacher of Albany challenge Republicans to "answer before November 6" the charges of their own State chairman that utility interests "dominated" the controlling "Old Guard" factions.

Virtually agreed on renominating the entire slate of State officers, there remained for the convention only drafting of the platform and a decision whether the party would nominate two candidates for court of appeals vacancies. It has been the custom to indorse a Republican for one vacancy.

Postmaster General Farley was reelected State chairman at a meeting of the committee just before the convention opened. Previously Gov. Herbert H. Lehman announced he had asked Farley again to take the place despite his expressed desire to retire and devote his full time to other duties.

Senator Wagner's keynote address summarized in glowing terms the record of the Roosevelt Administration.

Board Invokes Securities Act In B.M.T. Deal

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

A controversy which may become the basis of the first court test of the validity of the stock market control act was aroused yesterday when the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission rejected an application for the temprary registration on the New York Stock Exchange of a Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation $8,000,000 bond issue pending a hearing.

The hearing was scheduled for October 3, when, according to the commission's formal statement, "an opportunity will be afforded to the issuer and to the New York Stock Echange to appear and show cause why registration should not be permanently denied."

The B. M. T. case, which has aroused widespread interest in Wall Street and other financial centers, is regarded by persons close to the securities commission as a test not only of the power of Congress to bring under Federal control purely intrastate transactions on stock exchanges, but also of the effectiveness of the 1933 securities act.

Failed to File Data.

The controversy has developed from the failure of the B. M. T., a New York traction company, to file a registration statement for the $8,000,000 bond issue which was offered privately last June. The traction company took the stand that under an amendment made to the 1933 securities act last June it was not required to file a registration statement. Subsequently the company had the bonds listed on the "big board" in New York.

This security issue has been the

Crater Lake Park Chief Dismissed

Two Others Also Dropped in PWA 'Irregularities.'

The National Park Service yesterday confirmed reports that Elbert Solinski, suspended several monts ago as superintendent of Crater Lake National Park, had been dismissed, the Associated Press reports.

Andrew R. Edwin, chief clerk at the park, and Isaac Davison, construction superintendent on the Public Works project, were suspended at the same time, and park officials said they also have been dismissed.

The suspensions were ordered prior to an investigation of alleged irregularities in connection with a Public Works project. Park officials said the former chief forester would serve as acting superintendent.

Body of Strangled Child Found In Trunk on Her 11th Birthday

Detroit, Sept. 26 (AP).—Criminally assaulted, strangled and her head crushed by a blow from a hammer, Lillian Gallaher's body was found today, her eleventh birthday, stuffed into a small trunk in an apartment six blocks from the home where she had been missing since Thursday.

The stained hammer was found this afternoon in the apartment, which had been occupied since July 10 by a couple registered as Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Goodrich, respectively about 25 and 26 years old.

Late today, a man who answered Goodrich's appearance was detained briefly in Adrian, Mich., until he established his identity.

With his release, Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich—the former said by police to have been committed to an Ohio asylum after molesting women and girls in Youngstown, Ohio—became the objects of a search even more intensive than the one for the child.

Miss Gertrude Berg, a tenant in the apartment building, today revealed she saw Lillian enter the Goodrich apartment about 6:45 p. m. Thursday, and that she saw two men through the opened door. At the time Lillian was selling chances on a punch board for the benefit of her school.

In the Goodrich apartment today, police found numerous pencil sketches. Police said many of them were obscene and that a few pictured a small girl with tears on her face. The name "M. W. Goodrich" was written on a folder inclosing some of the drawings.

The child's head was bound in a towel, which also was forced into the mouth as a gag. The hands were tied with a heavy cord and the body was doubled up in the trunk.

A bag of candy was found in the room. This, police said, indicated Lillian might have been lured there, instead of knocking at the door with the punchboard.

Lillian's mother and father—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gallaher—and her two sisters and brother were stunned by the child's fate.

Only Clayton Gallaher, the elder brother, was able to speak.

"If I could get my hands on that fellow, just once——" he said. And then, "I hope she died suddenly; that she wasn't tortured."

Clyde Burgess, the janitor, said Goodrich was seen about the apartment house Saturday. Police advanced that as an indication Lillian might have been held a prisoner there for many hours, perhaps days, before she was killed.

Cardinal Gets Extortion Note

Escaped Insane Man Demands $50,000 From Philadelphia Prelate.

Philadelphia, Sept. 26 (AP).—A $50,000 extortion demand was made today in a letter to Cardinal Dougherty, and with its receipt authorities learned that a man who made a similar demand a year ago has escaped from the Philadelphia Hospital for Mental Diseases.

The letter received today, authorities said, bore the signature of George Havidich, the man who was sent to the Philadelphia mental institution last September after the cardinal received a demand for $50,000. Diocesan officials opened today's letter in the absence of the cardinal.

How Havidich escaped from the hospital was not disclosed. Assistant United States Attorney Thomas Reilly assigned agents to hunt for the man.

After Cardinal Dougherty had received the first letter last year, Havidich was captured while he crouched in the shrubbery on the cardinal's estate in Merion. Arraigned in Federal court, he was examined by Government physicians and found to be insane.

150,000 Homeless in Floods.

Kaifseng, Honan, China, Sept. 28 (AP).—Flood waters in south Honan Province have covered 650 square miles and made 150,000 homeless, a provincial investigator reported today.

Balloon Race Won by Poland

May Get First 3 Places; U. S. Navy Bag in Sixth.

Warsaw, Sept. 26 (AP).—Poland, playing host to the twenty-second annual Gordon Bennett balloon race, tonight apparently had swept honors in that competition.

Official results will be delayed several days, it was announced, pending the arrival of the balloonists' landing books.

It was believed the Polish "Warszawa" (Warsaw), manned by Z. Burznski and J. Zakrzewski, which landed near Riazan, Russia, was the winner, having covered approximately 750 miles.

The Kosciuszko, piloted by Capt. Franciszek Hynek, which landed near Voronezh, Russia, was believed second.

The Polish balloon, the Polonja, burst and fell into a lake north of Helsingfors, Finland. Its chances for third place were believed good.

All 16 of the entries which soared away from Warsaw Sunday had been reported tonight.

Sixth place, it was believed, would fall to the United States Navy balloon, piloted by Lieuts. C. H. Kendall and H. T. Orville, which came down near Smolensk, Russia, approximately 620 miles from Warsaw.

Some Hog, $400; None, $1,000; But It's a Fish Tale to Wallace

If you raised hogs, you made $400 a year. If you didn't raise hogs, the Government paid you $1,000.

Mr. E. J. Bischoffberger, of Freedom, Pa., had been listening to the radio. Mr. Bischoffberger heard this story, and it bewildered him.

"This is no way to run a government," said Mr. Bischoffberger to himself. "How can such things be?"

A Mrs. Scranton, of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, speaking on the radio, recited the now-familiar story, which goes like this: A farmer raises hogs every year for 40 years, becoming more or less adept at the work, and averages $400 a year from their sale. Under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, he is paid $1,000 if he relaxes completely, raising no hogs whatsoever.

Mrs. Scranton's speech stirred Mr. Bischoffberger to action. He took pen in hand and dashed off a full report on the whole thing for Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Secretary Wallace digested the letter and was likewise stirred.

"This is a preposterous hoax," wrote Mr. Wallace, among other things, "and this mysterious farmer is one of the most familiar ghosts of the recovery program. Your complete skepticism about the truth of this story, Mr. Bischoffberger, is justified by my inquiries about it."

Secretary Wallace then unbosomed himself of considerable accumulated resentment on the Epic of the Relaxed New Deal Hog-Raiser.

"On about August 1 of this year," he said, "a Boston bond house gave out a letter signed B. H. H., purporting to have been written from Long Meadow, Mass., stating that a Mr. Blank, of Northampton, had received a Government check for $1,000 for not raising hogs and that this Mr. Blank had been raising hogs for about 40 years and had never made more than $400 per year. The charge, obviously intended to mislead city people about the corn-hog program, was published later in newspapers in New York and Detroit.

"Letters, almost identically worded, appeared in Chicago, this time signed G. M., about a farmer with an identical experience in Delevan, Wis.

"On August 24, a Louisiana newspaper published a similar letter, signed 'Octave Broussard,' about a

Credit Frozen By New Deal, Fletcher Says

Business Uncertainty Laid to Monetary Policies of Roosevelt.

Contending that the Roosevelt Administration is responsible for the "stagnation of credit," Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National committee, last night in a formal statement struck out against the fiscal and monetary policies of the "New Deal."

Pointing out that "uncertainty hangs over business like a pall," Mr. Fletcher asserted that unwarranted requirements by the RFC was the reason that only 4 per cent of the money Congress authorized it to lend to industry has been allocated under approved applications.

He added that at the same time the "New Deal" is "draining private credit to finance itself" and asserted that "fear of a further and disastrous inflation is daily becoming more acute." He argued the President had failed to carry out his first pledges to put the Nation's financial house in order and that as long as there is uncertainty in Washington business "can not pick up and go ahead."

Raps Financial Policies.

"The way our Government finances are conducted, with double bookkeeping, shifting money policies, pegging the market for Government bonds, official speculation in foreign exchange makes one think that the money changers have been driven out of Wall Street into the United States Treasury," Mr. Fletcher asserted.

He started his statement by observing that "one of the most serious problems is the stagnation of credit" and that "responsibility for this condition rests squarely upon the administration."

"Both President Roosevelt and Chairman Jones of the RFC," he continued, "have belabored bankers and credit agencies for not lending money, for not stimulating the economic system with ready credit. At the same time they have taken steps which have frozen credit and makes lending and borrowing next to impossible.

"Draining Private Credit."

"In the last days of the past session of Congress, $300,000,000 was appropriated to provide Government credit for small industries that supposedly could not obtain money through normal credit channels. Today, some three months after the enactment of the law, only 160 applications, totalling $11,537,000 or about 4 per cent of the money available have been approved.

"Sometime ago, Mr. Jesse Jones threatened bankers with Government lending if they did not immediately get wise and pursue a liberal lending policy. The loans-to-industry act is Government lending but borrowers are finding its terms harder than those of our banks.

"In addition to the uncertainty which hangs over business like a pall, one reason why only 4 per cent of this money has been lent is found in the terms of the applications for loans. Like the unlucky farmers who have been forced to mortgage their future and place themselves utterly at the mercy and discretion of the desk farmers, Messrs. Wallace and Tugwell and company, to obtain drought and crop-reduction benefits—the man who applies for an industrial loan must sign and swear submission to all regulations, edicts, Executive orders, now existing, or which may be devised in the future, and he must also agree to patronize only the firms, corporations and individuals who in the opinion of our lords and masters are under the wings of the Blue Eagle.

"At the same time the New Deal is draining private credit to finance itself. The fear of further and disastrous inflation is becoming more acute every day. The President so far has given no indication that he will put our financial house in order by the economy he promised at the beginning of his term, by balancing the budget and by stopping the drain on our National credit. The only real cure of unemployment is reemployment of our workers by business and not by Government-made work, no matter how laudable may be the intention of the latter in the way of relief, and business can not pick up and go ahead when the only certainty is uncertainty at Washington."

River Grass Held State's Property

Farmers, Stockmen Told Neither Owns Forage.

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 26 (AP).—Farmers and stockmen who were reported to have drawn guns in disputes over rights to graze cattle on grass in the Arkansas River bed were informed today that none of them is entitled to the forage. It belongs to the State. The grass grew this summer when the stream stopped, except for the underground flow.

Farmers living adjacent to the river bed pastured it. Some cut the grass and hauled it away, claiming riparian rights. Stockmen from a distance drove their cattle to the river bed on the theory it is a public domain.

Walter Griffin, Assistant Attorney General, ruled today that as the river is a navigable stream, its bed and any products belong to the State. Franklin said the matter will remain in statu quo unless serious trouble develops between the disputants.

President Roosevelt, returning from a stay at Hyde Park, was in a jovial mood despite pressing problems that face him. He professed concern over the possibility some one might notice the seasonal lateness of his straw hat.

to return to the service November 1, but so far has received no new assignment.

Richberg Clarifies Attitude.

In the Fortune article Richberg made clear his attitude on a number of issues confronting NRA. He summed up his views in these words:

"It is not less law but more and better law that is needed to establish an adequate industrial law and order and to promote our economic welfare. The opportunity has been presented to American business to write and to administer a large part of such industrial law with a minimum of political control, through codes of fair competition—so long as that opportunity is recognized and accepted as involving a public service and not as providing only the means of self-service.

"The NRA has prepared and pointed the way. That way lie individual freedom and security. Any other course will lead back toward chaos or on toward state socialism."

Price Policy Discussed.

Concerning price policy, Richberg wrote:

"Who can be intrusted with the power to fix a fair price that will insure justice to labor, investor and consumer? The answer is, no one; neither a private association nor a board of public officials.

"There is no fair price that does not depend upon the fairness of material and production and distribution costs and a fair return upon investment. But the fairness of each cost depends upon what is a fair remuneration for services employed and properly used.

"What test of fairness can we apply except the competition between willing sellers and buyers in a free market? * * *

"Yet, in the face of this fundamental problem of a socialistic economy which they abhor, business men continually seek to experiment with production controls and price-fixing devices, and thus somewhat unconsciously to develop through trade associations a sort of lopsided guild socialism which they misname 'price stabilization.'

"They rush in where wiser opponents of state socialism fear to tread."

Plans for NRA Likely Subject For Roosevelt

last of the chamber's questions, which read: "Is it the policy of the Administration to continue the construction and development of public works not now needed?" None of the others, however, was phrased with such an implication.

While the President thus returned from his month's vacation at Hyde Park outwardly unimpressed by the qualms of business leaders, the American Federation of Labor yesterday put out a statement by William Green, president, estimating the number of jobless in mid-August at 10,834,000, as compared with 10,793,000 in July.

Declaring there is no indication the fall season will bring any permanent improvement, Mr. Green said:

"August and September this year show a strong contrast to the same months last year. In August last year, 800,000 went back to work in the President's reemployment program; this year no effort was made to create jobs and unemployment increased by 40,000."

This statement strengthened belief the A. F. of L. will intensify its drive for a shorter work week through revision of NRA codes. There has been some talk, but no confirmation, that the President would deal with this subject in his radio address, possibly appealing for another cut in work hours.

Many Conferences.

Back again at the White House, which is still topsy-turvy because of building operations on the Executive offices, the President began his day with a press conference and then plunged into a series of conferences that lasted until nightfall. He arrived after an overnight trip from Hyde Park clad in a light, double-breasted panama suit and still wearing a straw hat.

During the day he called in Donald R. Richberg for a discussion of the NRA, and also talked with James A. Moffett, Federal housing administrator; Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the stock exchange commission; Secretary of Interior Ickes, Secretary of War Dern, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, and others.

Knox Declares Public's Fears Bar Recovery

Chicago Publisher Raps Roosevelt View That Confidence Is Back.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 26 (AP).—Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, said tonight that the "present state of public mind" is an "absolute bar to recovery."

Speaking before the Dane County Republican Club, Knox took sharp issue with President Roosevelt's Green Bay, Wis., speech, in which the Chief Executive said that confidence had returned to the country.

"The people are consumed with fear lest, in the presence of failure, resort be made in the future to measures more radical than any that have been tried in the past," the publisher asserted.

"The President was wrong in his attitude in his Green Bay speech, and everything which has transpired since then proves it.

"Unrest * * * has increased among the farmers to a point where some of the radical legislation, including the infamous Bankhead act, is about to be suspended by Executive order.

"The Government bond market, reflecting Government credit, has steadily weakened.

"Business, measured by every index, is at lower levels than it was a year ago.

"The number of unemployed has increased, and private financing of business enterprise has shown no improvement."

Knox declared there exists "a state of alarm, bewilderment, and uncertainty which is growing in the public mind daily."

As to Republican prospects in the November Congressional elections, Knox said "it is probably too early to expect a reversal of opinion, distraught as the people are, sufficien. to effect a change of control in either House of Congress."

He called the fall election "merely an outpost affair," with the "main engagement" due to come in 1936.

Easy Hog Money Denied by Wallace similar farmer, this time named Boudreaux, from the Terrebonne Parish.

"On September 14, Senator L. J. Dickinson, in a speech at Daukon, Iowa, repeated the substance of the story identically as an experience of one of his friends.

"At the same time I received your letter I had one from Minneapolis relating the same tale."

Stories False, He Says.

Complete investigation disproves every one of these stories, said the Secretary, who declared that "such a contract signer as described in those letters does not exist in any State, except the state of the imagination."

Hog payments are made at the rate of $5 a head on 75 per cent of the average number of hogs produced for market by the contract signer during 1932-33, Secretary Wallace explained.

"Thus, three-fourths of the average hog production for any farmer who received $1,000 would be aprixomately 200 head of hogs. The only way that any corn-hog signer, not raising enough hogs to bring him more than $400 in any one year, could get a $1,000 check would be by enormous overstatement of his past production, by defrauding his Government and neighbors.

"Every corn-hog signer knows that his benefit payment is based upon records of past averages of production, checked by the county committee, rechecked by the State committees and finally rechecked in Washington.

"The story is evidently inspired to inflame the people of the cities against the farmers, who are receiving under the present program, for the first time in a dozen years, fair play.

"I do not believe the people will be influenced by fictitious stories obviously inspired by those who for personal or political reasons wish the farm program to fail," concluded the Secretary.

And there you are, Mr. Bischoffberger.

Hastings Raps Campaign Book Of Democrats

Terms It 'Funeral Prayer for Party;' Charges Inaccuracies.

(Associated Press.)

The "funeral prayer for the Democratic party" was the description applied yesterday by Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, to the Democratic campaign booklet issued by the party's National committee, the handbook for the guidance of Democratic candidates made the New Deal the issue for the November elections.

Declaring the handbook to be a "tissue of inaccuracies," Hastings, cochairman of the Republican Senatorial-Congressional committee, in a formal statement said:

"If the booklet is a demonstration of the reliability of the statements contained in it, then the Democratic party has degenerated into one of pure deception.

"The committee has the effrontery to declare that the Democratic platform pledges have been faithfully kept. The whole world knows that these promises have not been kept, but that an entirely new and unheard-of program, wholly outside the party's covenant to the people, has been adopted. * * *

"Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau is quoted as saying that the cost of the New Deal up to June 30, 1935, will not exceed $8,000,000,000 and in the same pamphlet the late Speaker of the House, Henry T. Rainey, is quoted as an authority that it will not cost more than $15,000,000,000.

"Secretary Ickes says there is no pork barrel in PWA when everybody knows that New Deal candidates throughout the country are brazenly talking as they did in Maine that they got public funds and will get more for their localities—providing they are elected.

"There is even a general statement that the Roosevelt Administration has kept partisan politics out of the recovery program. This is a ludicrous statement and everyone knows it."

Results of Red Pact Pleasing to Roosevelt

President Roosevelt apparently holds the opinion that a satisfactory solution will yet be worked out in the debt negotiations with the Soviet government.

In reply to an inquiry at the press conference yesterday, the President said he is not disappointed with results of recognition of Russia. He added that he has not been informed of recent developments in the negotiations.

Between You and Me

Mr. Roosevelt No Ostrich—Fight on Moffett Confirmation—Charles West in Town.

By Raymond Clapper

NO ONE should be misled by the way President Roosevelt pokes fun at some groups of business men who are appealing to him for public word which will improve confidence. He may tell them to quit seeing things under the bed and he may say that the New Deal team, of which he once described himself as quarterback, is still scoring.

But that is a superficial and misleading picture. Mr. Roosevelt is merely refusing to be put on the spot for cross-examination. He particularly resents the questionnaire by the United States Chamber of Commerce. It was not preceded by the usual referendum which the chamber takes before adopting policies. The chamber made its questions to the President public before Mr. Roosevelt had a chance to study them. That, as the case of Col. Lindbergh's letter during the air-mail investigation, has caused resentment in Administration quarters.

Mr. Roosevelt is no ostrich. He knows that fear is a real and contagious thing and that business men generally are not as optimistic as they should be. Unemployment is almost as bad as a year ago except that the Federal Treasury is supporting about 2,250,000 persons on emergency work. Administration leaders know they need the help of private industry to pull the hill and they are quietly setting about to encourage it. Business men are being told individually and in groups that the Administration has no designs on reasonable profit. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to follow this up in his own words and in his own way in the very near future.

There will be a storm over the forthcoming book by Secretary Wallace which will be construed as a left-wing pronouncement, and it will increase the clamor for his scalp. But actions, more than words, will be the key to the Administration policy in the immediate future, and these will point toward winning support on the right-hand side.

* * * *

Certain Senators are trying to interest their colleagues in a fight against confirmation of James A. Moffet, former Standard Oil executive, as Federal Housing administrator. Some are moved by the fact that he has appointed business men rather than politicians to State directorships, but the ostensible grievance is that the interest rate under the FHA plan figures up over 9 per cent. Mr. Moffet says the banks won't lend at less, and the echo on Capitol Hill next winter will be "Is that so?"

There's a new candidate for director of the budget in town—Representatives Charles West, of Ohio. Tall, silent profressor type, he lost his seat in the House when he became the unsuccessful pro-Administration primary candidate for Senator in Ohio. His friends insist he be taken care of. They recommend him for the job which Lew Douglas gave up, because he served on the House Ways and Means Committee and once taught political science at Harvard.

One effect of AAA and other relief payments is reported in automobile sales in farm States. Last month's figures on Fords were up 88 to 366 per cent over August of last year. Arizona registered 62 last month, as against 23 in August, 1933; Montana, 302 against 93; drought-tricken South Dakota, 75, against 29, and Georgia, cotton kingdom, 312, against 143.

2 Burn to Death As Mine Blazes

Bodies Are Recovered at Bluefield, W. Va.

Bluefield, W. Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—The bodies of two miners, trapped in the hot air behind a raging wall of fire, were recovered from the Excelsior Red Ash Co.'s mine at Raven, Va., last night.

They were John Horton, 30, and Caswell Hess, both married.

Their bodies were found by rescue crews, 200 feet behind the wall of flame. Rescue crews dragged the bodies 3,000 feet through a narrow air shaft to the surface.

Quick Action Urged on U. S. Mortgage Plan

It Should Have Preceded House Renovation Drive, Says Counsel.

The mortgage stabilization program of the Federal housing program should have preceded the house-renovation drive, Marvin Farrington, counsel for the Home Owners' Protective Association, said here last night in a radio talk.

The renovation campaign has been under way for several weeks, but housing officials have announced the mortgage stabilization plan will not be brought forward for several months, due to its complicated nature.

"It should not be hard to understand the stark reality now confronting millions of home owners," Farrington said, "who have thus far met all mortgage and tax obligations, but who now face maturing mortgages with exhausted reserves and without refinancing resources.

"A selling campaign is not required to impress upon them the need of repair. They know it better than the housing administration. They do not need urging either from lending agencies or building contractors to protect the home from the ravages of disrepair. For 80 per cent the home is the family's only adventure in property ownership, the treasury of its saving and priceless associations.

"But no selling campaign can, or should, persuade these families to use savings or credit essential to self-protection until the danger of losing the home is removed.

"This reality is the basis of our conviction that the mortgage stabilization feature of the housing act should have gone ahead of and blazed the trail for the program of modernization and repair. It is our hope that this provision will be brought into action quickly and that it will be effectively linked with the repair campaign."

Manhunt Starts For Gunman in Raid Shooting

U. S. Agent, Ambush Victim, Fights for Life in Hospital Here.

One of the greatest man hunts in the history of southern Maryland was under way last night for an unidentified man who shot and wounded seriously Cyril Thomas, Internal Revenue agent, late Tuesday during a raid on a moonshiners' camp in the swampy area near Forrestville.

Officials expected hourly to arrest the gunman, who apparently fired from a thicket. Fifty buckshot tore into Thomas' body and physicians at Providence Hospital described his condition as critical.

While Thomas fought for his life yesterday, Federal agents arrested Wallace Armstrong, of Forestville, and three colored men, who were being held in the Marlboro Jail for investigation in the case. The colored men are brothers—John, Edward and Kelly Barnes. All were seized near Forestville.

Washington police broadcast a general lookout warning calling for the arrest of another man with three local addresses, who is wanted in connection with both the Forestville shooting and the wounding of Motorcycle Patrolman S. T. Creech, shot the same night, when he tried to stop a speeding automobile on the Pennsylvania avenue bridge.

The link between the two shootings was not made public.

U. S. Agents Aid Hunt.

The sought-for man is described as having light skin, and as 5 feet 9 inches in height and weighing about 150 pounds.

One of the Barnes trio was arrested at the still by Thomas and Revenue Agent L. J. Nay, who entered the swamp, half a mile from the Marlboro pike.

They approached two colored men who were loading whisky into an automobile and captured one, handcuffing him to a tree. They then gave chase to the other. Thomas was shot from behind during the chase by some one evidently concealed.

Federal agents from Baltimore and the surrounding territory were participating in the manhunt through the swampy ground and in all the villages near Forestville. They are holding their three suspects merely for investigation, they pointed out last night.

Creech, patrolling Pennsylvania avenue southeast, noticed a car occupied by two colored men speeding toward the bridge Tuesday night and gave chase, motioning to the driver to halt.

As the driver entered the bridge he swerved, forced Creech to the curb, made a U turn and started back toward Maryland. His companion climbed into the rear seat and fired at the policeman. Creech returned his fire.

Blood-Stained Auto Found.

A bullet smashed into Creech's shoulder and another shattered the headlight on his motorcycle. Policeman Raymond V. Sinclair joined Creech, but both officers lost the speeding automobile.

An abandoned blood-stained automobile, found near Oxon Hill, Md., was believed by police to be the one in which the men made their getaway from Creech. It was brought to headquarters here yesterday.

At Emergency Hospital, where Creech was taken, physicians said his condition was not serious.

In the raid near Forestville the Federal agents obtained 2,000 gallons of mash, a 600-gallon still, 50 gallons of whisky and a 15-horsepower steam boiler.

The raid produced one of the largest hauls since prohibition was repealed in the Forestville section.

Glider Airmen Try 50 Flights

Low Clouds Still Hamper Flyers in Virginia, Records Left Alone.

Big Meadows, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—Glider pilots made 50 flights in their motorless ships here today as the best weather conditions since the start of the meet prevailed. No attempts to break endurance, distance or altitude records were made. Low-lying clouds continued to hamper the pilots. All machines went through the fog bank, however, and were out of sight at the peak on each hop.

Don Stevens, of New Jersey, was the first pilot to make a successful landing at the spot from which he took off.

Lloyd Fish, of Washington, who took his glider into the air today, said: "We are getting acquainted with the field so that we shall know the best points for developments. The field is the best I have ever seen and lacks only one thing the others have, that is development."

The Washington Glider Club, of which Fish is a member, is planning to leave its equipment at the camp this year. Officials of the society stressed the value of glider flights as training for war-time aviators. They said glider pilots would become effective war pilots in a few hours.

Widespread Ship Strike Threatened in Japan

Kobe, Japan, Sept. 26 (AP).—A strike which threatened to tie up Japan's largest steamship lines, including transpacific ones, was ordered today unless the companies accept demands of the seamen's union. Higher wages, better rations, larger crews and special wage scales for engine-room crews are objects of the proposed walkout.

If all union members obey the call, their leaders estimated 1,230,000 tons of shipping, belonging to nearly every major line in Japan, will be affected.

District's Loan May Be Denied, Ickes' Warning

Demands Faster Work on $8,000,000 Sewage Disposal Plant.

General dealt with technicalities which District officials were unable to iron out in the course of many conferences with PWA officials.

These questions involved when and on what amount interest became due; whether the whole $8,000,00 should be deposited to the credit of the District at one time; whether, if the whole $8,000,000 was lent to the District in a lump, it would be necessary to obligate expenditure of it within the fiscal year, and some other technical questions.

Blunt criticism of the construction plan contemplated by District officials was expressed by Secretary Ickes. Plans call for completion of the $8,000,000 project in four years.

"I am advised," Secretary Ickes said, "that the period of construction should not require such length of time. I am further advised that even with the plans in their present incomplete stage, the preparation of plans and specifications sufficient to begin construction should not require more than a few months."

Cites Authorization.

PWA, the Secretary said, has been willing to lend the District $8,000,000, "notwithstanding that the Commissioners are unable to offer as evidence of the loan notes, bonds or other marketable obligations, although all other applicants for loans from the Public Works Administration are required to evidence loans made to them by such commercial paper."

The District, a high official pointed out, is the only large city in the world not in debt.

"I do not want to quarrel with Secretary Ickes," he said, "but it should be remembered that the Congress of the United States, which governs the National Capital, enacted a special law authorizing these loans. The Congress of the United States, after taking into consideration all of the many factors involved, set down the terms of repayment and interest. These terms were not prescribed by District officials nor voted upon by District residents. Secretary Ickes' inference that the loan might not be repaid is a matter of no concern to him nor to us. The responsibility rests with Congress."

Ickes Hits Delay.

The "preferential treatment" provided for the District, Secretary Ickes said in his letter, "can not be extended to a point where the fundamental purpose of Title II of the National industrial recovery act will be defeated. That purpose is to increase employment quickly.

"It does not seem that the present schedule of the District fulfills this purpose by putting men to work on the sewage disposal plant in the near future.

"The Public Works Administration has allotted almost all funds at its disposal. There is no money available for many projects of unquestioned social and economic desirability on which construction can be commenced immediately and men put to work without delay.

Calls for New Plans.

"I must, therefore, decline to execute the proposed agreement until I receive assurances from the Commissioners of the District of their intention to submit for approval of the Public Works Administration before January 1, 1935, detailed estimates of cost in order that the cost of the sewage disposal plant may be definitely determined, and sufficient plans to commence construction during the coming winter and of their intention to submit the remaining plans in such time that the plant can be in operation by the fall of 1936, or unless I am furnished a satisfactory reason why this can not be done."

Whether District officials will revise their plans for construction of the sewage disposal plant is not known. Use of certain machinery on which patents still are running is involved. The corporation holding the patents, which would expire before completion of the plant as contemplated, has offered to settle for $200,000.

Having yielded to the Public Works Administrator on every point he has raised so far, the District Commissioners are expected to exert every effort to comply with the latest demands.

Snake Let Loose, Causes Panic in Maryland School

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.). A black snake 5 feet 2 inches long was let loose in the assembly hall of Allegany High School yesterday and caused commotion among the thousand or more students.

The reptile crawled along the floor and into the lap of one of the students. In the excitement the snake disappeared and has not been located.

It is reported that five boys accused of bringing the snake into school have been suspended pending an investigation.

Blast Followed Fire on Liner, Inquiry Is Told

Ship Sometimes Carried Ammunition as Cargo, Officer Says.

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Testimony that a terrific explosion occurred during the fire that swept the Morro Castle with a loss of 132 lives was offered today by Howard Hansen, fourth officer of the liner.

Hansen, testifying at the Federal inquiry into the disaster, said the blast came about 20 minutes after the fire started.

"It shot out into the wind 20 feet on the tarboard side—like a broadside from a battleship," he said.

Hansen said the Morro Castle sometimes carried small arms ammunition as cargo. Other officers have testified, however, there was no such cargo on the ship's last voyage.

The fourth officer, rebuked by Dickerson N. Hoover, presiding, for not having mentioned the explosion in his previous testimony, said he "wasn't asked" about it.

Gasoline Line Disconnected.

Hansen was preceded on the stand by Commander John W. Barnett, of the Department of Commerce Shipping Bureau, who told of finding a gasoline line disconnected when he inspected the vessel's hulk after the fire.

He said he saw two gasoline tanks near the radio shack and they were intact.

The disconnected gasoline line would not necessarily indicate sabotage, he testified, but suggested carelessness.

Commander Barnett, who said the Shipping Board had a $2,700,000 mortgage on the vessel, declared the Morro Castle was built "in excess" of all legal safety requirements and was "above" contemporary vessels in this respect.

In his examination of the ship, Commander Barnett testified he found all but one of the fire doors open.

"Did you carefully examine the bridge?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied, "I saw nothing unusual."

Asked by Hoover if he thought the fire could have been checked, he replied:

"If the writing room, where the fire started, could have been closed up the fire could never have spread outside the room."

Other witnesses included James Bertoci, a deck steward, who has been commended by several passengers for aiding them. Bertoci told of seeing a steward leap into the sea while the ship was still moving.

"He was sucked under the stern," he added, "and I didn't see him again. I imagine he was ground to pieces by the propellers."

Dr. Schmidt to Lecture On Economics at G.W.U.

Appointment of Dr. Carl T. Schmidt, of the Consumers Council, AAA, as professorial lecturer in economics at George Washington University, was announced yesterday by Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president.

Dr. Schmidt, who received the degree of Ph. D. from the University of California and who has taught at Columbia University and other institutions, will conduct courses in the relation of government to business and economic planning. He is the author of "German Business Cycles, 1924-1931."

Deficit Exceeds Half a Billion

Treasury Figures Cover Period From July 1 to September 24.

(Associated Press.)

The Government's expenditures yesterday brought the defict since July 1 above the half billion mark.

Treasury figures for September 24, the latest date available, showed a $512,000,000 excess of expenditure over income.

Emergency expense of $782,000,000 came near the total revenues of $914,000,000.

Of these revenues, $122,000,000 were derived from processing taxes. The outgo for the Farm Administration was $76,000,000. Leaving $46,000,000 of revenue which is to be paid out later.

Also included in the revenue was about $50,000,000 of silver seigniorage or "profit."

The deficit compared with an excess outgo of $202,000,000 at this time last year. Revenues for the comparable period a year ago were $633,000,000, but they included $31,000,000 of processing taxes and an insignificant amount of seigniorage.

Father and Son Sue Over Mishap

Two suits for damages of $10,000 were filed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., as the result of an accident May 12 in which a father and his son, while walking, were struck by a truck at Wisconsin avenue and East-West highway.

The suits were filed by George H. Joyroe, sr., the father, one in behalf of himself and the other for the son, George H. Jayroe, jr., through Attorney Stedman Prescott.

The suits allege that the truck operated by Curtis M. Dellinger and owned by W. J. Young & Co. was on the wrong side of the road and operated in a negligible manner and at a speed greater than the legal limit.

The father, who is a carpenter, suffered a crushed left foot and ankle which prohibit his continuing his work, the suit alleges, and the son had head and body injuries and a crushed right foot and arm.

Board Invokes Securities Act In B. M. T. Deal

cause of perplexity to the Federal Trade Commission, which had original jurisdiction under the 1933 securities act. Although that agency warned the New York Stock Exchange that the B. M. T. bond issue raised questions of whether it infringed the 1933 act, it never made definite announcement to that effect and took no action.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, which on September 1 succeeded to the authority of the Trade Commission under the 1933 securities act, for the first time has now challenged the legality of the B. M. T. bond offering and its listings on the New York Exchange, invoking, however, a provision of this year's stock market control act.

This development came on the eve of the effective date of most of the provisions of the stock market control act, placing exchanges and security trading under Federal supervision. Except in the case of registration of security exchanges and temporary registration of securities, regulations to make the law effective have not yet been promulgated. The effective date set in the law is next Monday.

Long Conference Held.

The most important of these regulations are those governing marginal trading to be issued by the Federal Reserve Board. The board has drafted a set of regulations for marginal trading, but there has not yet been agreement on several points. The board met all day yesterday in an effort to reconcile its differences.

After consultation with the Securities Commission, the Reserve Board let it be known that its rules for marginal trading would not be enforced until after October 15, due to the delay in issuing the regulations. The two weeks' grace was decided on so that when the rules appear, some time this week, the financial world will have sufficient time in which to study them and adjust itself.

The points in the marginal trading requirements in controversy today will be submitted to a committee of representatives of the Reserve Board, the securities commission and the Treasury. A report from that group is expected today or tomorrow.

Auto-Bus Accident Victims Recovering

Winchester, Va., Sept. 26 (Spl.—John Cucco and his son John, jr., of Brooklyn, N. Y., who were among those injured in the auto-bus accident near Upperville last Wednesday, left Memorial Hospital here today in an ambulance for New York.

Ralph Coughlin, also in the same accident, was released from the hospital here and returned home by train today. However, the condition of Nichles LaGara, the fourth victim of the accident, remains serious.

"Cent-a-Mile" to Chicago.

The Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday announced "cent-a-mile" excursion rates to Chicago during the remaining days of the Century of Progress Exposition. The rates are in effect only during the week-end. Low-rate coach tickets will be accepted on the railroad's express train, the "Liberty Limited."

Missing Child Clew Reported

Nashville Official Refuses Information; Man Held at Kingsport.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 26 (AP).—District Attorney General J. Carlton Loser said today he has received information which, "if true," will be available in solving the disappearance of 6-year-old Dorothy Distelhurst, who last was seen eight days ago en route home from school. The nature of the information was not disclosed.

Meanwhile, a man giving his name as William Stritharst, 30, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was held at Kingsport for investigation, and a Department of Justice agent was sent from Nashville to question him.

Police Chief C. G. Crawford of Kingsport said Stritharst told him that "he was paroled last February from Sing Sing Prison, where he had been serving a sentence for kidnaping," and the chief added, "We're planning to check his story to see if it's true. The man admits being in Nashville when the Distelhurst child disappeared, but says he knows nothing about it."

Stritharst was taken into custody, the chief said, when it was reported he had chased two small boys in a residential section at Kingsport. Stritharst was found in a box car.

One Slain, Nine Escape In Dixie Convict Break

Savannah, Ga., Sept. 26 (AP).—An unidentified colored prisoner was shot to death and nine others escaped from a convict truck today, after they overpowered two guards. County officers tonight said they had been so busy looking for the nine live ones they had made no effort to identify the dead man nor learn the details of his death.

Five prisoners who made no attempt to escape from the truck said the vehicle was carrying them to the site of a road-building project on the Augusta highway, several miles from Savannah, when the ten men suddenly seized the guards and overpowered them.

N. Y. Jury Acts On Indictment Of Hauptmann

True Bill on Extortion Returned; Lindbergh Tells Version.

appeared at the North German Lloyd pier just after the liner headed down the Hudson for the open sea. After much conferring and fuss with line officials, he charted a tug and overtook the ship. The man was described as not at all prosperous looking. But he carried a wallet stuffed with bills. Throughout the proceedings at the pier, he seemed considerably agitated.

Asked at a press conference in Washington if he thought Hauptmann played a lone hand, Hoover replied:

"It is possible he did the job alone, but it is not probable."

"Are you on the trail of others?" he was asked.

"All I can say is that things look very good."

The new evidence against Hauptmann in the Bronx was found as Lindbergh was giving his testimony to the grand jurors.

With Lindbergh's direct entrance into the case against Hauptmann, the steel-like nerves of the prisoner began to crumble.

Prisoner's Nerve Cracks.

The stoic qualities dominant since his arrest a week ago seemed to be vanishing. Hauptmann wept almost all night in his jail cell. Throughout the day there was uneasiness where before was only tight-lipped stolidness.

It seemed possible the kidnap-killer suspect would be confronted by the dead baby's father.

But that did not come today.

Lindbergh, accompanied by H. Norman Schwarzkopf, chief of the New Jersey States Police, sped to the Bronx courthouse from the Dwight Morrow home in Englewood, N. J. His wife, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, remained at home with their second son, Jon.

With hundreds of curious crowded about the courthouse, Lindbergh—hatless as usual, dressed in a gray suit, no vest, his tie flowing in the breeze—hurried into the grand jury room.

He was in there for 17 minutes—giving the final testimony for the indictment of Hauptmann as the man who wrote the ransom notes, the man who guided the payment of the ransom, the man who made a promise to return the baby alive.

This was a promise that could not be kept—for the baby was already dead.

Find $840 in Ransom Bills.

As Lindbergh gave his testimony, the squads of carpenters and police searching the Hauptmann premises discovered the new evidence.

In the garage they found a loose two-by-four, set in the side supports. Holes had been drilled in the board, five of them. In each was tucked a wad of bills—$840 in all. Glistening in a little cubby-hole below the two-by-four the police found the revolver, evidently of German make.

With this discovery the investigators have located $14,500 in ransom bills from the garage. No estimate has been made of how many of the bills were passed by Hauptmann since that April night in 1932 when Dr. John F. Condon—"Jafsie," the intermediary—paid over the $50,000 ransom in St. Raymond's Cemetery in the Bronx.

The bills found today were taken at once to the office of District Attorney Samuel Foley of the Bronx. After checking them with the list of ransom notes, he said:

"Every one of the bills is a Lindbergh certificate."

Notified of the latest discovery, Hauptmann admitted to possession of the bills and said the revolver was given to him by a friend.

Pistol Held Significant.

Investigators placed high significance on the finding of the revolver. They recalled that "John," as the ransom recipient was known by in the long search, had indicated to "Jafsie" in the cemetery that he carried a small-sized revolver in his pocket.

Coupled with the garage discoveries, additional identification was made of the ransom notes.

Charles Appel, jr., handwriting expert of the Department of Justice, brought to New York more and new samples of Hauptmann's handwriting and said he was "convinced beyond question" it was the same as on the ransom notes—even the note pinned to the window sill of the nursery the night of March 1, 1932, when Baby Lindbergh was stolen from the Hopewell home.

Before he gave this testimony to the grand jury, Appel declared:

"The preponderance of similarity in certain R's, P's and B's, along with a great deal of other similarity, convinces me beyond question the same man wrote the ransom notes."

Gratification at the developments in the greatest manhunt in history was expressed by Attorney General Homer Cummings.

Coming from Washington for an address, Cummings conferred with Frank X. Fay, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice in New York.

"Are you satisfied that Hauptmann is the right man?" he was asked.

"I didn't know anyone doubted it," the Attorney General replied.

Grand Jury Acts Speedily.

The indictment was returned by the grand jury in less than an hour after it returned from the noon recess. It contained only one terse count—charging Hauptmann with extorting the ransom.

The defendant's name was listed in full—Bruno Richard Hauptmann—and two aliases were given: "Bruno" and "Pellmeier."

It was under this last alias, Department of Labor immigration records have shown, that Hauptmann entered the United States illegally 11 years ago. He deserted a ship, was arrested, taken back to Germany on the same ship and later stowed away to gain entrance to the country where now he is charged with being its most notorious prisoner.

Although Lindbergh was before the grand jury for only 17 minutes, he was in the courthouse for 45 minutes, conferring part of the time with District Attorney Foley and police officials.

A police escort sped beside the New Jersey police car, bearing Schwarzkopf and Lindbergh, as it crossed the George Washington Bridge over the Hudson, and to the Bronx courthouse.

The Grand Concourse was cleared in the neighborhood of the courthouse of everything except through traffic.

Close to 250 policemen were on duty in and about the courthouse.

As the large sedan pulled up to the curb directly in front of the main entrance, the police formed lines from it to the building.

Lindbergh, smiling, his hair rumpled in the wind, walked hurriedly into the building.

Schwarzkopf—with whom Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh conferred last night after landing their plane at Trenton—was beside him. They met Foley in the anteroom off the grand jury chamber.

There was a private jurists' elevator up to the jury room, but Lindbergh crowded into the main elevator with his police guard.

Return to Morrow Home.

On leaving the courthouse, Lindbergh and Schwarzkopf hurried down to the sedan. The driver, thinking they would be inside longer, had locked the door and gone around the corner to a barber shop.

While police were looking for him, the flier and the Jersey police official returned into the courthouse.

The driver was found, Lindbergh came out again, he and Schwarzkopf entered the car and drove off. Schwarzkopf nodded in assent to an inquiry if they were going back to the Morrow home.

At no time did Lindbergh see Hauptmann. Thus the tense drama of his meeting with the accused man was delayed. It may not come until the trial on extortion charges.

Last night was the first time Hauptmann has broken down in the long days of questioning and grilling, in the longer nights of confinement alone in his cell.

He has steadfastly maintained his innocence. He has made no confession.

A bench warrant was issued in the supreme court coincident with Hauptmann's indictment.

Aids of District Attorney Foley said the prisoner would probably be arraigned on the indictment tomorrow. The maximum sentence for extortion is 20 years' imprisonment.

Exchange Aids Search.

The stock market operations of Hauptmann, when finally checked, are expected to show where more of the ransom money went.

Giving all aid possible, the New York Stock Exchange late today asked members to report by next Tuesday noon whether accounts have been carried in the names of nine relatives or friends of Hauptmann.

The order was sent out by the business conduct committee of the exchange.

With the $14,590 found in the two garage disclosures, Assistant District Attorney Edward F. Breslin said the search to date of other assets of Hauptmann showed a total of $16,000—exclusive of the ransom bills found.

Most of the assets were in the name of Hauptmann's wife, Breslin said.

This check showed:

An equity of approximately $5,000 in a brokerage account with Steiner, Rouse & Co.

Balance of $2,578 in the Central Savings Bank, Broadway at Seventy-second street.

Two real estate mortgages aggregating $7,000.

A second newly discovered brokerage account, with Carleton & Mott, cash balance of $111.

With the Breslin statement, it was known for the first time that the account with Steiner, Rouse had been opened long before the kidnaping—corroboration to some extent of Hauptmann's contentions that the money he always seemed to have came, in part, from his long-time operations in the market.

Sprained Ankle Traced.

The Daily News said tonight it had learned definitely that Hauptmann "sprained his ankle in the spring of 1932."

The paper says that the information may be the long-sought link which might connect Hauptmann to a fall from the kidnap ladder, and that its informant was Anita Lutzenberg.

"Sure, I knew Bruno," she was quoted as saying.

"Everybody knew him that summer (1932) at Hunter's Island. All the girls liked him. He swam wonderfully, but he kinked when he walked.

"I mean he limped. I asked him why, and he told me: 'That's nothing. I sprained my ankle a few months ago and it's bothering me a little. But it's getting better right along.

"He didn't work but he had money. He was nice. He never tried to get fresh."

Garage Yields More Ransom and Gun

New York police yesterday found $840, said to be part of the Lindbergh ransom money, in a plank in the garage of Bruno Richard Hauptmann. This photo shows how the money was hidden, although the money stuffed in the holes is not that originally found there.

Second Kidnaping Feared by Robles

Tucson, Ariz., Sept. 26 (AP).—Fear that little June Robles might be kidnaped a second time has led to her being enrolled in a private school, where she is under constant supervision, it was disclosed today.

Six-year-old June was abducted last April and imprisoned in an iron box buried in the desert 19 days while her abductors demanded heavy ransom of her father and her wealthy grandfather.

The Robles family also said that June's 4-year-old sister, Sylvia, plays under constant guard.

They denied receiving any direct threats against the children.

Justice Chief Expects More Kidnap Arrests

Not Probable Hauptmann Did Job Alone, View of Hoover Here.

Sensational developments, and possibly new arrests, in the Lindbergh kidnaping case were forecast at the Department of Justice yesterday following the indictment of Bruno Richard Hauptmann by a Bronx grand jury on a charge of extortion.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, appeared pleased with the progress his agents are making and intimated that more arrests may be forthcoming shortly.

"It is possible that Hauptmann did the job alone, but not probable," he said.

When pressed by interviewers he said, "All I can say now is that things look very good."

A report also reached the Justice Department that the iron nerve of Hauptmann appears to be giving way under persistent grilling and the discovery of more and more evidence linking him with the crime.

"We understand he's lost his cockiness," one high official said.

Justice agents declined to discuss reports from New York that a Justice agent had presented evidence to the grand jury indicating that a woman had been operating a brokerage account for Hauptmann. All such evidence, it was explained, is being gathered in New York and is presented directly to authorities preparing for prosecution.

Charles Appel, handwriting expert of the department, went to New York yesterday upon request of the Bronx grand jury prepared to show that Hauptmann's handwriting and that in the 15 ransome notes are identical.

Appel identified the signature of Hauptmann on his auto license as being done by the writer of the kidnap notes prior to the arrest of the German carpenter.

Attorney General Cummings, who conferred with authorities in New York yesterday regarding the case, is expected to return to Washington today.

"Slain Man" Turns Up Alive.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 26 (U.P.).—John Hanson, Pittsburgh seaman, turned up alive today as arrangements were completed to bury in potter's field the body of a man found slain September 15 and identified as his.

Ransom Paid, Suspect Quit Job Same Day

New Link to Kidnap Case Is Revealed by Jersey Police Official.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 26 (AP).—Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey State Police, disclosed today that Bruno Richard Hauptmann, indicted in New York for extortion in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, left his job at a New York hotel a few hours before the ransom was paid.

Apparently adding to the chain of circumstantial evidence against the taciturn German carpenter, the State police head said Hauptmann worked until noon of April 2, 1932, at the hotel. He left his job at that time, Schwarzkopf said, "and never returned."

It was during the evening of that day that Dr. John F. Condon, acting as an intermediary, passed over $50,000 of Col. Lindbergh's money to a man who supposedly kidnaped the aviator's baby son a month before.

Tool Clews Compared.

Answering questions by telephone from New York, Schwarzkopf also said that some tools found in Hauptmann's garage in the Bronx were of the same make as the chisel found near the Lindbergh home at Hopewell after the kidnaping March 1, 1932.

Schwarzkopf added, however, that tools of other makes also were included in the suspect's possessions.

High legal authorities of New Jersey, meanwhile, expressed differences of opinion on the question of whether Hauptmann might, under the law, be prosecuted for kidnaping.

One source expressed belief the State statute of limitations would prevent prosecution on the kidnaping charge while another, pointing out the statute of limitations excepted "any person fleeing from justice," contended Hauptmann could be declared a "fugitive" and so liable to prosecution.

Case Seen Within Statute.

The statute of limitations says:

"No persons shall be prosecuted for any offense not punishable by death unless an indictment shall be found within two years from the time of the commission of the offense * * * providing that nothing herein contained shall extend to any person fleeing from justice."

The authority who believes Hauptmann would be considered as coming within the statute's final provision said a decision rendered in 1867 defined a fugitive as "a person who commits a crime within the State and withdraws himself from such jurisdiction without waiting to abide by the consequences of such act."

War Insignia Similar To Kidnap Note Symbol

Dresden, Germany, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—The insignia in the shape of a target, or bull's-eye worn by machine-gunners with the Saxon engineers in which Bruno Hauptman served in the World War, may have suggested the strange symbol used in the Lindbergh kidnaping notes, it was indicated here today.

The target-like insignia were worn by the gunners on their arm bands, to designate them from the rest of the engineer regiments.

Fisch, Friend Of Hauptmann, Died in Poverty

Unable to Pay Bills, Says Physician Who Attended Him.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Leipzig, Germany, Sept. 26 (AP). The doctor who treated Isador Fisch in his last illness today said emphatically that he died in abject poverty.

(Bruno Richard Hauptmann, indicted in New York for extortion following discovery of part of the Lindbergh kidnaping ransom in his garage, said Fisch, his dead friend, gave him the money.)

Rallying to support the assertions of Fisch's family that neither he nor they had money, Dr. R. Chamitzer, white-haired stomach specialist, showed the still unpaid bills for Fisch's treatment to evidence his belief in their poverty.

Still Has His Bills.

"Look here," he said, "I still have the bills in my file. I haven't presented them even today because I am convinced the family has no money."

"They are really poor people," the physician asserted, as he described in detail the last stages of Fisch's illness—an illness that took him back from America, where he knew Hauptmann, to his native Germany to die.

"Isidor first came to me December 20, 1933," he said. "Two days later I X-rayed him and discovered holes in both his lungs. I gave him a vaccine injection.

"He was then staying with his father, Solomon Fisch, in whose apartment living conditions were impossible for any ailing person. Isidor didn't even have a bed. He was lying on a sofa when, as his condition grew worse, I visited him at his home.

Forced Into Hospital.

"Honestly, if a man had ample means he wouldn't vegetate like that."

Dr. Chamitzer emphasized that he tried in vain to persuade Fisch to go to a hospital.

"I finally was forced to take him there where some time later I was hurriedly called to his bedside only to find my patient suffering from a hemorrhage of the lung."

Fisch was most anxious to get well so that he might go back to the United States, the physician said.

"He begged me like a child to cure him so he might return as soon as possible," he said.

The doctor was ready with proof as to the cause of Fisch's death.

Pulling out his death certificate, which gave acute tuberculosis as the cause, he said, "Here, convince yourself."

Kidnaping Clews Sought in Reich

New York Detective Will Check on Hauptmann.

Paris, Sept. 26 (AP).—Arthur Johnson, New York detective, who passed through Paris today en route to Berlin and Leipzig to pursue German leads in the Lindbergh kidnaping investigation, said he expected to receive instructions when he reached Berlin.

The New York detective, ordered to Germany from Spain, where he was investigating an arrest in the killing of a New York policeman some time ago, said he would stay in Germany at least a week.

He expected to go to Berlin, Leipzig and other German cities to investigate the background of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Woes of Nation Far From Over, Says Candidate

Arlington County Women Hear Green Attack on New Deal.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Attacking the New Deal, John Locke Green, Republican nominee for Congress from the Eighth Congressional District, told the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County yesterday the Nation's economic situation is far from settled.

At the beginning of the New Deal, unemployment was mostly in the cities, he said. The Government set up bureaus for temporary employment, and took money from the taxpayers to pay out in wages, Green declared.

"There might be some excuse for this policy if it reacted to fundamental good, but I fail to see that it has," he asserted.

After eighteen months of this policy more than 7,000,000 people are unemployed than during the high peak of the Hoover Administration, the budget is out of balance by almost $5,000,000,000, the bonded debt has been increased by many more billions, and still the problem has not been solved, the women were told.

Professors Criticized.

"The great trouble, as I see it," Green said, "is that we have approximately 1,500 college professors in Washington attempting to administer the affairs of the Government. Not one ever has been in a position where he had to meet the pay roll of even fifteen employes.

"I say, send the men back to the farm and let them gain a living from the soil as there is not one but would rather earn his living than accept dole from welfare boards throughout the country."

Members of the nominating committee which will select a slate for election at the January meeting are Mrs. Jessie Hunt, Mrs. Marion Hagan, Mrs. Louise Green, Mrs. Alice Semonies, Mrs. Ruth Marcey, Mrs. E. A. Richart and Mrs. Elsie Gall.

The newly created legislative and legal action committee members are: Mrs. Ruby G. Simpson, Mrs. Ruth Lowell, Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Hagan, Mrs. Elizabeth Magruder, Mrs. Florence Cannon, Mrs. Jessie Skidmore, Mrs. Olive Monroe and Mrs. Edith Rose.

Mrs. Cannon, chairman of the park, planning and zoning committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation, reported on its activities.

The meeting, held in the Calvary Methodist Protestant Church at Aurora Hills, was preceded by a luncheon served by the Ladies' Aid Society. Mrs. Jessie Roberts, president, presided.

Sewer Bids Sought.

The county board at an adjourned meeting tomorrow morning at the courthouse will receive and open bids for construction of the following projects, a part of the $2,500,000 sewerage system:

South Arlington lateral lines calling for approximately 40,000 feet of 8-inch and 1,800 feet of 12-inch concrete pipe.

The Potomac interceptor, Section 1, calling for 4,200 feet of 33-inch pipe, 15,000 feet of 36-inch, and 1,200 feet of 42-inch concrete pipe.

Potomac interceptor, Section 2, calling for 440 feet of 33-inch, in open cut; 3,700 feet of 33-inch in tunnel, and approximately 500 vertical feet of shafts.

Ballston district sewer, calling for 76,300 feet of 8-inch, 3,300 feet of 10-inch, 4,400 feet of 12-inch, 2,450 feet of 15-inch, and 5,700 feet of 18-inch concrete pipe.

The board is expected to award contracts Saturday at 9 a. m.

The Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board will meet tomorrow night at the Washington Golf and Country Club to elect officers.

Club to Hold Dance.

The Young Democratic Club of Arlington County will sponsor a dance tomorrow night at the New Ideal Country Club on Glebe road. Music will be furnished from 10 to 1 o'clock by the Virginia Serenaders.

Members of the arrangements committee are Stewart Richardson, chairman; Mildred Preston, Gertrude Richardson, Virginia Kelley, Thelma Bates, Elmer Sebastian, Richard L. C. Moncure and Hallie Taylor.

A committee of the Pomona Grange of Fairfax County, Va., has been selected to investigate the possibility of a Federal rehabilitation project being established in the county. The committee is composed of one member of each of the subordinate granges in the county—Mark Turner, of Great Falls; Ronald Blake, of Providence; William Cleveland, of Pioneer; George Gillingham, of Mount Vernon, and Wilson McNair, of Floris.

According to information filed with the county grange, the project would include the purchase of 2,000 acres for 500 white families and another for colored families formerly dependent on welfare relief.

Several grange members advocated the importance of opposing the project before it is located in the county. They said such families have not been self-supporting and they might become charges on the county after Federal relief is withdrawn. The sentiment of the members present seemed to be hostile to the project.

The recent outbreak of thefts throughout the county was discussed at length. Most of the farmers have lost chickens, lumber, implements and live stock. Suggestions to stop such crimes included the formation of a protective association, the offering of rewards, burglar alarms, tatooing of chickens, and increasing the county police force.

Ronald Blake, of Oakton, was appointed alternate for the master to attend the State convention in Richmond.

An entertainment, "The Miniature Follies," will be presented at 8 p. m. Friday, in the parish hall at McLean, Va., for the benefit of St. John's Episcopal Church. It will be held under the direction of Miss Virginia Hunter.

The entire cast will be made up of children, with 7-year-old Karl Gersdorff as master of ceremonies. Others from McLean to take part include Harriet Olker, Frances Rector 3-year-old Wee Gersdorff, Frances and Eloise Faidley, Lorraine Seegrist, Margaret Gantt and Percelia Willis. More than 100 children will be in the show.

The Young Democratic Club of Fairfax County made plans to hold a large political rally and barbecue on the old fair grounds at Fairfax, about the middle of next month. The rally will be held in cooperation with the Fairfax County Democratic executive committee.

Robert R. Buckley, chairman of the county executive committee, told the club he has extended invitations to United States Senator Harry Flood Byrd and Representative Howard W. Smith to be present.

FERA Allots Money to Aid Students Complete Their Studies.

Many a student has put himself through college by feeding men, but it remained for a University of Maryland freshman to raise tuition funds by feeding mice.

Through the munificence of the FERA, James Reedy, of Jarrettsville, Md., will receive part of a $3,030 fund allotted monthly to College Park students by the Federal relief agency. Reedy's assignment is to guard the well-being of the experimental mice in the animal husbandry department under the direction of Prof. Carmichael.

A "bug-chasing" squad has been organized on the campus by Dr. Ernest N. Cory, state entomologist. Men engaged in this occupation provided for by the FERA funds are scouring the fields in and around the college for insect specimens with which to complete the university's collections.

Another FERA student has been appointed to work with Prof. C. J. Pierson for work in taxidermy. He will receive a month's training and then will be set to work for nine months mounting zoological specimens for the museum.

Prof. M. A. Pyle, of the engineering department, has organized a surveying party to complete the details required for a map of the university. Other engineering students are in the mechanical and electrical laboratories on experimental work.

Both the chemistry and bacteriology laboratories also are employing needy students in Government-paid research work.

Coed students of home economics have been organized to conduct a nursery school for small children of parents who are on relief rolls or who are forced to be away from their homes during the day.

Campus athletic stars have formed community physical education classes under the direction of the university physical education staff. Others are employed as caretakers of college buildings, switch-board operators and dormitory assistants.

Scores of other students are tabulating records of the colleges, clipping and filing news stories and reports of the university's activities.

Norfolk Trial In Liquor Case Faced by Count

Move for Transfer There Up Today; Lack of Stamps Charged.

The removal of Count Eduardo L. Deussy Franceppi to Norfolk to answer a liquor tax charge will be sought today in the District Supreme Court by Assistant District Attorney Andrew McNeill.

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday decided there is sufficient evidence to warrant Franceppi's transfer to the Virginia city on a charge of possessing and illegally removing liquor on which no tax had been paid. The liquor allegedly had been sold by him to the officers' club and mess hall at the Hampton Roads Naval Training Station.

Testimony was offered by Lieut. James M. Smith, of the navy base, that he had purchased the liquor from Franceppi and that some of the bottles in a $700 order had no Federal tax stamps.

After the discovery that the stamps were missing, he said, officers complained the liquor was of inferior quality. When this was brought to Franceppi's attention, he agreed to "make good" the order. Lieut. Smith said. This Franceppi failed to do, Smith added.

The naval lieutenant said he had paid $700 for the order and also had a $150 check on a second order. Franceppi was unable to post the $4,000 bond demanded by Commissioner Turnage and was remanded to the District Jail.

The liquor was purchased from Franceppi, Smith said, because the officer's club believed it unnecessary to pay the State tax, since the base is on Federal territory.

Pity the Pickle Packear; Pay Prospects Pitiful

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Pickle prospects are particularly poor, pickle packers predicted today.

There's likely to be a shortage, L. H. Bond, Oconto, Wis., president of the National Pickle Packers Association, told 140 packers in convention here. The past season was the poorest in five years, Bond said.

Judge N. H. Green Ill; In Critical Condition

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Judge Nicholas H. Green, resident judge of Anne Arundel County, Fifth Maryland Circuit, is critically sick at his home here as a result of a sudden attack of illness last night. Physicians have been unable to determine the exact nature of the attack. The jurist was in a semiconscious condition throughout the day.

Judge Green, 64, is the Democratic candidate for election to the full term of 15 years on the bench, to which he was appointed by Gov. Ritchie nearly two years ago when the term of Judge Robert Moss, who was beyond the age limit, expired. He won the nomination over Eugene P. Childs, second district, in the recent primary. His Republican opponent in the November election is Linwood L. Clark, of Annapolis.

State Employe Pension Urged

Virginia Official Sees Pay Too Small for Retirement.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—With guards and others on his staff growing old in the State's service, some of them having served as much as 45 years, Maj. Rice M. Youell, superintendent of the State penitentiary, today said he thought the State should adopt some kind of a pension system for deserving employes.

The superintendent said he had not studied the problem and had no definite recommendations to make, but it seemed to him that some system should be worked out.

The employes could contribute to the fund themselves—a small amount on each pay-day, he said. If they would leave the employ of the State the employes could draw from the fund the amount they had deposited, the major said.

"As it is the pay for most of these employes is so small they can not accumulate enough to retire at old age, except by some such arrangement," the major said.

A State pension syrtem has been discussed previously, but no action has been taken by the General Assembly.

Goodwin, Post Staff Photo.

Pages of history were turned backward at the Orange County (Va.) bicentennial celebration with the presentation by 1,000 people of a pageant depicting the historical growth of the county. Virginia Milk Control Pleas Made to Court

Rule on Constitutionality Expected in November; Price-Fixing Hit.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—The constitutionality of the State milk control act was assailed and defended today in arguments before the State Supreme Court of Appeals, which is expected to hand down a decision in its November term at Richmond in the case brought by R. J. Reynolds and others against the State milk commission.

S. D. Timberlake, jr., in his argument against the milk control regulation, asserted that fundamental rights and liberties of his clients were at stake and that the outcome of this case "will spell liberty or slavery to every citizen of the Commonwealth."

Attorney General Abram P. Staples, answering for the Commonwealth and the milk board, asserted that the appellants were assailing the reasonableness and validity of imaginary regulations which they say the milk commission could promulgate, rather than those actually adopted, and that the one real question involved was whether the "fluid milk business is not so affected with public interest as to be subject to regulatory laws."

Other Cases Heard.

Before adjourning today to meet in Richmond November 7, the commission heard completion of arguments in two other cases as well as the milk case. They were C. F. Irvine vs. Everett H. Carr, administrator, and J. E. Kelly vs. Love B. Rouse.

C. H. Miller and J. C. Montgomery were joint appellants with Reynolds in the milk case.

In a brief filed by their attorneys they asserted they were aggrieved by a final decree entered August 21, 1934, in law and equity court, part 2, of the City of Richmond, whereby they were perpetually enjoined and restrained from refusing to obey orders and regulations of the newly created milk commission and forbidden to sell milk anywhere in the State until each of the appellants should be licensed by the commission. They were restrained also from selling milk at any other price than that fixed by the commission and the injunction degree made it mandatory that they pay such assessments as might be levied by the commission.

Mr. Timberlake claimed the lower court erred in overruling the appellants' motion to dissolve a preliminary injunction and in perpetuating this injunction. He compared the Virginia milk control act with similar legislation in New York State.

Constitutionality Attacked.

"The Virginia milk control act was not a constitutional exercise of the police power of the State," Mr. Timberlake argued, "because in its attempt to fix prices and prescribe limited areas within which milk can be sold, it contravenes section 1, article 1 of the Virginia constitution and the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

Mr. Staples, for the milk commission, asserted that the appellants' petition assailed only imaginary regulations which might be enacted and continued:

"There is only one real question presented to this court for decision, and that is the constitutionality of the milk control act; and decision of this question is controlled by only one consideration, and that is, can this court say from the facts in this record that the fluid milk business is not so affected with public interest as to be subject to regulatory laws? The General Assembly has solemnly declared it to be a business affecting the public peace, health and welfare, which should be supervised and controlled."

Exhibits Ready For Farm Fair Starting Today

Indians to Be Feature in Pageant at Charles County Show.

La Plata, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Extensive exhibits covering every phase of agricultural activity will mark the opening of the annual Charles County Fair at La Plata tomorrow.

"All farm crops have been exceptionally good this year," said P. D. Brown, county farm agent, "tobacco only suffering a little from the excessive rains of the fore part of the month. The fruit exhibit will be large and the live stock pavilion is expected to be filled. The farm women of the county are busily whipping together kitchen and home exhibits, which will be unusually interesting this year."

An unusual portion of the tobacco pageant at the fair will be the introduction of six Indian chieftains, representing the six Indian tribes that once lived in and around La Plata. Costumes for the Indians are being made in Philadelphia, and include such elaborate feathered headdresses and furs to be worn across the shoulders.

Final rehearsal of the pageant, written and directed by Kathleen Read Coontz, of Washington, took place this afternoon at the fair grounds.

Salisbury Speeds PWA Works Plan

Council Will Meet Today on Highway Project.

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Mayor and council of this city will meet in special session tomorrow to act on the matter of procuring Federal funds for proposed municipal public works projects.

Faced with the possibility of losing the PWA aid, due to the delay in definite plans for the relocation of highway No. 13 through the city, it now becomes necessary to speed up the creation of a program.

The city program calls for an expenditure of $139,000, most of the amount to be devoted to labor costs. Of this $25,000 would be an outright grant and the balance a loan.

14 Head of Cattle Dead From Eating Nitrate of Soda

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Fourteen head of cattle have been found dead in the fields of Max Miller, Bunker Hill farmer. Five were his own, five were "feeders" from the Midwest drought area, property of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, while four belonged to a neighbor.

Investigation showed that the cattle died form eating what Miller thought was salt, but turned out to be nitrate of soda. The nitrate is extremely salty and is almost indistinguishable from cattle salt when pulverized.

Several similar cases have occurred here. Warning is given that care must be exercised in handling nitrate where cattle may have access to it.

A luncheon was served in the Presbyterian chapel here. All members of the convention were taken for a tour of the historic points in this section during the afternoon, the ride ending at the home of Mrs. Jane Faulkner in Martinsburg, where they were entertained by the Berkeley County Chapter, U. League of Nations Is Upheld As a Step Toward World Peace

Dr. Mitchell Also Scores Hitler in Address at Orange Fete.

By Bart Sheridan.

Orange, Va., Sept. 26.—Terminating the second day's program at the Orange bicentennial celebration, Dr. C. S. Mitchell, of the University of Richmond Department of Social Science, upheld the League of Nations as a step toward world peace, denounced by inference the Nazi execution of 77 antigovernment Germans, advocated a centralized national government, and scored the opposition to teaching evolution in public schools.

Dr. Mitchell spoke at Gum Spring in commemoration of the meeting between John Leland and James Madison, opposing colonial statesmen, in which the two leaders formulated the principles of religious liberty that were eventually embodied in the Constitution.

Other addresses took place at Gordonsville, when V. R. Shackelford of the State board of education, spoke at Jewish memorial exercises, and at the Orange courthouse, when Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, paid a tribute to William Monroe, pioneer educator, at ceremonies of the junior woman's club of Orange.

Dr. Mitchell applied the spirit of freedom in religion and thought, as exemplified in the meeting of Madison and Leland, to present-day conditions. He scored the hostility against school and college professors who teach the science of evolution. "Any board of trustees," he said, "who ejects a professor because he teaches and freely allows discussion on the subject of evolution is violating the ideals which we commemorate here today."

Denounces Nazi Leader.

The speaker deplored the present menace to freedom of thought as expressed in "foreign countries." He denounced, by inference, the recent Hitler execution of 77 anti-Nazi citizens. "When in a great nation," he declared, "a leader strikes down 77 men, without trial, without witnesses, without reason—I'll say no more. To an American it is shocking."

War, he said, can be permanently averted only by the establishment of a community of nations. The League of Nations, he said, is probably the most effective step toward attainment of such a community. He compared modern objections to the league to the protests of anti-Constitution colonial statesmen who opposed ratification on the grounds that such an agreement would alienate Spain, then in control of Louisiana, and hinder egress of American products on the Mississippi River.

In urging a strong centralized form of government, the speaker cited the occurrence of the word "Nation," spelled, he emphasized, with a capital "N," in the original draft of the Constitution as prepared by James Madison. "There is no deeper tragedy," he said, "than the deleting of those capitals by the

Pursued 2 Years, Virginian Is Sent To Jail as Stabber

Luray, Va., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Everett Campbell, 29, who for the last two years has been eluding officers on a charge of stabbing Claude Cloud, a youth, yesterday was sentenced to six months in jail in Judge H. W. Bertram's court.

Officers have been almost within shooting distance of Campbell a dozen times, but he always managed to escape. Deputy Sheriff D. S. Fox and several special police officers surrounded Campbell in a house in the Blainesville neighborhood a month ago. Campbell fought, but was overpowered. He said he had traveled over half a dozen States. The lure of home got the best of him and he returned to his old haunts.

Bank Gets Writ On Collections

Court Order to Assist in Clearing up Debts of Depositors.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard have signed an order in the Circuit Court ordering depositors who dissented from the reorganization plan of the defunct Central Trust Co. and who are indebted to the Peoples Liquidating Corporation, which took over the assets of the trust company, to show cause by October 1 why the amount of their indebtedness should not be deducted from the 16 per cent final distribution allowed by the court.

The order was signed on a petition filed by W. Clinton McSherry, attorney for the liquidating corporation. The petition stated that a large number of notes and single bills were turned over by the receiver, John J. Gingher, State banking commissioner, to the liquidating corporation and the order of the court was served on Alban M. Wood and Holden S. Felton, attorneys for the dissenting depositors.

Several weeks ago the dissenters as well as all creditors of the closed bank received a dividend of 6 per cent. The dissenting depositors were allowed a dividend of 22 per cent of their claims and checks for the remaining 16 per cent have been drawn up ready for distribution. Notes of the dissenting depositors and other creditors of the Central Trust Co. have been indorsed and delivered to the liquidating corporation.

The receiver, under an order of the court, is collecting the stockholders' liability.

Frederick Jury Demands Probe Of Roadhouses

Drive on Gaming Devices Among Recommendations to Circuit Court.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Describing conditions that exist at roadhouses as deplorable, the Frederick County grand jury, Thomas L. Zimmerman, foreman, in its report to the circuit court late yesterday, after being in session eight days and examining 165 witnesses, recommended a general investigation at once.

A drive on slot machines and other gambling devices and a plea that authorities pay more attention to the enforcement of liquor laws also were recommended. Reference was made to disregard of the law prohibiting political workers from being within 100 feet of polling places and a recommendation made that this situation be remedied.

The report was read before Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard. It stated that the jury made 67 investigations, had found 60 indictments and dismissed 7 cases. The jurors visited the county jail and Montevue Hospital, the county almshouse, and reported, each institution in excellent condition.

The new hospital at the almshouse, erected and equipped with the aid of Federal funds, was described as "a wonderful asset to the county." It was recommended that more attention be paid to the enforcement of the dog license law. Receipts from these licenses are used to pay farmers for the loss of sheep and poultry by stray dogs.

Three murder indictments were among those returned. Emory Selby, Brunswick, was charged with first-degree murder, and Arlie Forrest, also of Brunswick, second-degree murder, in the slaying of Jack Ledwell, Tennessee, a member of the Brunswick transient center. Selby and Forrest are held in jail without bail.

A first-degree indictment was returned against an unnamed defendant who killed a young colored woman who had preferred charges against him. The man is still at large. Indictments of assault with intent to murder were returned against Earl Marriman and Earl Stanton. The other indictments allege larceny, receiving stolen goods, assault and battery, statutory breaking, false representation, carrying concealed weapons and other crimes.

W. H. Echols, 74, Professor at U. of Va., Dead

Wrote Many Mathematics Papers; Member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—William Holding Echols, jr., 74, professor of mathematics at the University of Virginia for nearly a half century, died suddenly last night at his home on East Lawn, at that institution.

Prof. Echols was a native of San Antonio, Tex. He was educated at the University of Virginia, where, after taking his bachelor of science degree, he graduated from the school of civil engineering.

A year after leaving college he became assistant engineer in the construction of the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific Railway, and in 1883 was resident engineer in the location, construction and bridgework of the Louisville, New Orleans & Texas Railway. Two years were spent in the West as engineer and superintendent of the N. & O. Mining Co., in Colorado. In 1886 he returned South to become resident engineer of the Memphis & Birmingham Railway.

Prof. Echols began his career as a college professor in 1887, when he was elected professor of applied mathematics and director of the Missouri School of Mines. In 1891 he returned to his alma mater for five years. He became a full professor in 1896 and had served continuously since that date.

Prof. Echols was the author of "Differential and Integral Calculus," and wrote many papers on pure and applied mathematics. He was a member of the American Mathematical Society and of the Chi Phi Fraternity and Phi Beta Kappa.

Prof. Echols was twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary Elizabeth Blakely, of Charlottesville, who died in 1894. On June 15, 1897, he married Miss Elizabeth Mitchell Harrison, of New York City, who survives, with the following children: Miss Jane J. Echols, of the university; Angus B. Echols, of Wilmington, Del.; Maj. Oliver P. Echols, United States Air Corps, Dayton, Ohio; George B. Echols, of St. Louis; Lieut. Marion P. Echols, of West Point; Gessner Harrison Echols, of Freeport, Tex., and Robert Lewis Echols, of Princeton, N. J. He also leaves one brother, Charles P. Echols, U. S. A., retired, now residing at Englewood, N. J.

Rum Employe Forced to Quit Bible Teaching

Richmond Class Head Is Ousted as Unsuitable Because of Job.

Richmond, Sept. 26 (Spl.).—The forced resignation of A. W. Browning, jr., as Bible class teacher at Pine Street Baptist Church, on the ground that as a State liquor store employe he is not suitable to teach such a class, was revealed here today.

The A. B. C. board members had no comment today upon the episode. It followed a Baptist ministers' conference here which condemned the liquor traffic and said it could not conscientiously encourage members to seek employment in the new State department.

Browning's resignation as teacher was requested by J. B. Wiltshire, superintendent of the Pine Street Sunday School.

"No one engaged in selling liquor is suitable to teach a Bible class," Wiltshire ruled, adding this rule was absolute at his church and has been "pretty generally agreed upon by other Baptist churches of the State."

Browning's name has not been dropped from the church roll. He became an employe of the A. B. C. board in May.

"I can not understand Wiltshire's attitude," Browning said. "Is he opposed to a man making his living, or should he let his family starve?"

descendants of the formulators of our Constitution."

The Orange County Bicentennial Pageant, drawing unstinted commendation from more than 5,000 spectators, reenacted 220 years of the county's history tonight. The settlement and development of Germanna, the site commemorated yesterday by Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador to the United States, was depicted in the most warmly received episode of the pageant. The most spectacular scene was the "Masque of the Nations," in which the entire cast, composed of 1,000 lineal descendants of Orange County settlers, revolved on a huge wheel of life around Miss Columbia, who stood on a raised dais.

Bicentennial Ball.

Following the second performance of the pageant tonight, there was the first bicentennial ball, under the chairmanship of Mr. George Gordon Battle, of New York and Orange. Miss Wycliff Scott, "Miss Orange County," and her court, and Miss Florence Sanford, "Miss Columbia," and her 48 States and the princesses, representative of the counties carved out of Orange County, were seated upon a throne covered with a cloth of gold.

Tomorrow has been designated as Governor's Day for the celebration. Gov. Peery is scheduled to arrive in Orange at 11 a. m. and will preside over the special celebration in the historic Orange County Courthouse, under the auspices of the Orange County Bar Association. Gov. Peery will introduce the speaker, Judge Gordon B. Ambler, of Richmond, great-grandson of Philip Pendleton Barbour, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court under President Andrew Jackson. Judge Ambler will address the gathering in the robes worn by his distinguished ancestor while a member of the Supreme Court.

At 2 p. m. there will be another tour of the famous homes, and at 4:30 p. m. one of the outstanding events of the celebration, when Mrs. Betty Taylor Stauffer, 80, granddaughter of President Zachary Taylor, is to be entertained in the James Madison Hotel.

Cumberland Sewer Bids Are Submitted

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Robert Lombardi, Philadelphia, submitted the lowest bid to the City of Cumberland yesterday on contract No. 1 for the new interceptor sewer system at $237,665.95. This is for the work south of Baltimore street. The highest among five other bids was $357,000. Only one bid was received on contract No. 2, calling for the work north of Baltimore street, on the west side. Cenedella & Co., Milford, Miss., submitted a bid of $180,010 for this work. The two low bids would make the cost of the entire work $417,684, while approximately $340,000 is available. The city sold a bond issue in connection with the proposed improvement for $235,000 and has received $103,000 from Federal funds.

Plea to Create Town Rejected

Marshall, Va., Citizens Are Told to Expand Limits.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Judge J. R. H. Alexander, who heard a petition at an extra session of the Circuit Court last week, presented by the citizens of Marshall, Va., to have their town incorporated, refused to grant them a charter at the opening of the September term of the court here yesterday.

Judge Alexander recommended that they expand the limits of the proposed town of Marshall to include adjacent thickly settled areas on the roads to The Plains, Rectortown and Warrenton. This would increase the population from 283 to about 360.

Paul C. Richards, legal representative for the petitioners, said Judge Alexander's suggestion will be acted upon and the J. Davenport Blackwell Engineering and Construction Co., of Warrenton, will resurvey the town limits.

Actual extradition will be negotiated by the State Department in Washington and the Tokyo foreign office.

Virginia Approves Loans Under FHA

Commissioner of Banks to Follow U. S. Lead.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—State banks and building and loan companies today had the assurance of the State banking department that loans they make to property owners under terms of the National housing act will not be placed in an unfavorable classification.

In a letter to the Federal housing administrator, M. E. Bristow, State commissioner of banking and insurance, said that his office will follow the lead of the Comptroller of the Currency and chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in dealing with advances to property owners for the purpose of making improvements insured under the National housing act.

"Our examiners have been instructed that such loans need not be classified as slow, doubtful or loss, so long as a sufficient insurance reserve exists to cover them," the letter said.

Disinterested Advice.

The dean of the Harvard School of Business Administration, Wallace B. Donham, has joined the ranks of those urging the Administration to remove the fears and uncertainties that are destroying business initiative. "If managers are not so encouraged," Dr. Donham says, "I expect business to decline in the next twelve months and unemployment to increase."

The head of one of the country's leading schools of business can not be dismissed as a political busybody or a man whose opinions are molded by self-interest. Dr. Donham realizes the deficiencies of business leaders as well as those of bureaucrats. He appreciates the seriousness of the crisis which forced the Government to provide relief for millions of unemployed. But, as he says, in the end business must take on the burden of unemployment. It can not and will not do so unless assurances such as Dr. Donham urges are forthcoming.

Correction of past mistakes, protection against constant changes of policy, avoidance of unfair competition by the Government in extension of its activities, and evenhanded justice in adjusting relations between employers and employes are essential. The Nation also needs to be assured that the Administration is friendly to the basic principles of our economic system and opposed to inflation.

All of these demands and others are being made with increasing emphasis by leaders of public opinion who know what business men think and why they lack confidence to go ahead with plans for the future. Dr. Donham has done more than merely enumerate these well-known causes of anxiety. He has also emphasized the fact that failure to restore private initiative will put an intolerable strain upon public credit.

"The Nation," he says, "can borrow vast sums in an atmosphere of courage. When fear dominates, similar borrowings would bring an explosive inflation."

Not A Happy Victory.

Few international yacht races have been more disappointing in the outcome than the contest between T. O. M. Sopwith's unfortunate Endeavour and Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow. The English challenger was the unquestioned favorite when the race began. The feeling that the Lipton tradition deserved a victory easily overcame any patriotic sympathy that might have been felt for the defending craft. Thousands of spectators and millions of newspaper readers would have been delighted if the America Cup had been taken from our shores for the first time in 83 years.

In spite of this feeling of good will toward the challenger and his yacht, the contest ended on a sour note. The challenger has expressed himself as bitterly disappointed over the manner in which the race committee handled his protest of last Saturday, and has forever turned his back upon America Cup contests. It is all too evident that the last two races developed a feeling of acute acrimony, which has not been entirely dissipated by the obvious implication in Mr. Sopwith's admission that the Rainbow won the crucial race "fairly." Certainly this is not a pleasant sequence to the remarkable good spirit which always prevailed when Sir Thomas Lipton went down to defeat.

Disappointment is accentuated, too, by the assurance of experts that the British craft was unquestionably superior to Rainbow. Endeavour outran the victorious yacht repeatedly; but her maneuvering was clumsy and Mr. Sopwith's judgment was frequently inaccurate. An amateur crew—substituting for professionals who went on strike before the Endeavour left England—was no match for Mr. Vanderbilt's expert Swedes. Loss of the "old mug" for want of expert seamen is naturally disconcerting, but it is no cause for the acerbity which developed during the last races.

With the vanquished disgruntled and the victors far from elated it becomes pertinent to ask just what the contest achieved.

Whither Thou Goest.

It has finally been decided to move Frau von Hindenburg's body from Hannover to Tannenberg Monument, where she will lie beside her husband on the site of his greatest military victory.

As in the case of Frederick the Great, Von Hindenburg's expressed desire to be buried at home was disregarded. However, it seems appropriate that his body now lies where his heart lay during his lifetime—on the battlefield. Here he is surrounded by fighting men and the aura of victory. Von Hindenburg was a warrior. His sons were trained to be warriors.

Gertrud von Hindenburg was a wife and mother. She was the typical hausfrau: home-loving, modest, unobtrusive. She loved her husband as a man, not as a field marshal. There is something pathetically incongruous in the fact that she will be the only woman to lie at Tannenberg Monument. There is in the decision something symbolic of the subordination of women in present-day Germany.

After General Johnson.

Only a man of outstanding caliber can make blunder after blunder in his work and yet leave a record in which solid achievement far outweighs the sum total of his mistakes. And by that token the constructive contribution of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson is unquestionable. To us, who once or twice have aroused his severe displeasure and acid criticism, the subject leaves no room for doubt. At least temporarily the Government loses the services of a fearless and able man by the retirement of the National Recovery Administrator.

Which is not to say that his resignation is at this time regrettable. For weeks, if not for months, it has been clear that the impending and overdue reorganization of NRA implied Gen. Johnson's withdrawal. He was in large part responsible for its original design. He safely piloted the hastily built and unwieldy craft through the rocks and shoals which threatened its first trials. In spite of an exaggerated and Barnumesque technique he made his office acceptable in principle to the country. None of this means that he could be regarded as the proper captain for the open seas.

If the Administration had possessed any clear idea of the future of NRA, Gen. Johnson would doubtless have retired long ago. But even its continued existence has been in doubt. The National Industrial Recovery Act limits operation to two years—which means until next June—and as long as dissolution was anticipated, change of leadership would have been meaningless. There is, however, but one interpretation of the President's acceptance of Johnson's resignation "because you and I have felt for some time that NRA has fulfilled its first phase and calls for revision of its organization." This is that NRA is to become at least a relatively permanent part of our governmental structure.

Viewed beside this anticipated change from temporary to permanent status the departure of the general becomes a matter of secondary importance. The vital issue now is the character of reorganization necessitated by the policy of continuation. There can be little doubt that prolongation of the legal life of NRA is on the whole desirable. But on the form which it should assume as an enduring part of governmental structure there is much room for argument.

On two general points, however, there is already general accord. NRA must not continue as a dictatorial machine, attempting to dragoon producers and consumers, employers and employes, along arbitrary lines. And its complicated functions, which at present partake of the legislative, the executive and the judicial type, must be segregated and so far as possible allocated to the agencies of government where they more naturally belong.

On the first point, it is obvious that NRA as a quasi-dictatorship was only tolerable as long as it was actually fulfilling the task for which it was created. In the words of the President's statement of June 16, 1933, this was "to put people back to work." It is no reflection on other values of the organization to say that little or no employment is being provided by NRA policies at the present time. But these other values—such as the development of industrial self-government under careful Federal supervision—can best be realized by decentralization in the organization.

Progress in regard to the second point—separation of functions which do not properly belong to an administrative body—is also necessary to eliminate the confusion, overlapping, duplication and general dissipation of efficiency which now besets NRA. Responsibility for the collective bargaining problem and prosecution of code violators, to cite only two instances, should both be detached to agencies better equipped to handle them. Such simplification will not crop the wings of the Blue Eagle. They will, on the contrary, enable that somewhat jaundiced bird to cope far more effectively with the problems he is supposed to handle.

The President has already made clear that he has revisions of this general character in mind. He has so far, and properly, kept his own counsel as to specific plans. It is to be hoped, however, that the best brains of the country will be called into consultation in mapping out the detailed reorganization which lies ahead. For it is hard to imagine a problem of greater political, economic and social significance.

Much of the trouble which NRA has so abundantly encountered traces to the haste with which it was created. Now that we have a better understanding of both its limitations and possibilities, caution and full discussion with regard to its future are both appropriate and essential. In continuing and remodeling the life of NRA there must be no repetition of the tumultuous procedure whereby a dazed and distracted Legislature gave birth to this instrumentality of government fifteen months ago.

In Praise Of Brown Paint.

It was not until the New York City Art Commission discovered that the park department had renovated a statue of Henry Ward Beecher by covering it with a coat of brown paint that it began looking into the matter of statues in general. The Beecher episode rather climaxed a series of abuses of the city's statuary. The art commission now wants to have complete charge of the washing of the bronze horses, the brushing of the marble frock coats, and the sponging of the scabbards of an hundred heroes scattered from the Battery to the Bronx.

The dignified commission says it was pure ignorance, during another administration, that got Mr. Beecher into the fix he found himself in.

But could it not be that some park employe was more literary-minded than the commission suspects, and that he got poor Mr. Beecher's period mixed up between Lewis Mumford's Brown Decade and Claude Bowers' Dreadful Ditto? Or was it but a felicitous error that caused the unknown painter so appropriately to garb the great Brooklyn pulpit-pounder and political preacher in that puritanical and particularly fitting hue?

Certain cynically minded individuals would protest against a commission working for the Preservation of Municipal Statuary in any city, including Washington. They would say, perhaps not mistakenly, that what is needed most is a Commission for the Removal of Municipal Atrocities. But this, of course, is too much to expect. The millennium is not with us yet, and there are still homes that boast Rogers groups and speak of the State Department building as architecture. The ghost of Hiram Powers has not been laid and the spirit of the Greek Slave still passes for the essence of art. Perhaps an occasional coat of brown paint, appropriately applied, is the most we can expect.

The New Alliance System.

Disarmament talks scheduled for this week at Geneva have again been postponed, and some observers there have seized the opportunity to pronounce the Disarmament Conference "as dead as the dodo." It is undoubtedly true that a fruitless chapter in the struggle against international anarchy has closed. But the transition which is taking place is not so much an abandonment of the objectives sought through the Disarmament Conference as a swing toward the security-pact route to peace.

Two schools of thought on the disarmament problem have been represented throughout at Geneva. One sought disarmament as a condition of security; the other insisted that security is a prerequisite of disarmament. The growth of apprehension in Europe, stimulated by the rise of Nazism in Germany and the turmoil in Austria, has now given ascendancy to the "security" school, of which France is the chief patron.

Every attempt to limit or reduce the machinery of war runs headlong into the wall of distrust and suspicion that divides France from Germany. Since the war France has been partly afraid and partly undesirous of arms limitation. Her hesitation to grant even reasonable concessions has played into the hands of the reactionaries in the Reich. Since Germany withdrew from the League of Nations and Chancellor Hitler inaugurated his policy of thinly-veiled militarism, the possibility of securing disarmament without an elaborate system of security pacts has passed entirely out of the picture.

A few years ago France was fighting almost single-handed for the security-pact approach to peace. Most of the other major powers as well as the smaller nations were willing to forward a genuine reduction in military outlay even without guarantees. But now the conditions in central Europe, combined with Far Eastern uncertainties, have urged Soviet Russia into the League of Nations and are aiding a significant rapprochement between France and Italy. The proposed eastern Locarno pacts demonstrate that governments are thinking more of security through protective alliances than of actual disarmament.

Europe is unquestionably swinging back toward the political alliance system. But under the League aegis it is on a different plane to the prewar alliances. These pacts are regarded as the most practical means of guarding against war. It may be that a series of interrelated regional pacts set up under the guidance of the League of Nations will prove an effective barrier to the use of force in bringing about post-war adjustments. At any rate, Europe seems committed to this objective, and France, the recognized leader of the movement, is showing all her traditional diplomatic skill and force in its attainment.

Satisfied Starlings.

The invasion of Washington is imminent. Black hosts are being marshaled on the outskirts, preparatory to advance and take possession. In other words, the starlings have arrived, after a summer's sojourn in Canada.

An authority on birds has advanced the theory that these nuisances can never be exterminated, but will on the contrary increase and multiply. He says that the birds will have to be coaxed away by means of simulated buildings erected from dismantled edifices. Furthermore, that these synthetic skyscrapers will have to be made attractive to the birds by means of electric lights, accessible drinking water, food and comfortable lounging ledges.

With these qualifications in mind, the "better homes for birds" idea takes on all the aspects of a project which may demand consideration by the Federal Housing Administration. Proper ventilation, sufficient heating, and modern plumbing are items which self-respecting starlings will take into consideration before deserting public buildings. Birds as well as people know a thing or two, particularly birds with the good sense to leave Washington for Canada in summer time.

No one knows the life span of an oyster.—Newspaper filler. If that's something to worry about, we'll let the oyster do it.

T. O. M. Sopwith's refused protest to the race committee seems to be a case of unrequited luff.

A great disadvantage in having credit is that it almost invariably gets you in debt.

It's deplorable that history repeats itself. So much of it isn't worth repeating.

Nothing recedes like success.

Who's First?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note an article in The Post of September 12 to the effect that "a woman has been sued because she refused to pay her allotment as a stockholder in the Seventh Street Savings Bank.

The ruling of the Treasury Department to assess all stockholders and directors according to their investments so as to pay back the depositors is all right. But when the RFC wants to be paid back before the depositors it is unjust to the latter.

When the old bank stockholders were assessed it was not stated that the RFC should be the first to be paid—no, it specifically said "the depositors." These people are more in need of some ready cash than the RFC; they have waited; they have lived from hand-to-mouth; they have bills to meet; they have taxes to pay unless the real estate people have foreclosed on them already, robbing them of homes which they were anxious to hold, but had to give up on account of their money being tied up in the closed banks. Many a former business man is in no business today because of this deplorable condition.

It was not the depositors' fault back in 1932 when their hard-earned money was invested in what are now frozen assets. They put their money in the banks because they were under "Government supervision." This was to be their guarantee. Many of these old depositors have gone to early graves because of this deplorable situation—right under the very eyes of our Treasury Department.

Schools and Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With pleasure I congratulate Commissioner Allen for his stand upon relief. Yes, Mr. Suter, schools, recreation centers and playgrounds are all very good, and I myself am in favor of bigger and better ones. But don't let middle-aged and older people starve while you are building them. I have been on relief for six months and all I get or ever got is five days' work each month and that five days' pay, $14—less than 50 cents a day for board, room and laundry. I have never received a food order.

Since I am on relief, it might be well for Mr. Suter to ask fellows like me who are actually suffering for lack of food and clothes, and then he can see relief from a different angle.

I wish to thank the management of The Post for your wonderful paper. W. H. GWINN.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding the recent query at the end of the column on postcards by your Post Impressionist, I was well acquainted with a lady who had colored several thousands of these cards. She told me that green did more than any other color to enliven and beautify a card.

Morro Castle Rescues.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In connection with the tragic catastrophe which befell the Morro Castle off the Jersey coast, no mention has yet been made of the great part played by Van Rensselaer H. Green, consulting refrigerating engineer of 11 Park place, New York, and his associates of the Bayhead Yacht Club, of which Mr. Greene is commodore, in bringing to shore 72 living passengers of the ill-fated vessel, as well as many dead bodies found floating in the sea.

At 6:30 on the morning of September 8 Mr. Greene, who makes his summer home at Bayhead, was awakened by a neighbor who had seen the blaze. He drove at once to Spring Lake, where he got in touch with Robert Lewis, chairman of the Spring Lake Emergency Squad.

Seeing no apparent effort being made to pick up the dozens of passengers swimming or floating, like a school of fish, from 1 to 2 miles off shore, Greene rushed back to Bayhead. There he routed out the yacht club members who had power boats and in his 40-footer, accompanied by four other boats, proceeded full speed out the Manasquan Inlet toward the burning ship and set about the work of rescue.

"A Fair Profit."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can not the public at large grasp the fact that if labor has better working conditions and better pay, better conditions will result for all?

How many people reading the newspapers stop to analyze the conditions under which labor has been attempting to exist, not only during the depression, but in many factories and mills, &c., years before the depression? The depression in a large way was caused by, or really made worse by, stockholders being greedy for huge dividends. When they no longer could expect huge dividends in the natural course of business, they immediately saw to it that labor's wage was reduced, or the number of help employed curtailed. Where did this lead? It led to thousands of unemployed.

The time has come when men in big businesses will no longer reap huge profits at the expense of the man whose labors made those profits possible, but will have to pay labor an adequate wage for service rendered. It is only in this way that the wheels of progress will again rotate. The money will not be cornered by a certain few but will be more evenly distributed. A fair profit is sufficient.

"The Poet's Place."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial entitled "The Poet's Place" is the most heartening and attractive paragraph that possibly could be written on the subject.

Our country is a commercial one, therefore the commercial artist, who is anything but a poet, approaches our public and speaks in its language. He can make the public believe that a true artist should live doing beautiful creations alone and needs no contact with the world.

I believe an institution once published an article saying something to the effect that a person who buys a painting is more artistic than the one who paints the picture, because appreciation and money are finer than art. During the Wilson Administration there was a sort of drive to get artists isolated in the country. Art is the interpretation of the beauties of God's nature to the best in man's nature, and it takes God, the artist and the public to make a triangle which might well be studied in the place of the triangle too popular in many plays and books.

And Liras Are Figures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have long since come to the conclusion that sums larger than the amount usually received as weekly wages, salaries, earnings or dividends have absolutely no meaning whatever to the mind of the average individual connected with the newspaper business and that extends from editors down through the staff of assistant editors, associate editors, copy readers, proof readers and probably authors. In Richard Jarvis' recent articles headed "Il Duce's Firm Rule Holds Italy in Line," billions, millions and even hundreds of thousands all look alike. I enumerate not less than 11 errors in figures in that article. Perhaps it is because as King David held about men, "all figures are liras."

A Universal Language

Almost simultaneously with the news that several English cathedrals, including Portsmouth and Blackburn, are to enlarge their accommodations in order to deal with increasing congregations, comes the news that half a dozen others are on the verge of bankruptcy. These latter include cathedrals as famous as the thirteenth century Salisbury in the south, fourteenth century Lichfield, in whose cloisters Dr. Johnson and David Garrick walked as boys together; Ripon and Carlisle in the north, and Wells in the west.

It is possible that their financial difficulties, which arise in part from recent economic changes in their constitution that are not yet fully worked out, may be only temporary, but they are none the less acute. It would be a thousand pities if stringent circumstances compelled the authorities to allow to fall into neglect the noble structures which have been the delight and inspiration of many centuries and the visiting peoples of many nations.

Architecture, unlike even music, is a universal language. The Taj Mahal carries its message of love and remembrance as clearly to the populations of the West as to those of India. So is it with these churches. None can miss the significance of the power and strength of righteousness that speaks in the firmly proportioned massiveness of the stones of Wells. Grace and joy are lyrical in the delicacy of Lichfield. It is earnestly to be hoped that England (and not England alone) will see to it that these magnificent and eloquent buildings encounter no danger of neglect.

The Post Impressionist

Infant Industry.

Postoffice, Thursday.

IT isn't often that the dean of a law school descends to discussion of even master-thugs. Generally he keeps himself swathed in the royal robes of legal theory. Yet once in a while the growth of common crime becomes so great as to move an Olympian to theorizing upon its philosophic aspects, and such a growth has moved Dr. Kirchwey to speech about the allegedly purely American process known to us vulgarians as racketeering.

Dr. George Washington Kirchwey, LL. D., is dean of the Columbia University Law School. His list of titles has included those of Director of the Criminological Department of the New York School of Social Work, Vice President of the New York Prison Association, President of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology. But he has also had practical experience: he has been warden of Sing Sing.

And it is he who calls what we call racketeering peculiarly American.

The word "racket," in its current sense, is old; the word "racketeering" is new. Every criminal specialist's specialty was long his "racket." But at least the term "racketeering"—for the organized exploitation of crime—is a recent growth.

Having, however, established these verbal facts, our good Dean proceeds to prove that there are only certain elements new about the thing the latter word designates. We have for years had, he reminds us, the racketeering that took the form of operating some wholly illegal occupation—particularly during the Noble Experiment. Now, of course, we have that form which "consists in the wholesale practice of levying tribute on an occupation, itself . . . perfectly lawful, under the guise of furnishing protection." But even this "is new only in the extent to which it has come to dominate the scene."

In medieval Europe a common feature of commercial life was the exaction of tribute—by unauthorized bands—from itinerant merchants who sought admission to towns where they hoped to trade. Then there were those jolly freebooters who, in good Queen Bess' day, took "blackmail"—for that is where the word "blackmail" appears to have started—from such travelers through the north of England as could not defend themselves. And there was, until Mussolini arrived, the thoroughgoing Camorra in Naples.

Yes, and here at home, and during that ancient epoch described as "the World War period," we had "instances of the blowing-up of buildings in course of construction. . . . In the bootlegging era the same or equally effective methods were not infrequently employed to keep the proprietors of night clubs and speakeasies loyal to the interests that asserted claims to their exclusive devotion."

Then was the El Dorado, the California and the Klondike of the American pioneer-racketeer. But it was too good to last. A time came when the rivers of illegal liquor no longer carried their golden sands. Othello's occupation was going. Should it be permitted to go?

Never!

"With the decline of bootlegging," Dr. Kirchwey reminds us, "the operators of that industry turned more to the control of legitimate occupations by the methods above indicated." Thus he writes in "The World Today," a magazine published by the Encyclopedia Britannica people, no less. And gradually the operators—of the "protection" system, not of the encyclopedia—extended "their sway to cover nearly every type of industry, from the erection of skyscrapers to the operation of ice cream parlors."

This is an explanation that we seem to have heard before. Dr. Kirchwey's philosophizing upon it is, however, his own.

Although the origins of racketeering, in its cruder phases, lie far back among the chronicles of mankind, and although some of its less efficient manifestations are to be detected in the records of other lands before Columbus stumbled upon America, its present-day perfection is, the Dean insists, distinctly of our own time and our own U. S. A.

He believes that a country's crime, "in the forms in which it displays itself, as well as the rate of its occurrence, is a natural by-product of the type of civilization which that country has developed." And he believes that the modern American racketeer is therefore typically American.

Our Dean compares our racketeers to some of our other prominent citizens—to prove his case: The racketeer "knows (American) politics well enough to play his part—not always a humble one—in them; he knows (American) business practices well enough to employ them for his own lawless ends, and he has all the facilities for information and communication—the newspaper, the telephone, the radio, the motor car, even the flying machine—equally at his disposal. Incidentally, he has learned, perhaps by bitter experience, that the lone wolf, like the lamb in Wall street, leads a precarious existence, and he sees . . . that, for security as well as for power, organization is the indispensable thing."

All this is true. But is it all—all, we mean, that is to be said on the Americanism of racketeering? There are some shady politics in Europe, where there are, as well, newspapers and telephones, radios, automobiles and airplanes—where there are even a few stock markets.

Can it be that, hushed up by their governments and censored from their press, there is also racketeering, "American" racketeering, in those halcyon lands—and that the Dean knows nothing about it?

Action and Action.

IT'S a law of gravity, of chemistry or of something that when action encounters action there is liable to be an explosion. Thus it was when Mr. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, an exponent of action on the one hand, and Mr. Roosevelt, an exponent of action, on the other, came together.

BARGERON

I have never known a more active president of the chamber than Mr. Harriman. Until his coming here the presidency was, I am of the impression, a more or less honorary place. The chamber was active enough with its statements and questionnaires about how business stood on the matters of the day, but it seemed to be rather routine work, something handled by the executive secretary.

• • • •

With Mr. Harriman it has been different. It is hard to think of one any more active in the New Deal than he has been. He broke bread with the brain trusters, agreed with them that the old order had to go, frequently visited with Mr. Roosevelt and in the meantime put across the NRA. I still maintain that he had more to do with Mr. Roosevelt's swallowing the NRA than any other one man.

Now, no one, I suppose, will deny Mr. Roosevelt's activity. Action and more action is his philosophy of Government. It keeps the opposition bewildered so that it does not know whether it is coming or going. The question is arising as to whether it is not bewildering the business element of the public to the same extent, but that is beside the point.

He and Mr. Harriman have symbolized, to me, the new theory of action as opposed to our former laissez faire. It was inevitable that they would sooner or later step on one another's toes.

• • • •

It seems that Mr. Harriman got so active that his contacts with the brain trust and with the President were not in themselves active enough. He got impatient. He sought to develop into a counselor, not a quiet counselor behind the scenes, but one on record out before the public. In this connection the chamber submitted a little questionnaire to the President saying that to reassure the country he should answer it.

Mr. Roosevelt replied yesterday by saying he couldn't be answering the questionnaires of organizations, that if he did it for one he would have to do it for all.

That in the terminology of the old days would be called a spanking, a spanking of Mr. Harriman and the United States Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Roosevelt's treatment must have been intended to imply that he considered the great chamber along with the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, with the countless associations which men form to get together and pass away the time. What would seem a blow most difficult for the chamber to survive was the implication that he considers the chamber in the same light as the National Manufacturers' Association, or Mr. Rand's council for the Nation. Heaven forbid!

At any rate, it means that Mr. Harriman must begin all over again. He must start at the bottom with his talent for cultivating men and selling them ideas and work up the ladder just as he did when in his quiet way he sold the NRA. Or maybe there is the suggestion in the President's rebuff that he should be content with having put across the NRA. Unquestionably nothing in this Adiminstration has given Mr. Roosevelt so much trouble.

The whole incident is, however, an example of how things have changed. There was a time when Presidents publicly spanked the chamber to show the crowd they were not afraid of big business, while big business went right ahead doing what it wanted. Nobody got more of a kick than I when Mr. Coolidge once rebuked the organization. The crowd will probably chuckle over this incident, also, but it is not likely that business—which has to put men back to work if they are to be put back—will do any chuckling.

Indeed, our values have shifted.

Traffic Protested To Aid Georgetown

Ihlder Urges Board Not to Increase Volume.

John Ihlder, United States Chamber of Commerce housing expert and one of the original "go back to Georgetown" residents, yesterday urged the Public Utilities Commission not to do anything which would increase the traffic flow over P and Q streets in Georgetown.

Mr. Ihlder's letter was aimed at some of the proposed street car and bus rerouting proposals now under study by the commission.

Sending an abnormal amount of traffic over one or two streets, Mr. Ihlder said, inevitably meant the traversed territory became a "corridor."

"Georgetown," he said, "is a small, compact community which, because of certain unreplaceable characteristics, has maintained its value more steadily than any other section of Washington. A heavier volume of traffic than is now carried on P and Q streets and Dumbarton avenue would be destructive. This traffic is already too heavy."

Real New Deal Seems On Way for Canadians

Governmental Control of Business Begins to Gain Favor.

(Special Correspondent of The Post).
Ottawa, Canada.

EVENTS in Canada have a way of lagging a few years behind similar events in the United States, so it is possible this country may yet have its counterpart to the career of emergency legislation, labor tension and so on that has been the American experience. But so far, in spite of its reiteration, the phrase "A New Deal for Canada," always has had something misleading about it.

Roughly speaking, the American New Deal was a National policy introduced at a remarkable crossroads in American history. The bank failures and grave sense of uncertainty that they caused coincided with the election of a new President. The United States have been trying since to digest a monumental mass of measures passed swiftly into law.

Canada got her last new government in 1930 when the depression was on, but was far from being then what it was to become. Thanks to the solidity of her banking system, backed by the government, there was no financial panic. The initial tempo of governmental action at Ottawa in face of conditions which grew worse was slower and less intense than that which marked the NRA.

What was, therefore, a New Deal—with all the cards laid down simultaneously in the United States—has been in Canada rather an extension (now somewhat quickened) of social and economic legislation which in the aggregate may constitute a New Deal. So far it has not in the least been out of keeping with a normal constitutional evolution.

Another factor, the set-up of provincial government alongside of and in many respects independent of the federal power, has contributed to diffusing the impact of new legislation.

Under the constitution of the British North America Act, each province has sole jurisdiction over trade and commerce, and over labor conditions, for example, within its own boundaries. Their various governments have therefore been trying to grapple with some of the most serious problems by themselves. While this procedure may not have been very successful, it has relieved the pressure on the national government.

Five-Part Program Stressed at Ottawa.

OTTAWA has devoted its efforts to a five-part program. Installing and administering, through a tariff board, a new high-tariff system, was one. Trying to guide and serve the farmers by a wheat agreement, which fell through for international reasons, was the second. The third was setting up a marketing board which takes agriculture even more completely under its protective and compelling wing. The final parts were developing a national radio system and founding a central bank. All have been debated at great length in Parliament, and in due course the appropriate measures were placed on the statute books.

The provinces one by one have struggled to balance their budgets, look after (in conjunction with Ottawa) the unemployed, and regenerate industry and commerce. Alberta has legislated a series of codes; codes are being worked out in British Columbia; Ontario is now talking of calling a special provincial conference to discuss a system of codes, and Quebec, the most conservative of all, has put through a series of new laws on the same lines.

But now the governments seem to have reached an impasse. During the next two or three months, it appears a determined effort will be made to put an end to what is becoming an intolerable situation. Mr. Bennett, the prime minister, has issued a remarkable invitation to all the provinces to met in conference to discuss a number of specified questions and to try to reach some agreement on the extent to which the provinces will give the federal government power to act for the whole country on matters which are now strictly "States," provincial rights.

The impasse may be said to center on such questions as labor conditions, minimum wage laws, the control of industrial and commercial development and management, and unemployment. "The forgotten man" has not figured very largely in the political vocabulary, or perhaps even the political maneuvers of Canada. But now, as a result of the persistent evil of nearly 1,000,000 unemployed, he is beginning to! Moreover, an entirely new complexion has been given to the social question by what is known as the Stevens Pamphlet.

Conditions Assailed, Made National Issue.

THE Honourable H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, is chairman of a royal commission on price spreads. In a speech last January, and much more ardently in a pamphlet issued by him last July, a national issue has been created out of the disgraceful conditions of workers, and the disgraceful operations of financiers, industrialists, and other exploiters, which have been partly revealed by the investigations of his commission.

Sweated labor, flagrant disregard of the existing and wholly inadequate laws governing wages and labor conditions, together with watered-stock operations, profiteering in the midst of desperately hard times, and other practices too familiar to mention, are known to have gone on on a big scale. There is now an almost menacing demand from all quarters that they be dealt with summarily.

But national legislation on these matters is impossible yet, for the constitutional reasons indicated above. Hence the tremendous interest centering only on the provincial conference, but also on the program of social legislation that it is confidently expected the Government will put forward this winter. Something of a crisis is approaching in Canadian evolution, brought on by the coincidence of two issues that react far down into the life of the people—social justice and constitutional government.

That lies in the future. But the alignment of political principle now going on is also very interesting. By and large the ranks of the workers, the moderately and less successful business men who have suffered from the squeeze of the big interests, the intellectuals, the C. C. F., that is the Socialist party, the trades and labor congress, and the government particularly during the last session, are all in some degree intent on a new and real control of "business" by government. There is a boom in muck-raking, and a free market in vituperation against "exploitation."

Government Control Opposed by "Interests."

AGAINST these are the big business interests, finance, the private railway system of the C. P. R., the Chamber of Commerce, particularly in its recent convention, and many leading figures in the Liberal party. All of these are opposed to the extension of Government control over business, want much of what already exists done away with, and call for the release of business from the tariff, planning and regulative restrictions under which it now has to operate.

There is much intermingling of motives, parties and interests, and even these categories are not exact. But the cleavage between one set of ideas and the other is apparent and cuts across many old classifications.

While Canada has not yet plunged into a New Deal, therefore, some of its conditioning features are now emerging, and it looks as if the cards are being stacked—for something.

Knowledge Means Little Unless It Is Used

By Robert Quillen.

Much snobbish nonsense is written and spoken concerning illiterates.

The art of writing and reading is nothing more than a substitute for speech. There would have been no reason for it if everybody had lived within reach of his neighbor's voice.

It began as picture making. If a householder wished to borrow a distant neighbor's stone hammer, he drew a picture of it on a piece of bark and sent this by a servant. The neighbor guessed its meaning.

Picture making was slow work and in the course of time gave way to the making of little marks. This wasn't a difficult art. Anybody could make little marks on paper. The trick was in the general agreement that certain marks should mean certain things.

Three x's at the bottom of a letter have no meaning unless there is an agreement that cross marks shall stand for kisses. The little marks used in shorthand are meaningless to most of us, which means that we are illiterates in shorthand.

If literacy means no more than the ability to interpret little code marks on a piece of paper, why is it so important?

As a matter of fact, it would be unimportant to an individual eager for knowledge if he could find some person willing and able to tell him, by word of mouth, everything that our race has learned.

The importance of the trick lies in the fact that it enables learned men to record their knowledge and wisdom and preserve it for others.

Thus a youth who learns to interpret these records has a kind of Aladdin's lamp by means of which he can call up the world's great men, both living and dead, and require them to tell him all they know. There is a trick indeed!

But knowing the trick is no proof of superiority. Any fool can learn it. The important thing is to use the trick after it is learned.

Does the ability to masticate food prove a man superior if he sits at a loaded table and is too lazy to eat?

Many people who feel superior to illiterates read nothing at all or else limit their readings to useless and foolish matter on which an intelligent illiterate would not waste his time.

Knowing the rules of bridge and the value of the cards adds nothing to the social equipment of an individual who won't play.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Sir Nigel Playfair.

Sir Nigel Playfair, the distinguished English theater manager and director, died August 19 of this year. On July 31 he was acting in the open-air performance in Regents Park, London, of Shakespeare's "As You Like It," when he was suddenly taken ill.

He was one of the most interesting, most cultivated, most charming, most inspiring theater-directors I ever knew. The son of a well-known physician, he was born in 1874, received his education at Harrow and University College, Oxford, and while he was an undergraduate, became intensely interested in the theater. He was a member of the Oxford University Dramatic Society, and acted in many parts.

For some years he seemed to be contented with his career as a professional actor, not knowing his real distinction was coming. In or about the year 1918, he was looking through old clothes stores in Hammersmith, London, on the watch for costumes for the stage, when he came across the little Lyric Theater and fell into conversation with the managress. A movie syndicate had just offered a sum of money for the building, and when he heard this, he immediately offered about $250 more, a sum in all of over $10,000. Arnold Bennett lent him the money, and observe the far-reaching effects.

John Drinkwater had been struggling for years, in a vain attempt to make theatrical receipts cover expenses. Mr. Playfair undertook his new play, "Abraham Lincoln," put it on at the just-purchased Lyric Theater, and it ran three years!

John Drinkwater has never known the pangs of poverty since that opening night and Director Playfair went on to fame and fortune. He decided to try light opera, and put on a piece that had made a hit in London 200 years previously, John Gay's "Beggar's Opera." This ran for 1,463 performances.

For 14 years Director Playfair continued to direct the Lyric Theater, and everybody in London knew that whatever was put on there would be worth seeing. His term of continuous theater-management was the longest since that of Tree or Alexander.

His method was to have no stars, but to cultivate first-rate team play, with a competent and intelligent and devoted company. His devotion to the highest ideals of the theater received recognition in 1928, when he was knighted. When his name appeared as Sir Nigel Playfair, a London newspaper said he was "a man who, tearing aside the triumphs and commercial successes he could have scored in the West End, took and old theater in a back street in Hammersmith and showed the capital that the stage could be witty without being silly—entertaining without being absurd."

He acted in many parts, finally going on the screen. In August of this year, in a motion picture in New York, he appeared with Leslie Howard and others.

I had the honor of dining with him and with Lady Playfair in London in 1928. He was the ideal English gentleman, cultivated, unaffected, full of human kindness.

Maryland to Get Weekly Car Pass

Trolley and Bus Riders Are to Benefit.

The weekly pass system, inaugurated some months ago by the Capital Transit Co., will be extended to street cars and buses crossing from the District into nearby Maryland, it was announced yesterday.

The system will become effective Sunday. Passes may be purchased aboard the cars and buses and at 1416 F street northwest. For each zone in Maryland an extra 25 cents will be added to the cost of the pass.

Chevy Chase and Cabin John passes will cost $1.25. On the Hyattsville-Beltsville line passes will cost $1.25, $1.50 and $1.75, according to whether the zones are first or second or third.

Passes will extend as far as the fourth zone on the Rockville car line. Bus passes on the Hyattsville-Laurel run, yet to be issued, will run from $1.50 to $2.50.

Corn Huskers to Compete.

Fairmont, Minn., Sept. 26 (AP).—Minnesota will be the corn husking capital of the world this year, when the pick of the Nation's huskers assemble here November 8 for the National championship contest.

Maryland's Political Battlefront

For the first time in a generation, Maryland this fall will will be the scene of a heated, epochal political battle. Only twice since the Civil War has Maryland's tradition of a Democratic Governor been broken . . . in 1895 and in 1911. Once again the Republicans believe they can win . . . and they are fighting hard to realize that high hope.

On one side of the impending clash is debonair, aristocratic Albert Cabell Ritchie, Governor for the past 15 years. Challenging him is determined, hard-hitting Harry W. Nice. These same men fought for the election in 1919. Ritchie won . . . by only 165 votes. Can he do it again?

In a searching article, Franklyn Waltman, jr., analyzes the issues at stake and with broad strokes paints a vivid picture of the election possibilities.

Footsteps on the Sand.

WHILE we are waiting for a definitive biography of Robert E. Lee—perhaps from Dr. Douglas Freeman, who has been doing notable research work for some years now—a number of scholars have looked into short periods of Lee's life. Very hard to surpass will be Walter Creigh Preston's "Lee: West Point and Lexington" (Antioch Press, Yellow Springs, Ohio, $2). Lee's four years as a cadet, his 2½ years as superintendent of the Military Academy, and his five years (the last of his life) as president of Washington College, Lexington, Va., provide a wealth of material which is both new in the field and highly interesting to read about.

THEO. HALL.

Mr. Preston digs up the very words with which Lee reprimanded young J. E. B. Stuart, his future chief of cavalry, for boyish exuberance. And in the last pages we learn that in 1869, 12 years before Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Commerce was founded, Lee had proposed a similar idea at Washington. Unfortunately, there were no funds. But Lee, in the same year, did establish the first school of journalism in this country and most likely the first in the world.

You'll find this able monograph filled with new light on the "Good Gray Commander."

Thomas Mason was a mariner and ship-owner during the Revolution. He broke the British blockade to bring munitions to Washington; along with Robert Morris and others, he dipped into his own purse to finance the Continental Army; his own life was full of action and color.

Mason's great-great-grandson, Dr. Henry Pleasants, jr., has written as lively and entertaining a memoir of his ancestor as one could wish—"Thomas Mason: Adventurer" (Winston, $2.50). It is a handsome book, with map end-papers, pen-and-ink illustrations, and photographs of old letters. And the story reads like a romantic novel, done to an antiquarian's taste.

Biographies have been written about men with not one-tenth the claim to fame of Benjamin Rush, and yet not until now has one appeared on this most active and many-sided of men.

He was a strenuous patriot during the Revolution and the stormy political days which followed. He was the crusading reformer of the Army Medical Department during the war. He helped Thomas Paine issue his famous work, "Common Sense." And he was the only doctor to sign the Declaration of Independence.

But those items don't begin to scratch the surface of Rush's achievements. He founded Dickinson College and the College of Physicians as well. And he was the country's first formal professor of chemistry, first author of a chemistry text, first psychiatrist, first author of a book on mental diseases, and the founder of the first free dispensary, the first temperance society, the first anti-slave society, and the first Sunday school system.

With such materials, Dr. Nathan G. Goodman has written a passionately detailed yet constantly interesting work — "Benjamin Rush: Physician and Citizen, 1746-1813" (University of Pennsylvania Press, $4).

When the Red Revolution came in Russia, Countess Alexandra Tolstoy, daughter of the great novelist, stayed on the family estate. What she saw of the Soviet regime in her life there, in her imprisonment and in the effects on the people about her, makes pointed, pungent reading in "I Worked for the Soviet" (Yale University Press, $3. She worked all right, but her heart wasn't in it.

Not for 25 years have we had a biography of John Brown. Now, after three years of digging through the records, David Karsner gives us "John Brown: Terrible 'Saint'" (Dodd Mead, $3). Though written with a good deal of drama, it keeps a judicial attitude and avoids both condemnation and eulogy. But there seems a near-sighted insistence upon Brown's importance. Speaking of the institution of slavery, Mr. Karsner says, "Old John Brown's crowbar rolled it over." I thought we had done with the single-man theory of history.

Chaucer, it is impossible to disagree with Henry Dwight Sedgwick, has been too long under the thumbs of the scholars interested in "which he read first, Ovid, or the 'Roman de la Rose,'" and such punditical matters. To bring him out into general reading—and Chaucer, in spite of his archaic language, is the most readable of the great English poets—Mr. Sedgwick has written "Dan Chaucer: An Introduction to the Poet, His Poetry and His Times" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2.75).

With an easy, genial temper, sometimes with too much floweriness, but always with a sure appreciation, Mr. Sedgwick seems the right man to guide one to a first slight of "'the first Englishman.' There are notes on versification, long looks at the history of the time, even hints on what to read and what not to read on the Chaucer shelf (he leaves the bawdy tales to your discretion). Altogether, it strikes me as a grand book in which to browse for the flavor of a great age and its spokesman.

Mr. Sedgwick has written many historical studies and romances. He is the brother of Ellery Sedgwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly. You may wonder why the Atlantic Monthly Press did not issue the book—but it seems that the Sedgwick clan swore a compact never to have a book published by a firm with which one of them was connected. Which is entirely sensible.

The Once Over

By

H. I. Phillips

The Wrong Boat Was Doped.

Well, the British mug-lifting operation was a failure. The invading doctors realized it was a major operation, but they put the wrong crew under the anesthetic.

• • • •

The Endeavour was probably the swiftest boat, but most of the time she was handled by men in a deep stupor.

• • • •

Both boats were fast, but the race committee was faster than either. The way those boys rushed to the nearest exit and evaded the Sopwith protest set a new speed record for wind, air or water.

• • • •

The most important thing demonstrated by the series was that a race committee is a race committee the world over and that the ancient tradition of never becoming involved in a private fight remains unbroken.

• • • •

There were times when the Endeavour seemed unbeatable, but her crew made more errors for the series than the Brooklyn Baseball Club made all season.

• • • •

At the outset the British vessel had Mr. Vanderbilt, the noted bridge expert, looking so confused that spectators thought he was "dummy."

• • • •

After the second defeat he called in so many assistants that it was even expected he might send for Culbertson and Lenz.

• • • •

After losing the first two rubbers, Mr. Vanderbilt bid a little slam and made it.

• • • •

It was a signal victory for the professional crew as against an amateur crew of Corinthians. Mr. Sopwith fired his professional crew after a strike for more pay and hired amateurs. The Rainbow victory will probably be hailed as a victory by Organized Labor.

• • • •

The tip-off on the superiority of the American crew came in the fifth race when the Rainbow spinnaker tore and fell on the deck, but was removed and replaced with lightning speed. If that spinnaker had fallen on the Endeavour, the crew would still be trying to get out from under.

Nye Will Seek Confiscatory Wartime Tax

Goal Is to Strip War of All Profit, He Says; Du Pont Protests.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Nye, of North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee, will press in the next Congress a bill for confiscatory Federal income taxes in time of war.

Making this announcement to newspapermen yesterday, Nye said he would fight for this legislation as his reply to assertions of munitions manufacturers and militarists that the Government should not nationalize the munitions industry. He intended, he said, to strip war entirely of its profits.

His bill, Nye said, would provide for doubling income taxes on incomes below $10,000, and taxes of 98 per cent on all incomes above that figure, to become effective on the day that the United States declared war. He said the measure would apply indiscriminately against individuals, companies and corporations.

Cites Broad Support.

"The country is with us on this," he declared as he interrupted a conference with William John, British member of Parliament. To point to more than 10,000 telegrams, cablegrams, letters and post cards from people and organizations in this country and abroad, urging his committee to go the limit in describing the activities of the munitions industry.

John, one of the whips of the British Labor party, called on Nye to discuss the American investigation. He said British public opinion had been greatly stirred by revelations in the United States and predicted the British Parliament would order such an inquiry.

Stacks of congratulatory letters were piled high on the Senator's desk as he spoke. The committee action in suppressing some foreign names in correspondence introduced as evidence, he remarked, had brought a wave of indignant protest from correspondents.

Want "Whole Truth."

He read brief extracts:

"Rats dread the light."

"Carry on, no matter who is injured by the facts."

"Don't let influence or money slow you up."

"Give us the whole truth."

Efforts to have Nye go abroad to crusade for curbing the munitions industry already are under way. He has accepted tentatively an invitation to speak in Toronto, Canada. Suggestions have been made that he speak in England and continental Europe.

Meanwhile, something of a mystery surrounded the five cables obtained from E. I. du Pont de Nemours' file. They were kept out of the committee record two weeks ago because it was feared they might cause "destruction of life and property" in Argentina if made public.

Du Pont Protests.

Nye said these cables were given to the State Department Monday. Ambassador Felipe A. Espil, who called at the State Department several times this week, yesterday said he had not yet received the mysterious messages.

"I'll promptly transmit them to Buenos Aires when they are delivered," he said.

From another quarter came confirmation that the call of Lammot du Pont, of the Du Pont interests, at the State Department Tuesday was to complain that the inquiry had seriously affected his company's business abroad.

Venezuela yesterday joined the growing list of nations objecting to statements made to the committee in testimony or in evidence. Dr. Pedro M. Arcaya, Venezuelan Minister here, sharply denied that Venezuelan officials personally profited by any commissions on arms transactions. He said all such discounts went into the federal treasury.

Chemical Dividends Placed Before Court

Richmond, Sept. 26 (AP).—Fifteen shareholders of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., including George S. Kemp and J. Luther Moon, members of the board of directors, today filed suit here to compel payment of dividends to prior preference stockholders.

They ask the court to advise the directors whether they can vote for and pay a dividend on the 7 per cent preference stock without assuming personal liability for their action under provisions of the securities exchange act. The proposed dividend would be paid out of net profits earned in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934.

Court Upholds Sewing Of Sponge in Patient

Tallahassee, Fla., Sept. 26 (AP). The Supreme Court today held a surgeon may sew up a sponge in a patient where speed in removing the patient from the operating tables requires it, but the surgeon should notify the patient of the sponge so relief could be gained later.

The court handed down this opinion in a case where Mrs. May Smith charged Dr. G. M. Zeagler, Palatka surgeon, with having "carelessly and negligently failed and neglected" to remove from an incision a sponge used in the performance of an abdominal operation.

For good digestion
—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect... it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions... and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemo-glo-bin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices... so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important.
By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion... sound sleep... and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Pre-Columbus Relics Found

Mound Builders' Village Is Excavated by Maryland Man.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.). Langdon B. Backus, of Brownsville, Washington County, Md., returning from Massie County, Ill., where he was a member of the expedition from the University of Chicago, told of the discovery of a village of mound builders of the pre-Columbus periods. Excavations have been in progress for several months.

The group of archeologists discovered effigy vessels, deer bones, and hard-baked clay fire basins still containing ashes.

The expedition, said Backus, was unable to definitely fix the date for these structures, but they are presumed to have been built by a race of people long before the time America was discovered.

Work will be resumed in the mound builders' village next summer and all articles found will be exhibited at the University of Chicago.

Treasure Hunt On in Maryland For Historic Articles for Show

Dorchester Seeks Pieces for Community Exhibit October 3.

Cambridge, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.). Dorchester County has started a treasure hunt for articles of historic value to be exhibited at the tercentenary booth of the community show to be held October 3 in the hall at Madison, under the sponsorship of the Madison Home and Community Club.

The first person to offer a contribution to this booth was John Sudy, Austrian artist, living here. He will enter a painting of Old Trinity Church, Church Creek, the oldest house of worship in Dorchester County. Mr. Sudy has depicted the early church, showing an outside staircase, used at that time as an entrance to the gallery, where indentured servants sat during service. The picture also shows a small band of Indians watching the congregation leaving church.

Other unique entries are expected at the tercentenary booth, which will be in charge of the Misses Myrtle Bromwell and Faith Clift, who will wear Colonial costumes once worn by belles of Madison.

Large entries of farm products, canned goods, baked foods, needlecraft and flowers are expected from many sections of the county. Mrs. Ralph Asplen will demonstrate fancy cake icings, and club members will serve in the Japanese tea garden, which will be used as a refreshment center.

Miss Florence Mason, of Salisbury, district home demonstration agent, and J. P. Brown, agricultural agent for Wicomico County, will judge the entries and award ribbons. The chairman of the show is Mrs. Charles A. Bromwell, who heads a committee composed of William H. Maguire, president; Mrs. Fred Weber and Mrs. Charles West, vice presidents; Mrs. Norman Travers, secretary, and Mrs. William R. McKnight, treasurer.

Miss Wright, British Aid To Be Wed

Ceremony Is Set for Near Future in London.

Group Capt. Reid Will Bring Bride to Washington.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Mrs. Hamilton Wright has announced the engagement of her youngest daughter, Miss Leslie Livermore Wright, to Group Capt. George Ranald Macfarlane Reid, D. S. O., C. M., of the Royal Air Force, now air attache of the British Embassy in Washington.

The announcement comes as a surprise to the many friends of Miss Wright in Washington, for she has been abroad, "visiting friends" in Scotland this summer, and was due to return to this country to join her mother and her two sisters, Miss Rosalind Wright and Miss Barbara Wright, in the very near future.

Kin of Late Senator.

Miss Wright is the daughter of the late Mr. Hamilton Wright and a granddaughter of the late Senator William Drew Washburne. She is a great-niece of the late Mr. Elihu B. Washburne, one-time Secretary of State, and American Minister to France many years ago.

Capt. Reid, who has been at the British Embassy here for the last two years, is the son of Mrs. George Macfarlane-Reid, of Dunara, Trestwick, Ayrshire, Scotland, and the late Mr. Reid. Miss Wright has been visiting with Mrs. Reid this summer at her charming old home, and had planned to return to Washington next week. The wedding was to have taken place later in the autumn at the summer home of Mrs. Wright in Maine, but the date has been advanced because of the inability of Mrs. Reid to attend.

To Wed in London.

So the wedding will take place in the very near future in London, and Capt. Reid, who has been vacationing in Scotland, will come to Washington shortly thereafter with his bride.

Mrs. Wright and her two other daughters recently returned to Washington from a summer spent in New England and have moved from their home at 2005 Massachusetts avenue to the house owned by Mrs. Stokes Halkett on Sheridan Circle.

Miss Leslie Wright attended schools here and abroad, and was presented to Capital society two seasons ago. Since then she has been spending much time in New York, making frequent trips to Washington during the winter.

Spectators at International Polo Matches

Underwood & Underwood.

Capital Society Sees U. S. Win At Polo Match

Officials and Diplomats From Many Nations Attend Game.

Three days of waiting for the second game of the international polo matches between the United States and Mexican Army teams, which was postponed from Sunday until yesterday because of a soggy field, did not dampen the enthusiasm of the spectators. Yesterday's game was witnessed by an even larger crowd than that of a week ago, and though the game, won by the United States Army team, decided the matches, the game next Sunday will be of real interest to polo fans.

The Secretary of War, Mr. George H. Dern, eager to see at least a part of the game, arrived hurriedly from his office after the start, and after greeting the Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Don Fernando Gonzalez Roa, settled himself to enjoy the game. His two daughters, Mrs. Harry Baxter, wearing a smart knitted suit of pale rose with a brown hat banded with the same shade of rose, and Miss Betsy Dern, in a frock of blue printed crepe and a large dark blue hat, arrived early and remained until the very end.

The Ambassador of Mexico had with him his two pretty nieces, Senorita Dolores Chico Alatorre and Senorita Sara Chico Alatorre, both in smart printed frocks and tall hats of soft black felt, and the Military Attache of the Embassy and Senora de Axcarte, the latter wearing a sheer woolen frock of grey plaid with a small black hat. Also with the Ambassador were the Counselor of the Embassy and Senora de Campos-Ortiz with their young son. Nearby sat the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring. Mrs. Woodring wore a woolen frock of biscuit color with a small felt hat to match, trimmed with soft rust colored velvet.

Ambassador of Spain Present.

The Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Calderon with a party which included members of the staff were there, cheering for the Mexican team, as well as for the United States team. Senora de Calderon was in a gown of black satin with a small tricorn hat to match and silver fox furs. In the adjoining box were the Minister-Counselor of the Embassy and Senora de Yrujo, the latter recently returned from a summer spent in her native Mexico. She wore a frock of print crepe in shades of blue and rose and a navy blue felt beret. With her was her sister, Senora de Aspe, who is vsiiting in Washington, and who wore a frock of dark blue print with red and white, and a navy blue hat.

The first secretary of the embassy, Senor Don Luis Olivares, and the second secretary, Senor Don Ramon Padilla, were in the ambassador's box, as were the Agricultural Attache of the Embassy and Senora de Echegaray, the latter wearing smart black satin, and the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy and Signora Sbernadori. Signora Sbernadori has recently recuperated from a recent illness, and looked particularly well yesterday in a suit of brown woolen with a hat to match and a scarf of silver fox.

The Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Sokolowski were accompanied by their two young sons, and not far away sat Senora de Urquiza, wife of the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, with her young daughter.

Many Others Attend.

A gay little group stopped to chat before going to their boxes, including Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, the second secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senor Don Eduardo Vivot, who was escorting pretty Miss Hope Jackson; Miss Helen Wardman, in a tailored frock of gray woolen, with a small black hat, and Miss Alicia Rogers, who wore black and white satin with a black off-the-face hat.

Gen. and Mrs. Peyton C. March were accompanied by the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, and Gen. Blanton Winship, Governor General of Puerto Rico, wearing a light palm beach suit, followed soon after to his box. Gen. and Mrs. "Billy" Mitchell, the latter in a beige frock and brown hat, were glimpsed as they visited from box to box between the chukkers. The Undersecretary of State, Mr. William Phillips, was there as were the Chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department, Dr. Stanley Hornbeck; Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Walravens, and Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons, of the State Department.

Maj. John Eager, of Fort Hoyle, Md., was among the most interested spectators, for Maj. Eager is quite a polo player himself, and when he was stationed in Washington two years ago was a member of the War Department team.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor occupied a box, the latter wearing a gray-blue suit with a smart navy blue hat, and Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Carter, recently returned from a summer in Bermuda, were also seen chatting with an animated group. Mrs. Carter wore a black woolen suit and a small black hat of antelope.

Deb's Diary

Dear Diary: A few evenings ago some of us went down to see the Norfolk boat off. My, what a crowd! Mostly Navy, and it was so very much like the transport sailings in New York and San Francisco. My eyes may have been wrong, but was that Nancy Lesh bidding Aloha to one Ed Chase?

Now, who on earth would ever suspect or accuse an innocent little olive of anything exciting? Anyway they are very dangerous, at least Lowell Bradford will think so for some time to come. It started like this, at a recent party: "Lokey," who is passionately fond of said fruit, or is it nut, took one, then two; and one thing leading to another found to his and every one else's surprise that he had consumed one dish and the better part of another. Strange that he no longer likes them.

At last I have discovered the point in Mary Senate's always getting a corner on the table, be it lunch or dinner. Yesterday she admitteld that she liked to get several angles on the usual table chit chat. Along with Mary Katherine Spinks and Bette Hartz, she was ultra smart in her choice of a cunning blue hat—(again appear the points). She's sharp, that girl.

American Girls Should Dress According to Surroundings, Mexican Artist Declares

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A PRETTY woman does not interest Cueva del Rio, young Mexican artist, who recently returned from his native country to continue his work on the mural decoration at the Mexican Embassy.

"But a beautiful woman—well certainly," he said. "Mere prettiness has little to do with beauty, you know," he added, as he sat on a bench in the reception hall of the embassy, facing the wall that bears one of his colorful representations of Mexican life.

"To be pretty," he went on falteringly—for he has not yet completely mastered English — "a woman needs regular features, lovely hair and eyes, and a slender figure. But beauty is something else, altogether. It is—I hardly know how to explain it." He stopped, a puzzled expression on his face. He was silent for a moment, as if the words he needed were not in his English vocabulary.

Waiting, the reporter had that uneasy wait-until-the-next-issue feeling. She tried to help him. It might be simpler if he could think of anyone who approached his ideal of a beautiful woman. Could he?

Del Rio Is More.

Smile wrinkles gathered around his dark eyes. "Yes," he replied, obviously relieved. "Dolores del Rio. She is pretty—surely. But she is more; she is beautiful."

A copy of one of the artist's color pictures of the Mexican actress reminded the reporter that Dolores del Rio was, indeed, a pretty woman. But why did the artist think so? Was it because of her dark eyes, slightly aslant? Her softly curving mouth? Or her smooth hair sheathing her head like black wings?

"Her features make her pretty," he answered, "but what is more important, they are unusual enough to make her attractive.

"Look at her hair, for instance. As she wears it, straight and smooth, it makes her distinctive. If it were curled, it would detract from her, make her look like 'just another pretty brunette.'"

Did he mean to infer straight hair was necessary to beauty?

He smiled again. "Not in every case," he said. "But a dark-haired girl whose hair is not naturally waved looks better without a—a—" He paused, again groping for the right words.

"A permanent wave," supplied the reporter.

No Waves For Dark Ones.

"Yes. A dark-haired girl looks better without a permanent wave. At least," he added, half apologetically, "that is what I think."

"But Dolores del Rio's hair is not her best feature," he went on. "It is her eyes. They seem to reflect an inward charm that makes her beautiful."

Charm, he pointed out, is traditionally the salient asset of most Latin women.

True enough. But what, in his opinion, constituted charm?

"Poise and naturalness coupled with dignity," he answered. "No matter how pretty a woman is, if she is not poised, and if she does not appear to be natural, she is not attractive. If she does not conduct herself with a certain dignity, a certain serenity—she is not beautiful."

This led to a discussion of Mexican women as compared with women in the United States.

"Please do not think I am suggesting there are no beautiful women in this country," he said with Latin courtesy. "I have seen many attractive women here, many as beautiful as the loveliest women of Mexico. But, as a whole, I believe women of my country are more natural and more poised.

Harmonize With Backgrounds.

"And in, appearance, they are more in harmony with their surroundings. In Mexican cities, for instance, where the background is somewhat artificial, many women wear rouge, arrange their hair in the latest fashion and dress in Paris frocks. But in the country or in the villages, it is different. Rouge and up-to-date attire are not in keeping with rustic surroundings, and a woman whose apparel is not harmonious with the background against which she moves is never beautiful. Come with me, I will try to show you what I mean."

He led the way up the steps. At the first landing he pointed toward a figure in the mural decoration—a figure of a shawl-draped woman, typical of the women one sees in Mexican villages.

"You see how out of place and how unattractive that woman would be if her eyebrows were plucked, if her hair was waved, and if she wore a fashionable dress. She is much more attractive as she is."

The chief reason women in the United States are not as beautiful as they might be, he believes, is because they spend too much time thinking about their clothes and too little time considering the setting in which they will be worn. They are more concerned with being pretty than with being natural. He thinks, also, many are too much concerned with their careers to take time to be courteous.

More Time for Courtesy.

"But the average Mexican woman has no career to think about, because her chief interest centers around the home. Perhaps this is why she has more time to be courteous and charming."

It would seem this 25-year-old Mexican, considered by many critics one of Mexico's most promising artists, is almost as close an observer as he is an excellent colorist and caricaturist.

It would seem, also, that anyone who views his mural decorations would realize his ideas on beauty are not to be taken lightly. For this attractive, yet modest, young artist who began drawing cartoons for a Mexican periodical at the age of 13, is now completing a colorful and arresting representation of the most impressive features of his country. When the mural decoration at the Mexican Embassy is finished, virtually every type of Mexican native will be portrayed, including ambulant venders, Indian ceremonial dancers, women making tortillas, and men working in the fields. And every figure will be drawn against the magnificent and colorful background that impresses every visitor to Mexico.

"Do you think it really looks Mexican?" he asked, with the eagerness that is one of his most attractive characteristics. "I hope so. For if I can give visitors to the Embassy some idea of how charming Mexico really is, I shall be happy.

"Countries, you know," he added, "have personalities. And Mexico's personality is dynamic, fascinating. As attractive, in fact, as the personality of a woman who is not only pretty but very beautiful."

FERA Worker Likes Her Job Of Researching

Searching Through Relief Laws Is Exciting to Miss Hasse.

TO MOST persons the work of Adelaide Hasse would seem excessively dull. All day long she searches through heavy law books of the different States, seeking statutes that deal with relief work. Then she compiles these particular statutes into neat little booklets for the use of FERA employes and social service workers.

Nothing thrilling about that to most persons. But to Miss Hasse the job is nothing short of exciting. She said so yesterday afternoon as she sat at her desk, tucked away in a corner of the FERA library in the Walker-Johnson Building.

Most of the excitement comes from compiling relief notices of foreign countries, she admitted.

"It's like solving a jig-saw puzzle. You try to fit pieces into a certain pattern. Sometimes you have to hunt and hunt for the pieces," was the way Miss Hasse described her work.

"Here's an instance that's typical," she continued. "Last March I chanced to read in a German paper about an experiment Vienna was carrying on among tenement children. The account of the experiment was only a few lines long. I wanted to know more, much more, about it for the article I was doing on Austria. So I looked back through Austrian newspapers. Starting with the January issues, I read every page thoroughly, looking for something about tenement children in Vienna. Finally I found the story I was looking for. It was in a February issue of a labor publication."

And that discovery held as much thrill for Adelaide Hasse as the South Pole did for Admiral Byrd.

She has done research work for a good many years—"so many I'm not going to tell the exact number," she laughed. Before coming to the FERA last January as research consultant in the library, she did research in the New York public library on documents.

Since her arrival in Washington she has compiled the noninstitutional relief measures of Illinios, California, Pennsylyania, Alabama, Arkansas and Alaska. Before she is through she will have compiled similar measures of all the States.

It takes a certain type of person to make good in research work, according to Miss Hasse.

"Patience, an ability to handle endless detail thoroughly, and a rather studious turn of mind are essential," she explained. "The woman with those qualities shouldn't have much difficulty in getting into research work. The field is uncrowded."

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

ENTERTAINING the convalescent child, always a difficult task, is made more so when the illness is of such a nature that the patient must be kept in a darkened room. One mother has solved this problem with an ingenious idea.

"Give the child a pair of blunt scissors, a quantity of paper and a flashlight. Let him fold the paper several times and then start cutting it irregularly along the folded edge, niches and curves, small and large, to make a variegated design when the paper is unfolded. Now throw the shadow of the design onto the wall by playing the flashlight through the paper.

"A room with the shades drawn has sufficient light for cutting the irregular designs and is dark enough to make shadow pictures. Since the designs that can be made are unlimited, this game will afford entertainment for a long time."

Saturday—Why an Allowance?

Mrs. Pitts will give personal advice to Post readers on problems of child management. Address Alice Fox Pitts in care of The Washington Post.

Autogyro Steals Show As Communists Speak

Distinguished speakers from Soviet Russia attracted a crowd of 5,000 persons at a recent Communist demonstration in Hyde Park, London. But after the crowd had gathered it paid not the slightest attention to the speakers. Five thousand necks spent the entire afternoon craning this way and that as an autogyro maneuvered overhead. The speakers finally gave up and dismissed the meeting. Still the crowd lingered, fascinated by the autogyro, which was being used by the police to direct traffic.

An Ideal of Beauty and Her Portrayer

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. "During the recent strike of textile workers I heard the word textile repeatedly called tex-tile, with equal accent on both syllables and with the last syllable rhyming with "mile." Is this correct?" M. T.

2. Is lullaby properly called lull-a-BYE (to rhyme with "sky") or LULL-a-bi (pronounced with a short "i")?

3. Define the italicized word in this sentence: "The cheka was one of the most important parts of the Soviet government when the latter was first organized."

4. Find the error in this: "Her attitude was insolent toward those whom she thought were poor."

5. What is a luffing match?

Answers Here.

1. No. Textile is pronounced TEKS-till. The first "e" is short, and the last syllable rhymes with "fill."

2. Neither. Although the last syllable rhymes with "sky," the first syllable carriers the accent. LULL-a-bye.

3. The cheka (CHAY-kah) is a committee operating as secret police against counterrevolutionary movements.

4. The sentence should read: "Her attitude was insolent to those who she thought were poor." The nominative must be used. Who is the subject of were poor.

5. A luffing match is a contest between two boats, each attempting to sail closer to, or with, the wind.

Volunteer Beer Judges Include Three Women

When a call was sent out for 60 volunteer judges to sample beer at a recent brewers' convention in Atlantic City, two young matrons and a middle-aged woman were among those who responded. The women, along with the men volunteer judges, donned white butcher aprons and proceeded to drink 2 4-ounce glasses from each of 23 beer containers. When the sampling was over each judge had consumed about a gallon and a half of the amber fluid. Object of the drinking was to determine the best brand of beer.

Fishwick Holds Golf Interest

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

DIANA FISHWICK, of the invading British golf team, paired with Glenna Collett Vare for the National championship, has been putting in practice on the Chevy Chase course for the Curtis Cup matches at Washington this week.

This women's English-American affair is the first played in America. The American team is defending, having won in England the first of the series with a 5½ to 3½ score.

Miss Fishwick will be the most closely watched of the English team, having added brilliant play in the recent English victory over the Canadian team to her record as 1930 English champion. She was rated third in the world last season in London, after Joyce Wethered and Enid Wilson, of England, both of whom are now retired.

Virginia Van Wie was placed next after her, and then Glenna Collett Vare. There is naturally keen interest in this country in seeing the placement reversed this season. Since Miss Van Wie defeated Miss Wilson last fall, some months after the above listing was made public, in the American semifinal by the wide score of 6 and 5, it can be seen that the menace of Miss Fishwick is not as foreboding as that rating would indicate.

Among the nine members of the Curtis Cup team, after Miss Fishwick, are Dorothy Plumpton, runner-up for the English championship last year; Molly Gourlay, twice English women's champion, and Wanda Morgan, another former champion. The other members of the team are Mrs. J. B. Walker, Pam Barton, Doris Chambers, Mrs. Alec Gold and Mrs. George Coats.

The American team, which, like the British, will go on after the Curtis matches to play in the National meet next week at Philadelphia, is headed by Virginia Van Wie, National champion for the last two years, and captained by Mrs. Vare, five times past National champion.

Other members of the United States team are Maureen Orcutt and Charlotte Glutting, of New Jersey; Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City; Mrs. L. D. Cheney, of San Gabriel, Calif.; Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines; Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., and Mrs. Frank Goldthwait, formerly Aniela Gorczyca, of Fort Worth.

An Expert From England

First of the British women golf challengers, Diana Fishwick, makes ready for the Curtis Cup matches which open today.

PILLAR To POST

ONE of Nicaragua's chief assets is Senora de Sacasa, wife of the President of that country, who is sailing Saturday with her daughter, Maruca, for their homeland, after making a long visit in Washington. The rugged little country has been invested with charm because of her; it will always be thought of by those fortunate enough to have met the Senora as a place of beauty, warmth, and above all, friendliness. She embodies the idea of "hands across the sea."

• • • •

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull led the list of personal friends who attended the farewell party last Sunday in the legation. Present were all the friends who had learned to know and love her when she lived here when President Sacasa was the Minister from his country. Among them was Father Nevils, president of Georgetown University, who gave a tea not long ago in her honor in the "Hall of Cardinals."

• • • •

Present, too, were many officers of the Marine Corps, the Navy and the Army, whose duties in Nicaragua had given them the opportunity to meet and know the Sacasa family. Rear Admiral Clark Woodward, who helped maintain order in the stormy little country during the election which resulted in the victory of Juan P. Sacasa, was there with his charming wife.

• • • •

Plenty of people felt "teary" when a farewell toast was proposed to Senora de Sacasa. Then, suddenly, everyone became very gay, and to let off steam they joined hands and circled about the smiling first lady of Nicaragua, singing, "For she's a jolly good fellow."

Ralph Crane, of the NRA, proposed toasts to the two daughters, and everyone shouted "Viva Maruca!" "Viva Gloria!"

• • • •

It isn't often a woman transmits her beauty to her daughters, but both Maruca and Gloria have the exquisite delicacy of feature their mother possesses, but, unlike her, they have dark eyes and hair, while she is a fine Castillian blonde.

Mrs. Dion Williams, wife of the major general of the Marine Corps, spoke of the great friendliness Senora de Sacasa exhibited when she was stationed in Nicaragua with her husband.

The Williamses had a house at the foot of the hill upon which the presidential palace is perched. Mrs. Williams gave a vivid description of the wild mountain scenery, featuring several active volcanoes in the vicinity. In a sheer drop from the palace was a depression like a huge punch bowl, in the center of this old crater was a clear blue lake. Somehow it is easy to picture Senora Sacasa in this romantic setting.

• • • •

Mr. Crane also spoke of her gift for friendliness that seems to be Senora Sacasa's outstanding quality. His son, Earl Crane, is third secretary at the legation in Nicaragua, and Mr. Crane testified, "She is like a mother to him."

Fall's Princeton Freshmen Labeled "Greenest Ever"

Parents who complain children of today become mature and sophisticated at a much earlier age than they themselves did, may eke out some comfort from the announcement that freshmen entering Princeton this fall were the "greenest ever." This estimate of the entering class was made by the registrar's assistants after registering 600 first-year men.

One of the freshmen declared he was born in 1931. After a little encouragement he changed the date to 1918. Another, when asked if he intended to work for a B. A. or B. S. degree, asked which was easier to get. And still another gave the number of his roommates as 211. It seems he had counted every freshman in the registration room.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am interested in your advice to those in search of romance. I, myself, am lonesome and eager to meet a real friend.

I am now 28 and in all this time I have never had a girl friend. I have no inferiority complex, neither am I shy, nor do I entertain the feelings and reactions of a highbrow, although I have written several unpublished books. I am at ease in any crowd and all the people I meet seem to like me.

• • • •

Perhaps my trouble is that I don't smoke, gamble or drink—not even beer or coffee—yet I enjoy ballroom dancing, movies, social diversions, reading, writing and music.

All the girls I know smoke and drink and divide their time between bridge and the movies. I prefer girls who don't smoke and drink, who read poetry and good literature; who are not gold diggers; who could even darn their own socks, if necessary.

• • • •

What I seek is a simple, natural woman, who can better tell the truth than prove a lie; who has a common sense attitude toward life; who can be content with a 50-50 deal; one who is a good sport, an interesting conversationalist, who can be loyal in love, who neither drinks nor smokes. To such a woman I could dedicate my life and my love and build a beautiful romance. Can you suggest where I might be able to meet such a girl? I thank you in advance for your reply.

EAGER LOVER.

Hard to Say.

DEAR EAGER LOVER: And so all you ask of life is a girl who will exactly correspond to the bill of particulars contained in your own individual definition of womanhood! A female replica of yourself, perhaps?

• • • •

It will be a miracle if you find her, made-to-measure, anywhere on God's footstool, my boy. The mold is thrown away when each human being comes into existence.

Yet there are grand girls all around you. Many of them smoke; many of them drink; most of them couldn't see the point of darning their socks; any number of them enjoy poetry, literature and music; some are interesting conversationalists; all would be simple and natural if approached with intelligent understanding; the majority would be loyal in love—and a surprising number, I fear me, would think you a prig.

• • • •

Most persons cling tenaciously to the right to be themselves and optimistically assume that somebody, some day, will be forthcoming to appreciate their individual worth.

Many a "simple, natural woman, who can better tell the truth than prove a lie; who has a common sense attitude toward life; who can be content with a 50-50 deal; who is a good sport, an interesting conversationalist, who can be loyal in love," thinks nothing at all—absolutely nothing at all—of lighting an occasional cigarette, of quaffing an occasional highball or cocktail. So there's your dilemma.

• • • •

On the other hand, many a hysterically affected woman, whose whole life is a lie; who doesn't know the meaning of common sense; who could never be content with less than a 90-10 deal, the odds in her favor; who has no sense of sportsmanship.

• • • •

One of two things you'll have to do: Elect in favor of some girl whose virtues outweigh her vices—as you account them—then simply bear with the latter; or fall in love. Love is blind, they say, and once you are head over heels in love with some faulty human woman, you might not see her faults at all.

It's hard to say where you might find a girl who even approximates your ideal. I can only suggest you might find her among the women followers of such professions as prohibit smoking, drinking and dissipation of leisure time; and demand a conservative, sturdy, dependable, intellectual type of person. There are such professions, among them library work and teaching, and many women there must be who meet these requirements to the letter.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Competition in Every Sport Teaches the Feline Woman How to Act the 'Gentleman'

By Malvina Lindsay
Woman's Page Editor.

PROBABLY nothing would surprise a reincarnated cavewoman more than the sight of English and American women contending for golf supremacy and not hitting each other over the head with their putters. A nineteenth-century matron looking in on the Curtis Cup matches today might be equally surprised, though for a different reason.

• • • •

The sports-trail women have followed in the last 40 years—since they discarded the croquet mallet for the bicycle—has led them many leagues from the jungle. But it has been followed in the face of many difficulties, including the taunts of men and the disapproval of Mrs. Grundy.

• • • •

The first girl athletes were laughed at as much as were the first suffragists. They were looked at askance by conservative mammas, were warned by doctors they would lose their health, and by stylists they would lose their figures. In fact, only recently, a widely-known sports writer, in a magazine article, attempted to show that competitive sports life did not contribute to feminine pulchritude.

THAT women have pressed on in sports even when their vanity was assailed is proof of amazing nerve. The game, however, has been well worth the candle. It has developed their physical fortitude, aided them to escape from stultifying kitchens and parlors, and helped discipline them to meet the complexities of life.

The Curtis Cup matches are a symbol of woman's past advance and a prophecy of her future progress. Already on the golf course, the tennis court and other jousting fields she has learned much of sportsmanship. But she will learn more—and she undoubtedly needs to.

• • • •

Women as a class have outdistanced men in certain lines of progress, notably cultural and humanitarian pursuits. But they are still lagging men in sportsmanship. An example of this is afforded by a recent survey by Dr. Oscar E. Hirtzberg, head of the department of psychology and research at Buffalo State Teachers College. This study, made among traffic officers and department store executives, showed women constantly break rules that men obey.

• • • •

Many observers of feminine crowd behavior will agree with these findings. For, it must be admitted, in motor car traffic, in bank and cafeteria lines, at bargain counters and in bridge games, woman, to put it mildly, is an individualist. In organizations of her own sex she frequently finds it hard to cooperate. In the struggle of business and social life she still is inclined to bite and scratch, rather than to combat in the open.

WOMAN, of course, is not inherently a poorer sport than man. Not sex, but race experience has made her aggressively individualistic. It is also true many women have reached a higher degree of fairness and generosity than many men. But women as a class undoubtedly need the training in gallantry that a century or so of active sports participation will give them.

This is not to imply that by the mere act of taking a golf club or a tennis racquet in hand one becomes a good sport. Plenty of women can be found on golf courses or tennis courts who threaten to take their dolls and go home every time they lose. But the general tendency of sports is to discipline its participants to cooperative behavior.

• • • •

The code of good sportsmanship, which is the corner stone of civilization, has belonged too exclusively to men in the past. But now women are slowly learning, on golf green and on tennis clay, under water and in the air, that in order to be feminine they do not also have to be feline.

New Vocations Are Discussed

NEW vocations open to women are discussed in the pamphlet, "What to Do in the World's Work," a bulletin of vocational information issued in a second revised edition at Hunter College recently.

Among the new vocations are speech and voice expert for talking pictures, vocational adviser, airport and landing field observer, aviator and speech pathologist, as well as the older careers of social service, law medicine, advertising and business.

In a foreword to students the bulletin states:

"It is now generally accepted that a liberal education must be both cultural and preprofessional; that it must affect not merely the development of the individual, but the contribution she may make in her chosen work to the life of her time. In industry, as the professions, specialization is proceeding so rapidly that graduate work in universities or special schools is becoming increasingly necessary for those who desire to rise in any field."

Some of the unusual opportunities are art auctioneer, animal breeder, astronomer, beekeeper, clinical pathologist, dairy technician, director of a marionette theater.

For Smart Tables.

Here are things for the table that are new:

As a change from conventional china designs, patterns of plaid decorate plates and saucers. The effect is like cloth, and, set on a homespun covered table, one can hardly tell where the china begins and ends. An Italian pottery corn set looks like corn on a cob that has been run over by a steam roller. White demi-tasse cups are decorated with black bakelite handles.

What Today Means

"Libra."

IF SEPTEMBER 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

This September 27 may prove auspicious for the planning of new activities in both business and social life. Work of a constructive nature should show excellent progress very quickly, if new ideas are put into practice on this date. It may be wise to exercise care in the handling of combustibles and any elements with fire-producing possibilities. Electric wiring, connections and apparatus are also liable to create trouble if handled carelessly on this date. Cigarette and cigar smokers can not afford to be absent minded in regard to where they leave or throw their partly finished cigarette or cigar.

A man with decidedly primitive instincts may have occasion to call on you. By using tact, courtesy and frankness in speech you should be able to handle this person without the slightest difficulty. In business transactions the plain, unvarnished truth will have a great deal better effect than bluff, evasion or attempted misrepresentation. Social activities will require the strict observation of the elemental rules governing polite society, if adverse criticism is not desired.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those developing the tender passion, may have a better chance of spending a happier day and evening if they will agree not to disagree by avoiding discussing any subject that each knows is the other's pet aversion.

If a woman, and September 27 is your natal day, you may see some one who will brighten this day in a very unexpected manner. Your personal affairs may possibly take an unanticipated turn for the better in a very short time and events might occur that will occasion a great deal of joy. Love will help brighten your life and if matrimonial bonds entwine you, it should relieve you of many responsibilities.

The child born on September 27 as a rule, when it reaches its teens, may be inclined to be unusually democratic and for this reason supervision of its close associates might prove advisable. It should be encouraged to take an interest in athletics, as well as carefully selected books.

If a man and September 27 is your birthday, you are blessed with a very analytical mind, as well as a personality that should carry you far in either the legal or medical profession. Banking or some other financial pursuit should also offer you unlimited opportunities for success.

Manicures Become Complex And Produce Better Results

By Frances Mangum.

ONCE upon a time a manicure was one of the simplest forms of beauty culture. Now it has taken on new intricacies, and, of course, new interest.

Up until the past few years a young operator with more experience than training treated your nails in the following manner: File first. It mattered little the natural shape of your hands, your nails were filed down to an oval. Buffer next. Back and forth, until the fingers felt as though they were burning. But wielded long and hard enough the buffer would leave a shine, and that was all that was required. Not a shine such as we know today from highly perfected liquid polishes, but a temporary brightness that must be renewed morning and night.

The Artistry of Today.

Think of the difference! Today hands are studied. Nails are shaped to bring out the character of the hand, tinted to match costumes or to temperaments.

Not only that. They are cared for just as earnestly as the face and the hair. The poor hands have so much weather to brave, and in many cases manual labor to perform that unless they are given special treatments they will become wrinkled and dry, the nails brittle.

If, however, the hands are creamed regularly they will soon lose their tendency to roughen and will become quite soft and smooth. If the cream or lotion used has bleaching properties it is a simple matter to coax the hands into charming fairness.

Try Olive Oil.

Care of the nails is a trifle more difficult. Sometimes they are exceptionally brittle, due to some nervous disorder. Other times it is because they are not given the minimum care required to keep them pliable and in the best of health. Two or three times a week they should be dipped in warm olive oil and this rubbed into the cuticle and the skin immediately around the nail.

Those who care to write in, inclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope, will be told the name of a nail cream that prevents the nails from becoming brittle and the cuticle dry.

Silver-Polisher Is Disconsolate About Her Job

Finds After Hard Labor That It Could Be Simplified No End.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT WAS discouraging, to say the least. As the young woman told her tale she laughed, but it was easy to see her humor was mingled with vexation.

It seems one afternoon a few days ago she took time out from engagements to polish the household silver. It was a task which had been impending for months. "Some things are much easier put off than done," she smiled.

Fork after fork, spoon after spoon, slowly her work progressed. Finally with the last sugar bowl and cream pitcher her wrists and fingers were aching. It was then a friend dropped in to chat with her. Upon being greeted by wails of weariness the task prompted, the visitor cocked her head on one side, and with a knowing air said to the poor silver polisher, "You could have done all this in five minutes, ten at the most!"

Then she told her about the silver polishing plate on sale at a local store.

It's only a square metal plate, but placed in a pan of water with a little soap, all the silver piled on top of it loses its tarnish and dullness and immediately shines like new.

Besides its particular powers over silver, it cleans all jewelry except pearls. Its manufacturers guarantee it for five years.

Closet In a Closet.

Such intricate things are being done now that it's the simplest matter in the world to have a closet within a closet. This is arranged by hanging a certain doorsized rack on the inside of the closet door. There are little shelves to hold at least six hats, tiers for nine pairs of shoes, and a tie and belt rod.

Apartment house dwellers who suffer from lack of closet space will find the arrangement invaluable. As far as that goes, any family who crowds its belongings into closets, helter skelter, is able to keep things tidier and in much better shape with these modern conveniences.

Although they cost little they save you wear and tear on your clothes.

Proof Against Nearly All.

In this case a hint is as good as a sale. For no sooner will those with a yen for bargains hear the news than off they'll dash to look into it. And right they are. If they pass this by it will be many a long day before they find its like again.

It all centers around slips. Most everyone who's shopped at all will remember those perfectly lovely white silk slips, proof against rips, perspiration, and almost against wearing out, that cost the purchaser $2.25. Well, today and tomorrow they're reduced to $1.69! If they aren't bargains what is?

Want Glamorous Lips?

The urge for glamorous lips has led a beautician to put out some lipsticks that impart a moist-looking sheen to erstwhile dull and prosaic mouths.

The innovation is particularly appropriate at this time, when women are paying so much attention to rich and colorful make-up, even flecking shadowy eyelids with silver and gold. What is more natural than a follow-up with lips, colorful and subtly glistening?

This lipstick is highly indelible. Once on it won't come off until actually washed or creamed away.

It comes in lovely medium-sized cases that fit well into small evening purses.

They Dance With Lights.

This actually happened. A shopper paused for a moment at the jewelry counter and looked intently at some rock crystal beads arrayed under a $1 price tag. "This surely isn't right, is it?" she asked the clerk. She was assured there was no mistake. "But these are not genuine rock crystal, then?" she insisted. The young lady back of the counter declared they were.

"But, goodness sake," exclaimed the shopper, "I paid $44 for some just like them only a few days ago."

So you see they really are awfully nice beads. Not the $44 variety certainly, but crystal chokers anyone would be proud to own. They have an intriguing way of catching just one beam of light and splitting it into dozens of smaller, more colorful rays. That's one reason they're so attractive to wear in the evening; they literally dance with lights.

There are crystal bracelets, coil style, for the same price, and longer strands of beads for a trifle more.

Canape Trays.

The up-to-date hostess is interested in canape trays. She has to be. Few guests are content today unless their afternoon call is pepped up with a cocktail, and, of course, cocktails necessitate proper accessories.

Here is an ideal set, a canape tray complemented with matching cocktail cups.

They come in cobalt-blue, amber, green and crystal glass, all conservatively priced. The tray is just large enough for an appetizer and a cocktail.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped addressed envelope.

Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

VEGETABLES don't mean to be temperamental, but every now and then they need coaxing to make them put on their best performance. Often this coaxing takes very simple forms; an addition of this, a dash of that, or a new slant on an old idea.

Like sister acts, if one vegetable is good, two are better. Combinations often make a dish double delicious.

Baked Corn and Tomatoes.

2 cups cooked corn
2 cups tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
3 tablespoons butter

Mix seasonings with the corn and tomatoes and pour all into a greased baking dish. Spread the crumbs over the top, dot them with the butter and bake in a moderate oven for one-half hour. This is a satisfactory way of utilizing left-over corn or tomatoes.

Carrots and Peas.

2 cups cubed carrots
1 cup cooked peas
3 tablespoons butter
3 teaspoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons sugar
1½ cups milk

Boil the carrots until tender. Combine with the cooked peas, reheat and serve with melted butter or make a sauce of the flour, butter, milk and seasonings, add the cooked carrots and peas, reheat and serve hot.

Candied Sweet Potatoes.

1 cup orange juice
½ teaspoon grated orange rind
1 cup water
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons light corn syrup
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter
6 to 8 sweet potatoes or yams

Combine first seven ingredients and pour over peeled uncooked sweet potatoes arranged in casserole or baking dish. Bake covered in a moderate oven (375-400 degrees Fahrenheit) until tender, 30 to 40 minutes. Baste occasionally. Remove lid last 10 minutes to brown or put under blazer.

Variation: Just before removing from oven, add a layer of marshmallows and brown.

This recipe serves six.

Confectioner Buys Noted Cake Recipe

The Austrian public has something to be thankful for. Its sweet tooth, leaning particularly toward pastries and cakes, will be tempted once more by the original recipe for Sachertorte.

Sachertorte is a famous Austrian chocolate cake. The original recipe was in the possession of Frau Sacher, the confidente of princes and statesmen. With her death, the recipe fell into the hands of her son, Herr Edward Sacher, who, unfortunately, hadn't the money to set himself up as a confectioner, and was no longer associated with his mother's hotel.

To the rescue of the Austrian sweet tooth comes Frau Demel, well known Vinnese confectioner. She was a good friend of Frau Sacher, and in memory of the friendship and consideration for the confection she has purchased the recipe from Herr Sacher, and with it Herr Sacher's services. Now, between the two of them and the famous recipe, genuine Sachertorte will be offered to the public.

Black and White Is Chronic Where Fashion Is Concerned

This Peppy Combination Has Been Smart for Years and the Odds Are That Its Freshness Will Keep It Chic for Years.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Black and white is always smart. And you can write that down in your notebook and file it away, certain that years from now it's going to be just as true as it is today.

Naturally black and white is sometimes smarter than other times. But we've yet to see a time when it isn't correct and in fashion. And most modern wardrobes find they must have at least one black and white costume.

In Softer Dresses.

The combination is especially smart this season in one of your softer dresses, the one you use for afternoon bridge, for informal teas, for club meetings, for Sundays.

It may be made of a rich black crepe or a black heavy sheer and trimmed with white satin, white taffeta, white crepe, white bengaline. Sometimes the white is shot with metal.

The white on these dresses is apt to occupy a fairly large space. For instance, in the dress sketched, the entire yoke and the big bow are white. Or you might have a gleaming white plastron which covers all the center front of the bodice.

If you want even more white, you can have it in a dress whose sleeves and all the bodice exsept the center are of white. And in the very dressy black and whites the entire bodice may be white with the skirt black.

These combinations of black and white are particularly effective for bridge dresses since the sharp contrast is confined to the bodice of the dress—the part which shows when you're sitting down at a table.

In Tailored Dresses.

Tailored black and white is a fashion favorite, too, this season. And business women will be especially appreciative.

Black sheer alpaca is a new idea for tailored wear, btu silk crepes, the pebbled surfaced varieties, and even sheer wools are excellent, too.

The white on these is usually smaller in quantity and usually detachable so it can be changed often. That is important if the wardrobe is limited.

Vests, revers and all sorts of simple or tricky collars are used, made of bengaline, taffeta and satin—in fresh, efficient looking white.

Dresses of the types described are available in Washington in all the better dress shops and department stores.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Seasonal Influenza.

WIDESPREAD and sweeping epidemics of influenza have occurred at various periods in history. In the United States devastating epidemics occurred in 1830, 1836, 1847, 1889 and 1918. In these years a large percentage of our population had influenza and the death rate from complications was high. The disease also goes under the names of grippe and "flu."

Beginning in the autumn of each year sporadic epidemics occur of a rather characteristic disease that either is a mild form of influenza or a disease that very closely resembles it. Sometimes the autumn manifestations of the disease follow late summer diarrhea that simulates the condition described as intestinal influenza.

The onset is usually sudden, characterized by headache, backache, pains in the legs and some fever. Unless the patient is put to bed promptly, unusual prostration is the rule. The sick person complains of being "Oh, so tired," is markedly listless and desires to be let alone. Occasionally chilly sensations are present and the extremities are cold and bloodless.

All cases do not begin with a cold or an infection of the air passages. Occasionally a sore throat is the first symptom. Again the temperature may be much higher than the illness would seem to warrant. The sudden appearance of the disease and its extremely rapid spread are quite characteristic.

Although some authorities do not believe that the seasonal type of influenza is identical with the type recognized in epidemics such as that of 1918, nevertheless it appears that the symptoms are similar and the complications of the same general character.

The most dangerous feature of influenza is its tendency to so weaken the resistance of the body and to so prepare certain tissues as to lead to the rapid growth of bacteria, and hence the development of infections of various types. Pneumonia is a common and all too frequent complication. Middle ear infections, sinus disease, exudative bronchitis and myocarditis follow a small percentage of cases.

Recovery is usually slow.

Treatment is that of any respiratory or other infection that has a tendency to spread to the lungs. It consists of rest in bed, ample water drinking, alkalis, and the use of salicylates whenever pain and high temperature warrant. The diet for the first 48 hours should be strictly fluid: orange juice, hot tea, hot lemonade and grape juice. Toxins that are rapidly produced must be eliminated as speedily as possible through the kidneys and the skin. Good nursing, fresh air and a comfortable room wherein the patient will not chill are half the battle.

Complications will be avoided in most instances by insisting that the patient remain in bed at least three days after the temperature has returned to normal and all acute symptoms have disappeared.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Can You Beat It?

A beautiful big round harvest moon just flooding its soft light over the earth and everybody and everything; a whole lot of your best friends sitting around your table, and talking about anything and everything that is pleasant, while the head of the table is filling up everybody's plate with a lot of good supper and sending along with it a big slice of spongy, black ginger cake and a cup of cider that is four days old—can you beat it? That's the question that Dr. Coon asked the crowd around Blackie's table that night, and they yelled, in one breath, "No-oh-oh-oh!"

A lot of things had happened in the Creek Country during the week and the Creek folks seemed to have had the best of every little frolic, so there was plenty of talk about around Blackie's table. Just about everybody had had a good hand in putting something through and each one of them could tell something especially funny that had happened on one of their trips. Everybody seemed to get a good laugh out of Reddy Fox's story about shaking that red pepper in the nose and eyes of Rover Dog. And Who-Who Owl had to finish up that story by telling them how Rover ducked his head clear down in Hee-Haw's water bucket to get the fire out of his eyes and nose.

But this same beautiful big moon was looking down on some more folks in that part of the world. They were Mr. Man and wife. They took that half of their own big ginger cake over to Uncle Joe and Aunt Judy, and began telling them about the reason for bringing them only half of a cake instead of a whole one, but they didn't get far with their excuses before Aunt Judy broke in. "Well, you came mighty near getting only about half as much for cider as you can drink, but the rascals couldn't carry off the big tub, and so we have plenty left for you to have all you want. Just look at that bump on Joe's head," and she went on to tell them all about what happened while she was over with Mrs. Man that day, and Uncle Joe was asleep. But now Uncle Joe started to talk to Mr. Man.

"Better go and eat your ginger cake while it is hot," said Mrs. Man, "and we will have to go back home and do the same thing. Come over next week and tell me the rest. I know it was that awful man that's as high as the house, that got your cider. Whatever we are going to do about him I don't know. Good-by."

It wasn't much trouble to make Hee-Haw trot back home, for he wanted his supper, too; and so Mr. Man and his wife soon were eating hot ginger cake and drinking cider, and Mr. Man wanted his wife to tell him if she ever had seen such a beautiful moon! Getting young again, Mr. Man was.

Even at Uncle Joe's house the Man in the Moon smiled in through the kitchen door and window so brightly that Aunt Judy said they had just as well blow out the lamp, for the moon made all the light they needed. That nice moon just seemed to put out the fire that was in the minds and hearts of both families, and they soon quit talking about the doings of the strange animal and his tribe. That ginger cake and cider and moon seemed to be enough to make up for everything else, and everybody hated to go to bed and forget it all.

Over at Blackie's house they came mighty near making a night of it, for they decided that they had all done so many things during the week that they were going to be up all day Sunday, and so they didn't need to hurry to bed. And that moon was hard to beat, even with sleep.

Playing for Average.

Although it may sound absurd on the face of it, quite frequently a player's course of action can be influenced by the ability and the type of game played by another player at another table. This situation occurs in team-of-four matches. Often the Declarer is confronted with two different lines of play and really has no way of deciding which one to adopt.

An experienced tournament player will realize, if the hand is not particularly unusual, that this same hand will be played at the identical contract by a player of the opposing team when the board is played the second time. If the player is not able to get any other indication as to which of two possible plays to chose, he will, if he knows the game of his opponent who will sit in the identical seat at the other table, try to imagine which play this other party will adopt and then adopt the same one. This is based on the theory that matches are won not by playing to create unnatural swings but by playing for an average result or to achieve par on each hand.

If you do this throughout a match and never make any mistakes, you are almost certain to come out ahead at the finish—with your margin of victory depending upon the amount of errors the opponents make.

On today's hand, which took place in the quarter-final round of the knockout team-of-four event at Asbury Park, the South player reached a Grand Slam contract and was faced with the age-old problem of what to do about the missing Queen of trumps. He had absolutely no way of making up his mind, but realized that the member of the other team who would subsequently hold the same hand was one who practically never finessed with nine trumps missing. Accordingly he played for the drop—and, as it happened, succeeded in capturing the missing Queen.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ J 9 7 4 ♡ A Q ◇ Q J 9 7 2 ♣ A 5
♠ Q 3 ♡ 10 5 ◇ 8 5 4 3 ♣ 10 8 7 6 3	W E S	♠ 6 5 ♡ J 8 7 3 ◇ 10 6 ♣ K Q 9 4 2
	♠ A K 10 8 2 ♡ K 9 6 4 2 ◇ A K ♣ J

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1◇	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♠	Pass	4♡	Pass
4♠	Pass	4NT	Pass
5NT	Pass	7♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding followed more or less conventional lines. The final seven-spade bid was only a slight gamble, as the Four-Five No-trump Convention had located the necessary key cards and the only possible holding which North could have which would not give South some sort of play for the hand was one which included the Ace and two small hearts.

West made the harmless opening of his fourth best club, and the Ace in Dummy won the trick. The spade Jack was now led, East played small, and the Declarer went up with the King. He returned to Dummy with a heart and now led another spade. At this point, with no adverse bidding and nothing particularly unusual about the North and South distribution to either confirm or deny the probability of one of the opponents holding a singleton spade. South might have tossed a coin mentally to decide what to do. But his decision, as mentioned above, was influenced by a personality at a table at the other end of the room. Fortunately for South, the South player at the other table was one with whom he had previously played in a great many games. Remembering from these games that the other South player practically never took a finesse if it was ever so slightly against the percentages, South decided to play for the same result as would be obtained at the other table, as by this means, though he might not gain, he could not lose. He went up with the spade Ace and dropped the Queen, and then was able to spread the hand. Incidentally, South's deductions were correct. Seven spades were bid and made at the other table because the South player, as expected, dropped the spade Queen.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Sam Creason, who lives in the London suburb of Sandyways, has been found dead; a suicide note indicates financial reverses, and his banker, Huitt, reports large withdrawals in recent month, suggesting he might have been blackmailed. Huitt has been annoyed by a young man named Tyssen, a newcomer to the village, who asks for information about the dead man's affairs; he says he is collecting material for a novel. Pauline and Anthony Sarson, also living in the village, see Tyssen on the golf course at night, making remarkable shots; questioned, he denies being an expert. Meanwhile Huitt is invited to dinner with Lord Milbank. The other guest is Sir Julian Bott, London financier.

MILHAVEN turned his head to the servant standing behind his chair.

"Serve coffee and '68 brandy in the library," he directed; "the Laranaga cabinet and the Romeo and Juliets. Come along, my friends, we will stretch ourselves in the easy chairs in the library."

They trooped out. Sir Julian looked about him somewhat wistfully as they crossed the hall and passed into the oak-paneled room with its Gothic windows, its shelves filled with priceless books and the great open fireplace with its coat of arms cut deep into the stone.

"After all," he confessed, as he accepted an easy chair and almost reverently pinched the cigar he was offered, "there is somthing you others have that we fellows cannot get. We can buy it all, but it's second-hand. It isn't our own."

Milhaven shrugged his shoulders. "The world is getting less sensitive about those things nowadays," he said. . . . "What about my concessions, Bott? Are you going to make another million for us all? I'm beginning to need money. All these things that you admire, you know, need some keeping up."

"I was just going to speak about those concessions," Sir Julian replied. "I don't think that I want to touch them. If you need money, I can put you in the way of making a very reasonable sum on a very reasonable outlay—even Mr. Huitt here ought to be able to come a little way in with us—but not on your concessions."

There was no visible change in Milhaven's expression, except that his eyebrows had come just a trifle closer together.

A New Project.

His tone, when he spoke, retained altogether its note of indifference.

"What is the matter with my concessions, Bott?" he asked. "They nearly cost me my life, I can tell you."

"They are valuable, without a doubt," Sir Julian admitted, "but these great tracts of country, which include mines, oil-bearing lands and forests, they need time for development. People are in a hurry nowadays to get something for their money. Supposing I raised a million, or a couple of millions, and formed a company to take up these concessions of yours. In a year and a half or two years' time people would begin to grumble about dividends. I should say you would not be able to show any for five years. Then there's too much oil country. Oil is bad and it's going to be worse. It's like rubber. The world is overstocked with it."

"You may be right," Milhaven agreed languidly. "On the other hand, there would be no need to emphasize the oil lands. I should think the concessions apart from them would be worth, capitalized, $1,000,000 or $12,000,000. I had a small army of prospectors at work and that was the most moderate estimate. You see, these are not fairy pictures, Bott. There is no Arabian Nights business about it. I have traveled from end to end of the Garsete Valley, for instance. There's not a square mile of all that territory I have not seen. It seems to me that this should affect your calculations."

Has Another Scheme.

"Perhaps," Sir Julian observed indifferently. "The fact of it is, though, I am pledged to another scheme. A concession like yours is romantic, of course, and I know that it has solid value behind it, but what do Mesopotamia, Abyssina or Arabia mean to the man who is going about now with money chinking in his pocket? I'll tell you what I am going to do, Lord Milhaven," he went on, leaning forward in his chair and with a brighter light in his dark eyes. "I am going to tie up into one huge concern practically the entire wholesale provision business in London. Other people have tried and failed. I am going to succeed. I won't bother you with figures. I will simply tell you that I am going to start within two years paying 15 per cent upon the shares I sell today in the new company, and I guarantee that we will be paying 50 per cent or issuing bonus shares within six years. It is the scheme of my life, Lord Milhaven. I have never been able to touch these fellows. I have never been able even to get them to show me their figures until last month. When I saw them I can tell you they staggered me. I shall need every penny I can scrape together, but I shan't need to beg for money. I shall let you off, Lord Milhaven, with 10,000 or 15,000 pounds and I shall guarantee that you won't receive a smaller dividend than 10 per cent one single year during my lifetime. I would not make that offer to any one, but there it is."

No Funds Available.

Milhaven smoked in silence for several moments.

"It's very generous of you, Sir Julian," he observed, looking at the end of his cigar as though to assure himself that the ash was still stable. "Very generous of you, indeed. In an ordinary way though, I hate investments. If I had ten or fifteen thousand to spare I should save them for the company which will buy my concessions.

"To tell you the truth, I have been scraping money together to support them ever since I came into the title and returned to England."

"I would not be too sanguine about them if I were you," Sir Julian advised. "You will remember what happened to those Palestine concessions. They have not laid down a line of railway yet or paid a penny of dividend."

"A horrible country," Milhaven groaned. "You hurt me when you compare my undertaking with that Holy Land swindle. Tell me how you like my brandy?"

"You are an epicure, Lord Milhaven," was the prompt reply. Everything you have and everything about you is of the best. The brandy is delicious. I know very well that with the money in my hand I could never buy anything like it. By the by," Sir Julian added, turning to Mr. Huitt, "I am going into your part of the world tomorrow morning—coming to see you, in fact. Perhaps if I come at about 12:30, you will lunch with me afterward?"

"You are very kind," Huitt murmured in noncommittal fashion. "I make it a rule, however, never to leave the bank buildings after I arrive there in the morning. The hotel supplies me with anything I may require in my room."

"Do you good to get out, once in a while," Sir Julian remarked. "I'm coming to clean you out."

Mr. Huitt inclined his head gravely. He showed no particular interest, but his eyes had suddenly become like points of steel.

"You have a very considerable balance with us, Sir Julian," he observed. "We have all your government bonds, too."

"I am coming for the lot," Sir Julian declared, stretching himself out.

"So long as you are not leaving ing Barton's——" Huitt began.

"I am not closing my account, if that's what you mean," Sir Julian interrupted. "I have a big deal on with Lodson's, however, and I have to deposit as much as I can with them before Friday."

The bank manager nodded gravely.

"Under those circumstances," he said, "although it seems to me to be a matter for regret rather than congratulation, I shall break my usual habit. I will lunch with pleasure when our business is finished."

Milhaven Invited.

"Any use asking you to join us, Lord Milhaven" Sir Julian inquired.

Milhaven shook his head.

"Very good of you," he regretted, "but we are short of magistrates down here for a few days, and I promised to take the chair tomorrow."

Sir Julian glanced at his watch.

"You were kind enough to say that you would have a car here for me at half-past ten," he reminded his host. "I see it is just that now. Would you mind if I hurried away? I have enjoyed our chat very much and all the wonderful entertainment."

"Always a pleasure," Milhaven murmured, "to have an appreciative guest."

"About the concessions," Sir Julian went on, as the three men strolled together toward the hall. "I'm sorry, but you see how it is. I've got a better thing on."

"You know best, of course," Milhaven observed. "My concessions took a lot of getting, but they will be just as valuable in a year or two's time."

"Without a doubt," Sir Julian agreed politely. "Can I give you a lift, Mr. Huitt?"

The bank manager shook his head.

"On these fine summer evenings," he said, "I prefer to walk. Thank you all the same, Sir Julian. I shall expect you at 12:30 tomorrow at the bank, and everything shall be done to facilitate your business."

Sir Julian nodded and the car drove off. Lord Milhaven and Mr. Huitt remained for a moment or two on the bottom step, watching the lights flash among the trees in the avenue.

Ham Slices Barbecued.

Select four small slices about ¼ inch thick, gash the fat around the edge, and cook in same manner as for pan-broiling. When done, remove from pan and to the fat in the pan add ½ teaspoon of mustard, 3 tablespoons of vinegar, ½ teaspoon of sugar, and a dash of cayenne. Stir until well heated and serve with the ham. Unusually good for a hot ham sandwich. This will make four servings.

And before we end the article we have these suggestions too:

Cover a slice of ham with a can of crushed pineapple and bake in a casserole.

Bake in a casserole—on top of scalloped potatoes—creamed hominy or noodles.

Sauted and served with spiced prunes—also sauted.

Spread with thin slices of Swiss cheese, or with peanut butter before cooking.

Death Claims Dr. Ralston, 73, In Rockingham

Served in Virginia House of Delegates; Active in Civic Affairs.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Dr. Charles H. He served many years as president of the Rockingham County Mutual Telephone Co. He was for years a member of the Democratic county committee and was an elder in the Cooks Creek Presbyterian Church.

Few country doctors did more charity work than he. He never sent bills to those he believed could not pay.

Dr. Ralston served eight years in the Virginia House of Delegates from Rockingham County, and centered his interest in urging better schools in rural communities. In 1918 he was named a member of the State commission to make a survey of schools and State-supported colleges in Virginia.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Whitmore Ralston, a native of Rockbridge County, and four sons and one daughter—Dr. Gilbert W. Ralston, of Harrisonburg; John H. Ralston, Rockingham orchardist; W. Whitemore Ralston, Harrisonburg druggist; Howard Ralston, of Mount Clinton, and Mrs. Harry Grogg, of Goshen, Va.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Kidnaping and murder are two essentials to the happy home life of newly wedded scorpions. The wedding, which never lasts more than a few hours, always begins with a kidnaping and ends with a murder—yet, strange as it seems, whereas the male does the kidnaping the female does the murder.

During the mating season the male scorpion, upon meeting a female, catches her two claws in his own and drags her—gently, of course—to their new home. The home, which may be no more than a hole in the ground which the male digs out while still holding the female, is never prepared ahead of time.

Within a few hours, however, tragedy enters the new home, and the bride becomes a widow. She always kills her mate—and eats him for her wedding breakfast.

The New York Giants literally stole the National League pennant in 1911, with 347 stolen sacks in 154 games—an all-time record for base stealing. Their record that year is a little more than 11 times the number of bases stolen last year, when the Giants were able to take only 31.

The Giants were unable to steal the World Series that year from the Philadelphia Athletics, American League pennant winners. After a close victory in the first game the Giants dropped three straight, won the fifth, then lost the sixth and deciding game by a one-sided score of 13 to 2.

Giants and St. Louis Bow as Race for Pennant Remains Unchanged

Washington and Lee, With Stonewall Line, Seeks Stronger Backfield

Wildcat Tilt Offers Test Saturday

Forward Line-up Better Than Last Season, Says Tilson.

Generals Expected to Gain Victories Over State Opponents.

(The following is the second of a series of football articles dealing with the major Virginia colleges.)

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

LEXINGTON, Va., Sept. 25.—Lo, the poor linemen.

Their lot is no happy one at best, what with getting only a worm's-eye view of routine while highly press-agented backs race to glory and the headlines over their struggling forms.

But here at Washington and Lee this season the linemen are facing their last full measure of grief. They don't know where their next first down is coming from, except when Capt. Monk Mattox is carrying the ball.

It's a Woolworth back field and a Tiffany line that Head Coach Tex Tilson is entrusting with a "suicide" schedule. Potentially the best line in the Southern Conference and, potentially, the worst back field in the same conference.

I guess that statement puts this correspondent out on the limb all right, all right. But, s'help me, that's the way it looks from this corner. A line that is the answer to a coach's prayer going to waste for the lack of commensurate backs.

Meet Kentucky Saturday.

The Generals, as they are known to their intimates, won't be long in learning just exactly how many guns they pack. They will pay a call on the Kentucky Wildcats at Lexington, Ky., on Saturday afternoon, and the Wildcats didn't come by their name because they are kittenish.

But, getting back to that W. & L. line, it would be a heap sight safer to meet those hombres in the dark than on the football field. Fr instance: They lost their two best guards, Capt. Bolen and his running mate, Boland, by graduation last June, and even the coaches admit that their line this season will be vastly improved, which is downright heresy for a football coach.

I will start indulging in personalities at this time by taking up the tackles. On second thought, suppose you take them up. Left tackle, Mr. Tubby Owings, is a mere slip of a lad of 257 pounds, who can put his feet down and pick them up, and vice versa, like a lightweight. Left tackle, Mr. Hugo Bonino, is a comparative midget of 233 pounds, who doesn't bunt when he hits.

Better Than Last Year.

Like Virginia's cawn and smoked ham, Mr. Tilson's tackles are improving with age, and last year's opposition will bear witness that they were fully matured in 1933. They got a scare down here yesterday when Owings pulled up with a sore ankle and the thought of a possible fracture fractured the sleep of Head Coach Tilson for two days, but Owings will be in the line-up Saturday.

Playing inside of the two Goliaths at tackle will be a pair of guards who, ordinarily, are big men. Lewis Martin, 195 pounds, and Dick Gumm, 175, won their letters last year as reserves. This year they are a bit bigger, a bit smarter and altogether very acceptable.

In the middle of it all will be George Glynn, at center, contributing his 189 pounds to the generally formidable appearance of the Generals' forward wall. Mr. Glynn was good enough to be the center of last year's great W. & L. line that helped to beat Kentucky, held Princeton to a 6-to-0 score and Yale to a 14-to-0, and this year he is a better ball player.

All of which brings us around to the ends. Well, they never will get over the loss of Bud Hanley, the Washington boy, who stood out last year like a Storm Trooper's chest when Mr. A. Hitler passes, but Coach Tilson is not unduly worried anent his flanks.

Smith, Ellis Are Wings.

He has Charley Smith, a bona fide 179-pound wingman of last year, returning, and on the other end Bill Ellis, a stripling of 170, who saw action last season, will find employment each Saturday.

Coach Tilson's grief begins when he scans his back field and sees in his mind's eye the 1933 exploits of Joe Sawyer, whose cleats left an indelible mark on the turf of every gridiron the Generals visited. Tilson's backs, with the exception of Capt. Maddox, who was Sawyer's running mate last year, are strictly of the dime-a-dozen variety.

They are not to be mentioned in the same inhalation as the W. and L. line, whose power is such that rival coaches have already established the Generals as an overwhelming favorite to retain their State title.

Bill Seaton, 148-pound quarter back; Wilton Sample, a 185-pound half back, and Jack Bailey, a 179-pound full back, who, with Mad-

The Generals Do a Washington and Lee Swing Into the Football Season

Post Staff Photos.

Makofske, C. U. Back, Is Hurt In Workout

Team to Practice Terps Today; Squad Nearing Training Peak.

THE misfortune that has trailed Bob Makofske yesterday felled the Catholic U. full back for the second time this season, sending him to sick bay for at least ten days.

Makofske was out two weeks ago with a sprained right ankle, and it seriously impaired his training. Yesterday he went into action against the freshmen and emerged from a mix-up with the other ankle swollen and absolutely useless for football purposes.

The husky Hempstead boy has been selected for a role in Coach Art Bergman's shock back field, which will start all games for the Cardinals this season, but if the torrent of injuries that are cascading down upon him do not relent, Bergman will be obliged to revise his plans. Makofske, a southpaw passer and kicker, is a key man in Bergman's scheme of things.

To Scrimmage Maryland.

Today Catholic is to scrimmage Maryland for the last time in the next several weeks, and possibly the rest of the season. The boys will go to it at 3:30 o'clock in the spacious pasture lands behind Byrd Stadium. Though Maryland opens it season the day after tomorrow against St. John's, Coach Jack Faber said last night that none of his men would be spared this afternoon. Full speed ahead under forced draft, if necessary, are his orders.

Captain of Cards Weds St. Louis Style Expert

St. Louis, Sept. 26 (AP).—Leo Durocher, shortstop and captain of the St. Louis Cardinals, was married this morning to Miss Grace Dozier. The ceremony was performed at the Municipal Courts Building by Judge E. E. Butler.

Miss Dozier, a style expert, is a native of Dallas, Tex. The marriage was the second for both Durocher and Miss Dozier.

Team to Practice.

Centennial Athletic Club, 150-pound football team, will drill tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock on the field at Seventeenth and Constitution avenue northwest. All players and any new candidates are requested to report promptly.

Newport Sees British Cup Challenge in '35

Critics Name Endeavour Faster Boat; Loss Laid to Handling.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 26 (AP).—The aftermath of the America's cup races set in today with speculation centered on whether a new challenge for the historic mug would arrive from across the seas next summer.

T. O. M. Sopwith, the British millionnaire, whose Endeavour was the fifteenth British challenger to be sent home empty handed, has flatly said he will never challenge again, but there were many who held to the opinion a challenge would be forthcoming nevertheless.

The 1934 races, the most turbulent in the history of the cup, continued to be the chief topic of conversation in yachting circles today, and there was an amazing agreement of opinion.

The most salient points on which there was more or less accord was that the Endeavour was a faster boat than the Rainbow and that superior seamanship was the factor which enabled the American boat to vanquish the Endeavour.

Endeavour Showing Encouraging.

Those who argued today that England would again challenge for the cup held that Britons must have been encouraged by the fine showing of the Sopwith yacht, despite its handicaps, while those who took the view that a new bid would not arrive supported their contention solely with citation of the negative action on Sopwith's protest.

However, the opinion seemed general that if Britain's own journalists influence the yachtsmen of their homeland, they must feel that England came nearer lifting the cup than ever before and that must be a stimulus to their sporting instincts.

Members of the Rainbow camp did not hesitate to admit they were extremely lucky in edging out the big blue invader.

Sopwith definitely put down rumors that Endeavour would not return to her homeland but would be sold to Gerard Lambert, owner and skipper of Vanitie, the old cup boat which served as a trial horse this year, or to some other buyer in the United States or Canada.

Fitted for Return Voyage.

"I am not selling Endeavour," he said. "Why should I? She is going back to England inside of two weeks and I am going to race her next summer in England."

Endeavour was taken up to Bristol today to be fitted out with her ocean rig at the Herreshoff yard.

Endeavour's hastily recruited amateurs, who filled the places of professionals after they struck for more money, are going home on steamers, anxious to return to their varied occupations. The places of some probably will be filled by members of Rainbow's paid crew.

Navy's Cadets To See Game Here Oct. 6

FOR the first time in several years, Washingtonians will have the opportunity of seeing the full complement of the regiment of Midshipmen on parade, as the Boys in Blue will attend the Navy—University of Virginia football game to be staged in Griffith Stadium October 6.

It will be one of four trips the Middies will make away from the home station during the grid season.

The rank and file of naval lads will not return from leave until Friday, so plans for the Washington junket have not been formulated. But there is no dobut that all the ceremonial that attend important tests will be put on at the Virginia game.

These will include besides parading onto the field and staging a drill before resuming seats, the color-card stunts that have been acclaimed the top notch of anythink staged by college student bodies at important gridiron battles.

And there will be Billy, the Goat, famous Navy goat, in full raiment of blue and gold, to cavort up and down the sidelines. The academy only recently secured a new goat for this purpose, to replace "Old Bill" who saw years of service, but was put to death a few days ago because of age. It will be up to a group of Middies to do a bit of training, and instill the necessary fire in his goatship.

Yanks Win 11-Inning Game From Athletics

Philadelphia, Sept. 26 (AP).—The New York Yankees and Philadelphia Athletics battled through 11 innings today, with the Yanks taking a 4-to-3 decision when Pinkey Higgins let loose a wild throw, allowing Ben Chapman to tally with the deciding run.

Defense Work Stressed by St. John's

Talbott Has Team Primed for Md. Saturday; De Lisio Co-captain.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Taking a line from their experience of last year when they were defeated by University of Maryland, 20 to 0, largely through their inability to check the overhead game, St. John's College gridders are being thoroughly drilled in defensive work of this sort in preparation for their annual battle with the Terrapins at College Park on Saturday. The game also will mark the inaugural of the season.

Head Coach M. Talbott (Tody) Riggs said today he was taking no chances of running into last year's debacle.

"I am giving the boys plenty of defensive work against passing," the mentor said. "And if they can't stop the Old Liners Saturday, then it will be no one's fault but their own." And there was an extensive drill along this line today.

Riggs and his assistant, Valentine (Dutch) Lentz, view the game as a question mark, yet at the same time are looking hopefully at the probable outcome. Reports of a heavy cripple list coming from College Park, are given little attention by the Johnny mentors. On the contrary, the team is being pointed to give all it has.

From tackle to tackle, the Johnnies will put an experienced group in the field, men who are capable of playing good football. Riggs is more alarmed as to what his back field men will show. In other words he is dubious about coordination, with Ed Delisio, Washington boy, the only really experienced back in the group. De Lisio and Angus Lamond will act as co-captains for the game, St. John's having adopted the plan of naming a leader before each contest.

14-Year Old Dorothy Kirk Is Georgia Champion.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 26 (AP).—Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta's 14-year-old golfing sensation, who sprang a surprise in winning the State championship a year ago, will leave tomorrow for Philadelphia, where she plans to compete in the National women's tournament.

Miss Kirby, youngest player to wear the State crown, outclassed a representative field of veterans in the title event last year, triumphing in the finals over Margaret Maddox, of Atlanta, who had ruled Georgia golfers for several years.

Bewildered Levinsky Trains For Bout as Wife Obtains Writ

Kingfish's Bride to Sue Sister "Leaping Lena" for Alienation.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26 (AP).—Roxanne Krakow, nee Goldie Glickman, added to the troubles of her husband, King Levinsky, today, when she appeared before Circuit Judge Philip Finnegan and obtained a writ of ne exeat.

The writ forbids the kingfish to leave the court's jurisdiction, but he already is in Malwaukee training for a fight Friday night. When he returns, Levinsky must surrender and post $1,000 bond or suffer the indignity of being hoisted into jail.

Counsel for Levinsky's bride said he would file suit against Levinsky's sister-manager, "Leaping Lena" Levy, charging alienation of affections.

Milwaukee, Sept. 26 (AP).—King Levinsky, the one-time fish merchant of Chicago's Maxwell street, is training for a bout here Friday, but he is worrying more about his marital troubles than about Salvatore Ruggerillo, his Italian foe.

"Just Monday, I give her $50 for while I'm away, and she runs to a mouthpiece to get a divorce. She says I beat her. She can't prove nothing. So can the mother-in-law.

"I tell you, I luff her. And I ask you can she get alimony if I want to live with her and not get a divorce?

"I met her at the World Fair," continued the Kingfish. "She was just a $40-a-week fan dancer, eating hamburger when the Kingfish took pity on her and married her. Now she's eating steak wid mushrooms."

Still troubled for a way "to keep the in-laws out of my married life," the Kingfish was told to get a peace bond.

"Oi, I'll do it," the Kingfish announced sharply. "Then if they cause any trouble, they'll be in the jug and I'll be the king.

"I want they all should know on Maxwell street that the king is still the king."

Hoyt Gives But 2 Hits To Stop Cards, 3-0; Phils Beat Giants, 5-4

CHANCES of the St. Louis Cardinals wresting the National League pennant from the New York Giants were lessened considerably yesterday when both clubs suffered setbacks in the hair-raising stretch battle of the third hottest flag race the circuit ever knew.

Bill Terry's world champion Giants maintained their one-game lead over the Cardinals when the Giants lost to the Phillies, 5-4, and the Cards muffed a golden opportunity to forge ahead by losing to the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 0.

These twin reversals left the pennant-hungry Cardinals in the unhappy position of being forced to win twice as many games as the Giants in order to tie New York for the flag. The Cards must sweep their four remaining games with Cincinnati in order to deadlock the Giants in the final standing, if New York takes its two remaining games with Brooklyn.

In that case the final standing would be:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
New York	95	58	.621
St. Louis	95	58	.621

P. Dean Ousted in 6th After Vaughan's Homer

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26 (AP).—Waite Hoyt, a veteran of the baseball wars, who was a world series star when Paul Dean was a barefoot boy in the Southern cotton fields, prevented the St. Louis Cardinals from moving into first place in the National League pennant race today.

HOYT.

Hoyt, who is staging a remarkable comeback with the Pittsburgh Pirates, held the Cardinals to two hits, both singles by Johnny Rothrock, and shut them out, 3 to 0. Young Dean, his starting mound opponent, gave six hits in six innings and retired in favor of a pinch-hitter.

As Bill Terry's New York Giants suffered another defeat at the hands of Philadelphia, the Cardinals remained one game behind last year's world champions.

The standings show the Cardinals tied with New York on the losing side of the ledger and two victories behind on the won side. The Red Birds still can gain a tie for the championship by winning their remaning four games, all with the Cincinnati Reds, even if the Giants win their two with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Vaughn's Homer Decisive.

A wild streak and a home run by Floyd (Arky) Vaughn caused the downfall of Dean, whose last previous start was a no-hit victory over Brooklyn.

Dean walked Hoyt and Lloyd Waner with two out in the third inning and Jensen singled to left, scoring Hoyt. In the sixth, with two out, Paul Waner picked on a half-speed ball and singled to center and Vaughn hit to the roof of

Failing Giants Bow Again to Phils, 5-4

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—The New York Giants received another severe setback in their battle for the National League pennant today when they dropped their second successive game to the Phillies, 5 to 4.

WILSON.

Gus Mancuso drove in all of the Giants' runs with two homers and a long fly, but in the end the world champions' first-string catcher was the "goat" of the game. He failed stop a low pitch that Relief Pitcher Adolfo Luque uncorked in the first of the ninth and Sylvester Johnson scored from third with what proved to be the deciding run. The pitch first was scored as a wild pitch, but the official scorer changed the ruling to a passed ball against the little Italian catcher.

The game was an exciting affair from the start, with the Phillies scoring first in the fifth and the Giants tying the count in the eighth on Mancuso's outfield fly.

Hal Schumacher, seeking his twenty-fourth victory of the season, and Euel Moore, the Phillies' Indian hurler from Oklahoma, started on the mound but neither finished. Schumacher was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the fifth and was followed by Carl Hubbell and Luque, who was charged with the defeat. Moore was sent to the showers after Manager Bill Terry led off the eighth with a single and Sylvester Johnson finished to receive credit for the victory.

Davis Leads Attack.

George Davis, former Giant outfielder, led the 16-hit attack off the three New York hurlers, connect-

Unencumbered Wins Graw Feature by Nose as Chartres' Rider Is Caught Napping

Bryson Wins By Reckless Maneuver

Jockey Creese Has Race Apparently Won; Is Careless at Finish.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Sept. 26.—Jockey Bob Creese is a remarkable young man. He might belong to that species of the human race which just must draw attention. Some spend their days sitting on nails, some stick pins and knives into their flesh, some allow themselves to be buried alive, some spend their lives standing on one foot and still others just look natural.

If Jockey Creese becomes tired of riding thoroughbred horses, he might travel to India, where he could join the freaks that roam that country. I believe Creese would do a big business because he certainly could show an innovation in that racket; that is, if he can manage to repeat daily his feat of today.

Strange as it seems, Jockey Creese can go to sleep in a saddle!

Sleeping Champion.

What is more Jockey Creese can sleep while the saddle is on the back of a fast, courageous race horse, running his heart out to win. Then again, Jockey Creese can go to sleep with 10,000 voices at bedlam pitch.

Other jockeys have been known to wander off to slumberland on a race horse. Perhaps the best known occasion was when Eddie Ambrose snored away a Preakness for the E. B. McLean stable. However, Jockey Creese proved today that he holds the current saddle-sleeping crown.

Thus, it was that the number of Unencumbered hung on the results board this afternoon in the position that should have held the number of Chatres.

Almost, Not Quite.

Creese had the mount on Chartes and apparently had the race won a thirty-second of a mile from the finish. The apprentice, J. Bryson, on Unencumbered, noted that Creese was making a very overconfident finish. With the reckless abandon that is characteristic of the young riders, he took a chance and was successful. He made a dive with Unencumbered through a narrow opening. Creese became aware of Bryson's presence only as the boy shot his mount up to Chatres' saddle post. Creese tried to rouse Chatres, but too late.

Unencumbered had stuck his nose in front. It was all over except that $12.40 pay-off.

Rebel Yell, which had battled with Garden Message for the lead most of the route, was a tiring third in the field of seven accepting the issue over the mile and a sixteenth course.

The race was the feature, although a nameless claiming affair.

The same Jockey Creese made no mistakes with One Chance, in the mile-and-a-sixteenth number, however. He scuffled with hand and heel to bring his mount a half length in advance of the field of six. Fairly Wild was second and Flagstone, forced into tight quarters in the final 50 yards, third.

Boston Brook at $92.

Boston Brook, a rank outsider paying $92.60 straight, $54 to place and $27.30 to show, skipped home three lengths in front of another band of maiden juveniles in the second event. The well-played Gifted Lady was second and M. J. Brennan took the show. Boston Brook took command after the first quarter and was never seriously threatened for the remainder of the 5½ furlongs.

Dornoch, fresh from a successful New England campaign, handily won his first local test, the 6-furlong third race. He turned back the favorite, Squeeze Out, by a length and a half, after overhauling the latter at the sixteenth pole. Lodorus overhauled tiring horses for the show. The winner paid $6.80.

Easter Herald, a frequent winner on the Maryland half-milers this summer, graduated on a mile oval when he turned back seven other sprinters over the 6 furlongs of the fourth race. He was only mildly played, returning $16.00 straight. Liberty Oak was a tenacious second, a half-length back of the winner and a head in advance of Black Song, the third horse.

BOSTON BROOK wore IWINTOO down after leaving back stretch, opened up a winning lead and finished under restraint. GIFTED LADY broke from extreme outside, maintained a forward position, but was unable to menace the winner. M. J. BRENNAN worked his way up on outside and closed with good courage.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:26½. Winner, R. G. Merion's ch. g. (5), by Donnaconna—Dearie. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $450; second, $100; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DORNOCH, $6.80, $2.90, $2.80; SQUEEZE OUT, $2.50, $2.50; LODORUS, $10.30.

DORNOCH, restrained back of the early leaders and favored by the fast pace, swung to the outside at the stretch turn, wore SQUEEZE OUT down and came out gradually. SQUEEZE OUT kept in near pursuit of VACILLATE to hold a forward position, took brief lead, but could not stall off DORNOCH. LODORUS, taken back in the first half mile, went to the outside when put to a drive and closed stoutly.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:54. Off at 3:55. Winner, Mrs C. M. Feltner's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EASTER HERALD, $16.00, $7.70, $3.80; LIBERTY OAK, $12.60, $5.90; BLACK SONG, $2.90.

EASTER HERALD, stoutly ridden during the opening furlong to gain a brief lead, was eased back when in tight quarters, went to the outside for the final drive and was up to withstand a hard drive in the closing furlong. LIBERTY OAK followed within striking distance of the pacemakers, came in between the leaders at midstretch and closed resolutely. BLACK SONG was used up racing WILROB into defeat and he weakened.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:25. Off at once. Winner, Bomar Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNENCUMBERED, $12.40, $5.70, $3.00; CHARTRES, $4.20, $2.90; REBEL YELL, $2.90.

UNENCUMBERED, hurried to the first turn to assume a forward position, raced on inside of the leaders from the beginning, then was steered through on the inside and was up in the final strides. CHARTRES, reserved off the early pace and racing smoothly, went to the outside to take command, but Creese became overconfident in the closing furlong and failed to notice UNENCUMBERED on inside. REBEL YELL held on gamely under pressure.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800 (claiming price, $1,500 to $2,000). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:56½. ONE CHANCE went around his opposition when gaining strongly in last five-sixteenths and was up in last 70 yards. FAIRLY WILD was hard ridden and held on gamely. FLAGSTONE raced LEONIE into early submission and was holding on gamely until he was crowded by the first two in last 20 yards. Meade made a claim of foul which was not allowed.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:25. Off at 5:26½. Winner, Starmount Stable's br. f. CHEROKEE SAL was sent into an easy lead and strongly restrained while resisting BUNGALOW, was shaken up after being straightened into home stretch and had enough left to stall off SUN VESTAL. Latter, placed in a contending position in early racing, closed with good speed. BUNGALOW went strongly for the first six furlongs, but was not good enough. EVENING CHIMES had speed in spots. OUR SHIP tired.

Happily Married?

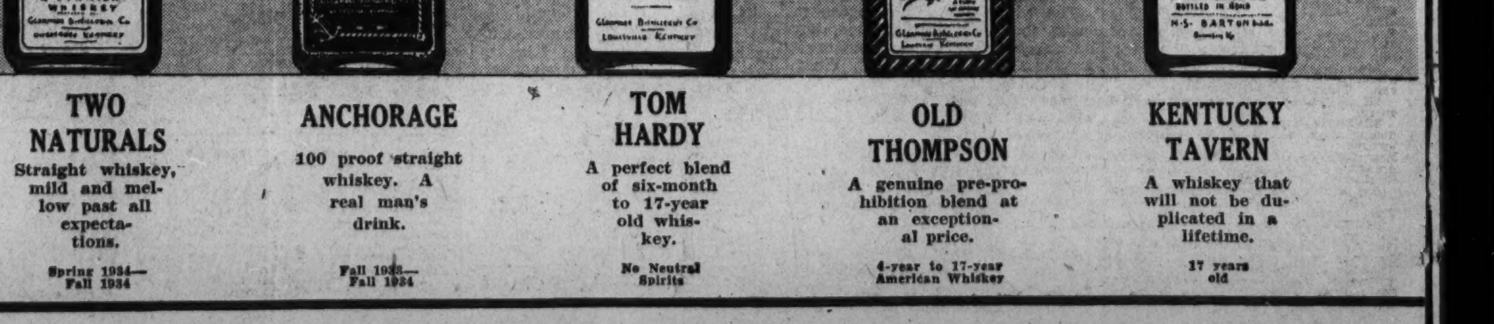

WE do not know if Glenmore Distillery whiskies are happily married or not, for it seems as tho a happy marriage these days only exists between alcohol and whiskey.

The old-fashioned wine and liquor firms believed that straight whiskies, blended together without neutral spirits, alias alcohol, is a better product. Perhaps we are wrong, but if you drink the modern, happily married product, it's your stomach.

The Glenmore Distilleries is an old-fashioned firm making only old-fashioned whiskey. Why not try one of these old-fashioned brands and see the difference, both for immediate enjoyment and the morning after?

Van Wie and Glutting Play Barton and Gourlay as Curtis Golf Matches Open Today

Stars Picked For Other Matches

Orcutt-Cheney to Face Fishwick-Morgan at Chevy Chase.

By Dave Herman.

VIRGINIA VAN WIE, National champion, and Charlotte Glutting, New Jersey title holder, will meet Pam Barton, 17-year-old star, and Molly Gourlay, veteran English golfer, in this afternoon's feature Scotch foursome of the international matches for the Curtis Cup between America and Great Britain at Chevy Chase.

The definite starting line-ups, as announced last night by Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, nonplaying captain of the Americans, and Doris Chambers, captain of the British, bring into action two other foursomes composed of the following golfers:

Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., and Mrs. L. D. Cheney, of San Gabriel, Calif., vs. Diana Fishwick and Wanda Morgan.

Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City, and Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines, Iowa, vs. Diana Plumpton and Mrs. J. B. Walker.

Miss Glutting Named.

Mrs. Vare's decision to place Miss Glutting, who hails from West Orange, N. J., with Miss Van Wie, the smooth-stroking Chicago lassie, did not come as a surprise. Some idea as to the No. 1 starting twosome for the Americans was gleaned yesterday afternoon when Miss Van Wie and Miss Glutting hit alternate shots during the course of a practice round. Together they scored a 77, one over par.

The feature Scotch foursome, starting at 1:30 p. m., will find two seasoned Yankee campaigners, young though they be, pitted against a versatile British veteran and a young lady, who reached the finals of the famous British championship only last May. Miss Gourlay has not been playing particularly well in practice rounds, but she has had more experience than any of her other seven companions, having won the English closed title twice, the French open three times, the Surrey County title six times, the Belgian open twice, and the Swedish open once. Her record is impressive. Apparently when Capt. Chambers selected Miss Gourlay to team with Miss Barton she had in mind a veteran steadying a youthful star.

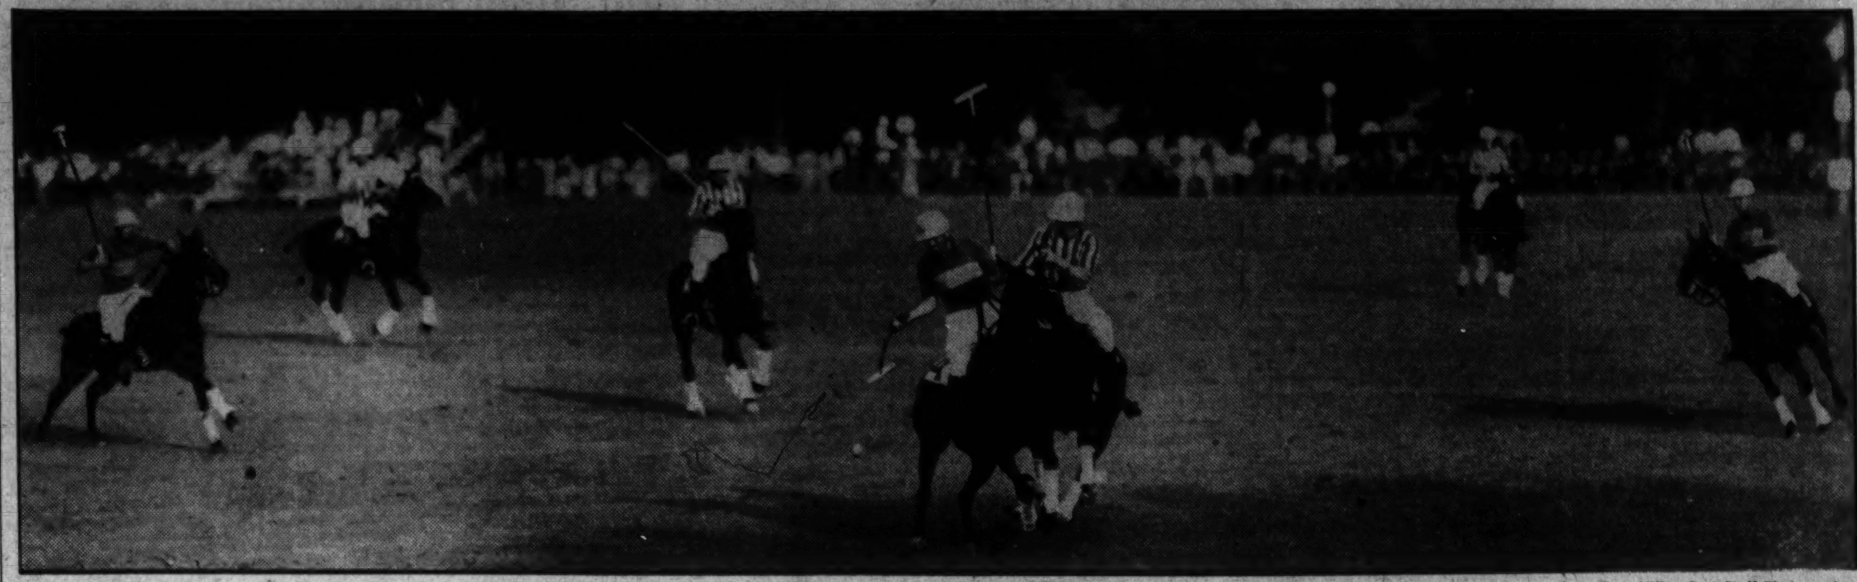

Miss Barton Has Power.

Miss Barton, a stocky little miss, who hits prodigious tee shots, has been the big talk of the British players during the practice rounds.

Twice National champion, Miss Van Wie is America's greatest feminine golfer today. She is long off the tee and plays a sweet short game. She and Miss Glutting should make a good team, since the New Jersey champion is an unusually long driver, but not as brilliant with her irons and putter as the champion.

The match in which Miss Orcutt, four times Metropolitan title holder, and Mrs. Cheney, former National runner-up and twice Western title holder, will oppose Miss Fishwick, 1930 British champion, and Miss Morgan, an English golfer of note, promises to be keenly contested. It will start at 1:40, and 10 minutes later Mrs. Hill, three-time Western champion, and Miss Robinson, present Western title holder, will tee off against Miss Plumpton, 1933 runner-up for the British Open, and Mrs. Walker, of Ireland, present Scottish champion.

Close Riding as U. S. and Mexican Army Poloists Battled at West Potomac Park

eran Americans, outmaneuvered and outclassed.

The Mexicans were eager to win yesterday, eager to redeem themselves in the eyes of the Americans for what they thought was a miserable exhibition in the first game. From the opening whistle to the final gong an hour and a half later they pressed their fast little ponies to the utmost and fought despartely to stem the attack of a superior American team.

From Uncle Sam's standpoint, his representatives played like Americans like to have their representatives play. They made clear that they weren't out there to show anybody any mercy. They virtually ripped their opponents apart before the game was half over, taking a 3 to 0 lead in the first chukker. At the end of the half they had a 10 to 4 lead. The way they were going, it seemed it would take a fleet of 10-ton trucks to stop them.

But it didn't daunt the Mexicans. Back they came like four charging knights in medieval combat. Four times they scored in the second half while the United States was counting but twice. Eight times they crossed the American end line, time and again failing to score only by inches. It was a stirring display of what in America is aptly summed up in a four-letter word.

It was a miraculous change and all the more so because the Americans appeared to be bearing down with all the spirit which marked their first-half scoring spree. They were riding and hitting just as ambitiously and if they let up, it wasn't apparent to the naked eye. Perhaps if the game had been closer the United States might have been able to score at least once in those last three periods. But that is something nobody will ever know. As it was, the Mexicans held them scoreless, while driving through for three goals on their own part.

Read Scores Seven Goals.

The scoring honors for the day went to 200-pound Lieut. George H. Read, the boy who ran away from Western High School at the age of 17 to go to war. The big, happy-go-lucky lieutenant, who hits a polo ball like Ruth hits a baseball, tallied seven of the United States goals, three of them coming in the third period. Capt. Chester E. (Stub) Davis counted five times, two of them from difficult angles.

Half of the Mexican points came from the mallet of young Capt. Antonio Nava, at No. 2, but Capt. Antonio Perez played probably the most sensational as well as the most effective polo for the visitors, stopping numerous American attacks and taking a vital part in getting the ball in scoring position.

The game was a colorful contest to watch, packed with close, hard riding and bumping. It wasn't 30 seconds old before a foul had been committed by the Americans and inside of the next 30 seconds the Mexicans were guilty of the same offense. Nava missed the free shot awarded for the first one and in the mixup that followed an American was fouled. Captain Davis made the free shot for the first goal of the game.

Maj. C. C. (C.-Square) Smith, the veteran United States back, turned a Mexican offensive sally and big Read galloped in to clout a 50-yarder for the second score. Perez failed on a free shot and Davis took the ball single-handed 150 yards and had the spectators rubbing their eyes by slamming the willow through the posts at an amazingly difficult angle shortly before the period ended.

Nava scored the Mexicans' first goal not long after the start of the second chukker on a perfect back-hand pass from Gracia and Capt. Quintin Reyes, the grim and efficient No. 3 man of the visitors, came back a moment later, after Perez had turned the American attack, to carry the ball half the length of the field and score. At 3-2, this was the closest the score was to be.

Once more Uncle Sam's forces began their hammering drive. Lieut. E. A. Walker, the 24-year-old No. 2, who was instrumental in getting the ball into scoring territory, took a hand in the point-getting, tallying on another sharply-angled shot. The crowd had no sooner recovered than Davis made good on a 60-yard slam which went through the posts on almost a horizontal plane.

Read scored as the third period got under way and Nava backed a neat one through shortly afterward to make the score 6-3. The Americans were luring the Mexicans out of position nicely, using Read's accurate hitting to advantage and the big fellow scored twice more before the gong sounded.

the right-field pavilion, scoring behind him.

After Dean retired for a pinch-hitter in the home half of the sixth, Wild Bill Hallahan hurled three hitless innings, turning back the Pirates in order.

Only two Cardinals advanced as far as second base and not until the ninth did they have two men on the runways. Then Crawford, batting for Hallahan, was safe on Vaughn's fumble and Healey, running for Crawford, reached second on Martin's infield out.

It was the eleventh defeat for Paul Dean, as compared with 18 victories, in his freshman year in the major leagues.

The game attracted 8,500 customers.

ing with four hits, including a double, in five times at bat. Mancuso's bat completely dominated the champions' 8-hit offense. He hit his first homer in the fifth with the bases empty and connected with his second in the seventh with George Watkins perched on first as the result of a single.

The setback was the Giants' eleventh defeat in their last 21 games in three weeks, during which their seven-game lead has rapidly melted away. They finish the season with single games against Brooklyn Saturday and Sunday.

Rockingham Race Feature to Clarify

4-Year-Old Winner of $2,500 Stafford.

Salem, N. H., Sept. 26 (AP).—With a burst which blinded the rest of the field, W. C. Stroube's 4-year-old colt, Clarify, almost 7 to 1 on the closing odds, won the Stafford Handicap, a $2,500 stake sprint of 6 furlongs for older horses this afternoon.

In scoring his victory before a crowd of 10,000, Clarify proved he had returned to the winter form which made him one of the most consistent sprinters in racing. Rated well by Jockey Charley Landolt, he earned $2,010 for his owner, the Texas oil man.

dox, will comprise the first-string backfield, are all nice young boys, but all that they are or hope to be they will owe to that great big line.

Sample May Develop.

The talent in Tilson's back field hits a sharp decline after Mattox is checked off. Arnold, Seaton and Bailey won their letters last season, but then the W. and L. back field was no great shucks as a separate entity. There's Preston Moore, an ambitious junior, who might break into the line-up, but the guy with the most possibilities is Sample, the sophomore.

Tilson subscribes to Warner's double-wing back formation with its hocus-pocus behind the line, and with his forward wall being what it is, he may run his kicking plays from close formation instead of the regular punting line-up, thus gaining the added yardage.

Ellis, the end, and Moore and Arnold will 'tend to the kicking that promises to be only average, as does the passing, which will be done by Moore, Mattox and Seaton whenever they are in the line-up. But those two ends, Smith and Ellis, are adept at pass-receiving, which, in the light of the team's ball-carrying weakness, is slated to be greatly emphasized.

You may gather from all of this that the Generals have no triple-threat man. That's right. Mattox can run and pass, but he can't kick, and Moore can kick and pass, but he is no Grange with the ball under his arm.

Now, then. The Generals had a work-out last Saturday when they walloped Wofford, 14 to 0, and looked like a healthy lot in the act, but nobody is accusing Wofford of being a great ball club this fall.

Should Win State Games.

But the opposition on Saturday will be something else again. Kentucky, I mean. After that comes Maryland, West Virginia, Princeton, V. P. I., Navy, Virginia, William and Mary and South Carolina. There's a few lickings for the Generals in that bunch, probably by Maryland, Princeton, Navy and South Carolina.

But Washington and Lee will be glad to swap those defeats for a clean record in its intra-State games. That's the nice part about Virginia football. The teams down here can lose to Slippery Rock, Kalamazoo Teachers, Takoma School of Mines and the Electoral College, but if they lick their neighbors, the season's a rousing success.

As I was saying, they're already saying that Washington and Lee has a lock on the State title, and if you look no further than the line you'll hop onto the band wagon. But peer into that back field and you'll feel like taking the whole thing under consideration again.

Tomorrow—University of Virginia.

Tebell Is Driving Virginia's Squad

University, Va., Sept. 26 (AP). With Virginia's opening game only three days off, Coach Gus Tebell found more than enough for the Cavaliers to do this afternoon after their unimpressive showing yesterday in their first scrimmage against the freshmen.

Saturday afternoon Virginia will conclude four weeks of preliminary practice by playing Hampden-Sydney College in Scott Stadium. The Cavalier attack was "tried on the dog" against the freshmen, who have been drilling less than ten days. And it took the regulars more than an hour to drive 70 yards to the goal line.

The Cavalier line drew the brunt of the criticism from Coaches Tebell and Slaughter. They minced no words with the forwards because they knew apparently that the play of the center, the guards and the tackles will be all important when the team swings into action against the powerful combination of veteran linemen that Hampden-Sydney is expected to show.

Chief Pilot Winner Of Chicago Feature

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Chief Pilot galloped to victory in a blinding rain and electrical storm at Lincoln Fields today. Ridden by Jockey Jimmy King, Chief Pilot, owned by F. F. Woodman, took down the top race by two and one-half lengths over Prince Torch. Bataille finished third in the three-quarter sprint.

It was so dark during the running of the race that the saddle cloth numbers and jockey colors were almost indiscernible.

Chief Pilot ran the distance in 1:13 and paid $13.26.

Championship Games Sunday Spur Interest in Post Baseball Association Program

National City Honors at Stake

Independent and Virginia Titles Hinge on 3 Contests.

DESPITE the gradual regress of sandlot ball before the onrush of football, there still remains an abundance of interest in The Post Association championship series among both week-day and Sunday leagues, and especially in the selection of the outstanding sandlot player.

Fans are eagerly awaiting Sunday's championship battle between Pig 'n' Whistle and Blue Flame Valet Shop for the National City League title. Considerable interest will also be focused on the Sunday's double-header between Capitol for The Post Association title in the Heights and Mount Rainier Grays, District Independent League.

The third titular attraction between Manassas and Middleburg, in a return game on the latter's field, is the chief topic of discussion among the Virginia baseball fans.

Who Is Lucky Player?

More than a score of young players, who have achieved distinction on the diamond in Post Association Leagues during the past season, are being carefully considered in the choice of the outstanding player. The fortunate young man chosen will be placed on the threshold of a future baseball career by a six-weeks' training and trial in company with the Washington Baseball Team at its spring training camp—all at the expense of The Washington Past.

There are promising condidates from all the leagues. Archie Scrivner, of Heurich Brewers; Adger Adair, Pig 'n' Whistle player, and Charles Mackie, Warwick A. C. southpaw; Austin Pohl, Capitol Heights; Joe Sullivan, of Benning A. C., rank high among the pitchers. Among a score of infielders on the impressive list are Bill Shelton, Heurich; Joe Mills, Pig 'n' Whistle; Floyd Vetter, Manassas; Bill Radke, Heurichs; Walter Morris, Blue Flame Valet, and Charlie Reigleman, of Miller Furniture.

Bill Knight, flashy outfielder of the Heurich nine; Jack Saunders, slugging star of Manassas; Archie Via, Ballston fly chaser, have impressed by their consistently fine fielding and hitting.

Marshall Meets Shikat Indoors

Match Will Open Season at Auditorium.

Herr Richard Shikat, der Deutches Schwerkampfer, yesterday was elected to pit his gutteral growling against the blond burping of Everett Marshall in the headline wrestling exhibition at the Auditorium a week from tonight.

Herr Shikat was nominated as an alternate opponent for the Blond Beauty at the time Jeems Londos was being considered for the card that will move the grunt and groaners from the wide open spaces of Griffith's brawl yard to the smoky confines of the Auditorium. The election of der Deutsches Schwerkampfer was effected by the board of directors of the Wrestlers Association when the Georgeous Greek flatly refused Marshall as an opponent at the present time.

Although Marshall previously had announced he would not go to the mat until awarded a return match with Londos here, he capitulated under pressure from the board of directors, agreeing to meet der Deutsches Schwerkampfer. Londos has assured the board of directors that he would meet any opponent selected for him, including Marshall, in the near future.

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Final arrangements for the radio broadcast of the 1934 world series were made today at a conference attended by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, representatives of the Ford Motor Co. and officials of the National and Columbia broadcasting chains.

The announcers, selected with the approval of the commissioner, were:

Columbia Broadcasting Co.—Pat Flanagan and France Laux to describe play-by-play; Ted Husing to cover preliminaries.

V. M. I. Scrubs Tie Varsity Team, 6-6

Freshmen Show Unusual Strength Against Regulars.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—V. M. I.'s varsity caught a Tartar today in the embattled freshman eleven. After a spirited scrimmage the score read 6-6, with Clark scoring for the varsity after Beard, former Vinton star, had plunged through for the freshman tally.

The first-year players showed unusual strength, but Coaches Raftery and Hess were dissatisfied with the ragged tackling and defense work of the "A" team. Defense will be stressed in practice again tomorrow, they said.

Maryland A. C. Drills.

Maryland A. C. football team will drill tonight on the Seat Pleasant field at 7:30. Coach Beyer requests all candidates report promptly.

Brewers Meet Kanns Today In Series Tilt

Victory Will Give Heurich Club Right to Play G.P.O. for Title.

HEURICH BREWERS will be striving for their third straight series victory in their clash with Kann's store team this afternoon at 4 o'clock, on the South Ellipse diamond. These nines and Government Printing Office from the Departmental League are the only survivors of an original field of seven week-day league champion teams entered in The Post Association Championship Tourney.

Kann's aggregation of former high school stars faces a huge task in today's battle against the strong Heurich's club. The Store League pennant winners have already suffered one series loss, and a defeat by the Brewers will narrow the series competition to two teams, Heurichs and G. P. O. No matter who wins today's game, the Printers will meet the victor Friday on the same diamond.

Joe Wallach, whose hurling carried the Kannsmen to two sectional pennants in the Department Store loop, will be on the firing line against the Brewers. Ev Russell or Archie Scrivner will pitch for Heurich's.

Six-Man Grid Team Given Tryout

Rules Revised to Restore Game's Popularity and Cut Cost.

HEBRON, Nebr., Sept. 26 (U.P.)—Six-man football, intended to restore the gridiron sport to popularity with small high schools, was inaugurated here tonight.

The game will be played under revised regulations, drafted by Stephen Epler, assistant coach at Beatrice High School, and is designed to accomplish three purposes:

1. Reduce the expense of equipping the regulation eleven-man teams.
2. Limit the possibility of injury to players.
3. Preserve the enthusiasm and interest that the present game of football offers.

The new rules were given a tryout by two picked teams from the Blue Valley Conference. One will be comprised of players from Chester and Hardy High Schools. The other will be made up of students from Alexandria and Belvidere.

Gallico Thinks Personalities Of Pilots May Decide Series

By Paul Gallico.

WORLD series are not won on personalities. On the other hand, ball players will do more for a right guy than a wrong guy, for a guy with a grin than a guy with a scowl and for a popular fellow. Popular feeling rides with a popular manager. Newspapermen have a lot to do with the building of popularity. The fans and rooters are quick to catch friendliness in a man through the columns of their favorite sports writers. With this little preamble we are set to discuss the particular problems of Will Terry and Mickey Cochrane—with a weather eye cocked to Master Frankie Frisch, who might substitute for Terry and his Giants in the last minute.

Not that Terry is a wrong guy, but he hasn't the personality nor the capacity for making and holding friends that Cochrane has. He is not a mixer, and above all he lacks in tact, which is the name we give the ability to pass the time of day or be pleasant to guys you don't like, because it is politic to do so. Terry is the kind of boy, blunt and outspoken, who is always looking forward to the day when he can tell everybody to go to hell and doesn't have to be nice to anybody he doesn't want to be nice to, and then finds that that day never really comes.

There is no sycophant in Cochrane. Mickey would rebuke a man as quickly as Terry, but Cochrane likes more people than Terry does. He is more tolerant and more keenly alive to the value of friends. Mickey is loved, not only in Detroit, but all around the circuit. Terry's personal popularity at home is questionable.

Cochrane Emotional.

What has all this to do with a world series in which nine men play nine other men? Nothing, really, and yet in a way a good deal. It has never been proven that a group of people can sit in a grandstand and hate a man into striking out or dropping a fly ball. But mass feeling has a very definite effect upon the feeling of the individual against whom feeling is directed, upon his spirits and general mental process.

You will admit that a man who goes into a game mad and muttering an "I'll show them," has about a strike and a half on him already. He isn't relaxed in his thinking and he won't be relaxed in his body. From such small causes grow peculiar results, sometimes. Psychologically the edge is all with Cochrane.

Cochrane is emotional, Terry is cold-blooded. You may take your choice as to the advantage there. It remains one of personal choice. In a tight spot, some like their leaders cool and mathematical, others prefer them to be inspired. Personally I am for the temperamental chap every time, especially in sport. Your cool fellow goes along at an even pace. Your emotional chap can be awfully bad, but he can also rise to heights that his rival can not hope to scale. In real crises he is capable of outdoing himself. But also one mustn't forget that the emotional manager is liable to let his heart sway his head. Terry will never make that mistake. He has the advantage there.

Equal as Players.

The two men are about on a par as players. Both were great athletes. Both are getting on in years. Both are good hitters. Cochrane plays more of a key position as catcher than does Terry at first base and so will have a greater strain on him during the series. Physical errors made by Cochrane will let in runs. It is bound to tell on him. And yet, as catcher, Cochrane will be in closer touch with his pitchers than Terry will. A world series will frequently hinge upon letting a tiring pitcher throw one ball too many.

As for their mental processes, these seem about even. Terry, if anything, thinks too much. He is terribly alert and alive and he frequently thinks himself out of ball games that might be won if let alone. And, of course, until I ask him, I will never know why Cochrane let Rowe cool his heels on the bench through the first game of a double-header before going in to pitch a game that meant a record for him. It looked like a complete lack of understanding of human psychology and physiology both.

Their achievements are practically duplicate. Cochrane did this year with Detroit what Terry did last year with the Giants. But Terry's machine has run down this year, while Cochrane's is still on the up-grade and hitting on all cylinders. Somehow you feel that it is Cochrane's year, and that he will have the world series edge, thinking and playing, don't you?

Alexandria's Police Nine Wins Title

Driefus' Hit Beats Post Team, 1-0, and Ends Race for Crown.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Doc Driefus gambled on a pitched ball here today, and with Taylor on second and the count three balls and no strikes he lined a booming single against the center field wall, that netted the Police nine a run, and the championship of the Commercial League. The Blues had won an earlier game and today's victory gave them the best two out of three and the flag.

The downfall of The Post nine began in the first of the third. Morgan walked Taylor, the first batter to face him; Godfrey sacrificed, Taylor advancing to the mid sack. Clark, the next hitter, lined to right. Langford made a great running catch of the ball and held Taylor on second. Driefus then inserted what proved the telling blow of the game.

Fill Bases, No Score.

In the fourth The Post players combined their efforts and with some help from the opposition loaded the bases. With one down, Brewer lined a single to center. Taylor hit the next batter, Hamilton, and all three runners were safe when Godfrey failed to come up with McMenniman's hot smash that went for a hit. At this point, The Post tried a squeeze play, Marty Nugent, the hitter, fouled the first pitch. The ball was again put in play, and on the next pitch Taylor dusted Nugent off and Brewer proved an easy victim for Kidwell when he attempted to score. Kidwell then threw quickly to Colosanto at second who tagged McMenniman for the third out when he and Langford, who ran for Hamilton, got the signals mixed. Doug Morgan hurled a beautiful game for the losers, allowing a single base hit.

Within the next week or ten days the awards for the most valuable player, leading hitter, base runner and most effective pitcher will be made.

Central Faces Alexandria High Today

Coach Given Has Gridders Primed for Invasion of District Team.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 26 (Spl.).—Alexandria High School's gridders went through a two-hour practice session at Baggett's field here today in preparation for their game with Central of Washington tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. The condition of the entire squad is near perfect and to verify this, after a lengthly drill they raced to the showers, a good quarter-mile from the playing field.

Coach Given has a fine collection of ball carriers, hard tacklers and blockers, and many wide-awake linemen to pick for his starting eleven tomorrow. Paul Shu, Jack Varney, Lee Fones and Dutch Ewald probably will start in the back field. Shu's brilliant dashes and line plunges against Eastern make him the most serious threat of the Twins backs. Lee Fones, shifty signal barker, can also be looked forward to for his share of ground gaining. He kicks and passes with an accuracy comparable to many collegians. Varney and Ewald, the other two backs, are the steady dependable type of gridmen and can be counted on to cause the Central eleven many anxious moments.

Boast Three Ends.

Saunders, Pullman and Nugent are the ends. These players are built quite alike, all three being the lanky type that can so easily get up to snag a pass or reach out and nab a runner when least expected. Nugent's alertness and speed gave the Twins their score against Eastern, when he grabbed a partially blocked kick and romped for a touchdown. The tackles, Co-Capts. Fritter and Luckett and Noble are seasoned performers. Noble and Fritter smeared Eastern's running attack and Coach Given counts on these players to make tomorrow afternoon very unpleasant for Central's backs. Robinson, McCewan and Apperson, all green men, play the guard positions, and Eddie Beach, tested performer, will hold down the pivot position.

School spirit at Alexandria is returning with a bang. Tonight a large bonfire was arranged in the rear of the school and some 600 students sang school songs and practiced yells for tomorrow, their first home game. They hope to spur the Twins to a victory over Central.

Coopy Goodwin, veteran back of the Fraters semipro eleven, made his initial appearance for practice tonight. Jimmie Blake, star full back and triple threat for the Pirate A. C. last season, has been working out with the locals and Coach Colosanto believes that the 6-foot 2-inch back will fit nicely into the back field. Blake has been getting off kicks that soar beautifully through the air for 55 to 65 yards. This accomplishment alone guarantees him the chance of sharing the kicking duties with Hardy Gensmere, veteran gridder. Blake also passes at great distance with deadly accuracy.

Dick Lanahan is the latest addition to Celtics nine for the resumption of the Elk series at Fredericksburg Sunday. Lanahan will work in the first game that begins at 1:45 p. m.

Covelli, Paul Bout Slated Monday

Turner Turns to Feathers in Arranging Card at Auditorium.

ABANDONING for the nonce the heavyweight standard to which he clung throughout the summer, Promoter Joe Turner will dedicate his opening card at the Auditorium next Monday to featherweight flash and furore.

Frankie (Kid) Covelli and Tommy Paul will participate in the ten-round headline of flash and furore. In Covelli, the former National Boxing Association champion, will be meeting one of the most up and coming of the present crop. The Brooklyn Italian not only has defeated Pete Sarron, but also boasts a knockout over Bucky Burton, who has a win and a draw with Sarron to his credit. Among Covelli's other recent victims have been Charley Von Reedon and Eddie Burl.

Paul created somewhat of a sensation in his only two appearances in nearby rings by drawing twice with Sarron at Portner's. Since that time he has been compaigning with uniform success from coast to coast, acquiring a draw with Kid Chocolate in a recent contest. He is currently ranked seventh among the contenders for the championship.

Harry Groves, the soporific southpaw, will resume his ring career in a special six-rounder against LeRoy Dougan, the Arkansas bulldog. Perhaps the most devastating puncher in the ring at his weight, Groves will be facing one of the cagiest ringmen campaigning in these parts in the person of Dougan.

Eddie Burl will make passes at Dominick Nicco of the Covelli stable in another six. Burl still is a main-eventer in most rings and his opponent is highly regarded in and about Gotham.

Bob Turner, the Norfolk knockerout, is slated to do eight rounds of battle with Jack Ennis in a middleweight semifinal. Stanford Carrier and Bill Howell will open in a four.

Canzoneri Gets Verdict Over Dubinsky

Former Title Holder Piles Up Lead to Win "Rubber" Bout.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (U.P.)—Little Tony Canzoneri, former holder of three world titles, tonight smashed his way back into the big-time fight picture by winning a close 10-round decision over Harry Dublinsky, of Chicago, in their third or "rubber" meeting at Ebbets Field.

A crowd of about 17,000 jamming the ball park saw Canzoneri just squeeze out a verdict over the cold-eyed Chicago welter by virtue of a long lead piled up in the first four rounds. In these rounds he feinted, jabbed and hooked, but refused to be pulled into the infighting that spelled his defeat in their second fight here several weeks ago.

In a sense, it was a hollow victory for the battered Canzoneri, whose busy fists have held three world titles in a career extending over a decade. At the final bell he was spitting great mouthfuls of blood, his face was the texture of raw meat, while Dublinsky, far less marked, was seemingly still full of the fight that just fell short of victory.

St. Louis Rooters To Present Rings To Dean Brothers

St. Louis, Sept. 26 (AP).—St. Louis baseball fans are going to say it with diamonds to Paul and Dizzy Dean.

A Dean day committee today decided diamond rings will be presented to the Cardinals' famous pitching pair when they step onto the ball diamond Sunday.

The gifts are to be in appreciation of the Deans' work for the St. Louis team this season. Contributions of any size, from a few pennies up, are being made by admirers of the brothers.

Brewers Win and Lose.

Led by Chris Heurich, jr., a band of confident Brewers sallied forth yesterday to do battle with the vaunted Heurich Regulars, but with only mediocre success. However, the Brewers have a valid claim to a moral victory, as the Regulars only scored 6 runs to their 3.

Young Marine Stars in Shoot At Quantico; D. C. Man Wins

CAPTURING the important National Rifle Association members' match with a perfect score of 50x50, Corpl. M. W. Robinson, a young marine who hails from Benson, Minn., made a sudden exit from the slightly regarded tyro class of rifle marksmen at the opening of the Middle Atlantic States high-powered rifle and pistol championship tournament over the Marine Corps ranges at Quantico, Va., yesterday.

The first six men in the match had perfect score of 50, but as seven of Robinson's ten shots were "v's," or dead-center counters, the winners honors went to him.

The winner's honors were divided among the Marine Corps and the Coast Guard, the former service capturing three of the matches and the Coast Guardmen the other two.

Corpl. Joseph Gulino, Marines, of Buffalo, N. Y., won the Marine Corps cup match with 98 x 100; Corpl. Robinson won the NRA Members' match with 50 x 50; Private R. R. Richards, Marines, of Fairbanks, Tex., won the famous Leech cup match with 105 to 105; Chief Boatswrain's Mate Paul Goulden, Coast Guard, won the Navy cup match with 98 to 100, and Boatswain's Mate Second-class M. N. Cobb, Coast Guard, won the Camp Perry Instructors' trophy match with 50 to 50 and another 50 in the shootoff, this being a rapid-fire event.

The matches, which will continue through Saturday, are being conructed by the Marine Corps in cooperation with the National Rifle Association.

The only District of Columbia madksman to gain a medal in the matches yesterday was Hugh E. Riley who won the honor of being the high civilian contender in the Navy cup match. He placed thirty-fifth among 94 entrants with a score of 89 to 100.

The five high in the various fired yesterday, with all tie scores broken in accordance with the rules, are:

D. C. Women Golfers Beat Baltimore

All-Star Team Avenge Earlier Defeat, 20-10; Mrs. Scott Cards 89.

GAINING revenge for an earlier season defeat, a 20-woman golf team from the District crushed an all-star Baltimore team yesterday at Congressional Country Club, 20 to 10.

Navy Stresses Pass Attack In Drill

Hamilton Directs Hard Workout for Opening With Indians.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 26.—An offensive drill in the overhead game held the spotlight in practice of the Navy grid squad, prepping for the opening game with William and Mary College to be played in Thompson Stadium here Saturday afternoon.

Head Coach Tom Hamilton put the back field candidates through a rehearsal of the pass plays, and then tried them out with a varsity combinatoin holding an extensive scrimmage against the husky plebe team. The plebes were utterly powerless to stem the attack, with the veteran Buzz Borries leading the way, Bill Clarke, another veteran, and Tommy King and Dick Pratt, the latter a Washington lad, all reeled off good gains with the variation of passes. Frequent changes were made in the line and back field, so that all of the understudies had a good workout.

Coach Hamilton was not prepared to announce his line-up for the game against the Indians, but it is not likely there will be many changes from the make-up today. This was the starting line-up: Dornin and Bull, ends; Cutter and Ferrara, tackles; Capt. Burns and Vogel, guards; Schacht, center; Pratt, quarter back; King and Borries, half backs; Clarke, full back.

Athletic authorities announced that the game would start at 2:15 p. m. The Navy plebes and Catholic U. freshmen will meet preceding the main event.

Aqueduct Steeplechase Is Taken by Black Bean

Aqueduct Race Track, Sept. 26 (AP). The Harbor Hill Steeplechase, for 3-year-olds exclusively, and, therefore, the only event of its kind in the country, turned out to be a hectic affair here this afternoon. Victory went to Gwladys Whitney's Black Bean, which recently won his first start over the jumps. The gelded son of Bostonian led Rigan McKinney's Santi Quaranti to the wire by a half-length in a whipping finish. Mrs. Dodge Sloan's National Anthem was third, 20 lengths behind.

Long Shot Wins Detroit Feature; Pay-off, $39.60

Detroit, Sept. 26 (AP).—Eddie J., Detroit owned, and overlooked by all but a handful of the fans, won the Chance Shot Purse, feature of today's card at the Detroit Fairgrounds Race Track, putting on a thrilling stretch duel with McCarthy to win by half a length. Slip Up was another half length behind McCarthy in third place. Straight tickets on the winner were worth $39.60 for $2.

Don Bestor's Band Booked With Grace Moore's "One Night of Love" at Earle

Orchestra Will Complete Rare Bill of Music

Last Heard Here in 1925; Ben Bernie at the Fox; About Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Don Bestor and his orchestra, one of the most popular radio, recording and stage bands in the country, have been booked to headline the stage portion of the bill for the week of October 5 at the Earle Theater, in conjunction with first Washington presentations of "One Night of Love," in which Grace Moore has created such a sensation on the screen. The combination of these two features assures a bill that will stand unique among the season's bookings for the superlative quality of its music.

Don Bestor has not appeared in the National Capital since September, 1925, when he played a week at the Rialto Theater as conductor of what was then known as the Benson Orchestra of Chicago, following a summer engagement in Atlantic City. He had then only recently succeeded Roy Bargy in the leadership of the Benson Orchestra, Bargy having cast his lot with Paul Whiteman, with whom he played Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue," in that memorable screen revue on which Universal squandered a fortune, "The King of Jazz." Don also is a pianist of the first water, although I believe now he confines his efforts solely to swishing the bamboo in front of his men.

A Great "Precision Band."

The present Don Bestor Orchestra has the reputation among composers and publishers of music of being the finest organization in America for determining the true value of a song, instrumental composition or special orchestral arrangement. It is one of the few popular orchestras in the country composed of thoroughly schooled musicians capable of realizing the fullest potentialities of every score placed before it. For this reason, the Bestor orchestra introduces more new numbers than any other band in the field. A good many of them never sound so well played by anyone else.

The nearest Don and his boys have come to Washington for the past nine years was a little over a year ago when they played an engagement, or attempted to, at Warrenton, Va. The dance for which they were engaged was stormed out by one of the worst bursts of weather of the year and broadcast commitments in New York prevented their playing through more than half the evening the following night.

Hope Comes True.

Frantically appealed to over long distance, I was able to arrange with Meyer Davis to send a relief unit to Warrenton in time to release Don for his radio appointments on Broadway next day. He expressed the hope then that he would get the opportunity to appear on a Washintgon stage some time soon again. So here he comes as part of the procession that has already included Ina Ray Hutton, Isham Jones, the California Collegians, Ben Bernie and other "name" groups.

With Grace Moore and her associates on the screen in one of the most skillfully contrived musical subjects ever filmed and Don Bestor and his instrumentalists on the stage, the week of October 5 at the Earle is something to look forward to.

In the meantime, blonde and curly-headed Miss Eleanor Smith, one of the more disturbing of the distaff publicity dispensers and a home-town gal who speaks the language of the dramatic desks, reminds me that Ben Bernie, aforementioned big cigar-and-fiddle man, hasn't really been in this season's local procession of orchestras yet, but will be back in Washington for a week's engagement at Loew's Fox, beginning tomorrow.

Ben returns here after one of the most important years in his life, a year that has made him even more of a figure in the amusement world than he was before—which was quite a figure, Winchell or no Winchell. Already a star of stage, radio and cafe, Ben is now a practically full-fledged motion picture actor, as all you femmes who caught his profile in "Shoot the Works" will testify. Bernie and "all the lads" are returning to Hollywood very shortly to begin work on their second flicker, entitled, aptly enough, "One Night Stand."

The king of ribbers and his orchestra have just returned from Sam Maceo's Hollywood Dinner Club on the Gulf of Mexico at Galveston, Tex., and he hopes you'll pardon his Southern accent. You will find the names of the specialists with the band in another column on this page. At least, I hope that other column is around here somewhere. It should be.

Hard on the Mothers.

It is the mother who suffers most from the excesses of a drunkard, as any good temperance lecturer will tell you. It is probably for this reason that "The Drunkard," holding forth on the Willard roof, is wearing down more mothers than any other relative in the famous old Barnum melodrama. The third is wringing her hands over the profligacy of Edward Middleton in this, the seventh week, and last, of the play's run.

Priscilla Holman first essayed the role of Mrs. Wilson, mother of the drunkard's unhappy bride. Then the role was assumed by that admirable Washington actress, Maud Howell Smith. Now, in the absence of Mrs. Smith from the city, the part is being taken by Edna Ellis Hilton, well-known Arts Club actress, who will be seen in the last two performances of the run tonight and Saturday night.

The termination of the Washington run of "The Drunkard, or the Fallen Saved," does not mean that the company will disband. The Washington cast intact will continue to present the piece on Wednesday and Friday nights in the old Lehmann Music Hall, in Baltimore, under the auspices of the Play Arts Guild.

Advance reservations for the last two Willard performances indicate capacity attendance right up to the fall of the final curtain.

Congratulations to Harry P. Somerville, managing director of the Willard, and all concerned. And thanks for the beer and the pretzels! You must come over and see us some time.

Denis E. Connell is directing "Uncle Tom's Cabin," scheduled for presentation in the City Theater, N street between Seventh and Eighth, the week beginning October 2. James Tate, producer, at first undertook the task of directing also, but found the double responsibility a trifle heavy, so upon the closing of the Roadside Theater's production of "The Tavern," in which Mr. Connell played the leading role, secured his services for "Uncle Tom." Equally competent as actor or director, Mr. Connell has staged musical comedies for the George Washington Troubadours, revues for the old St. Patrick Players and play after play for the Drama Guild and other local groups. His direction insures a Grade A "Tom show."

Dots and Dashes.

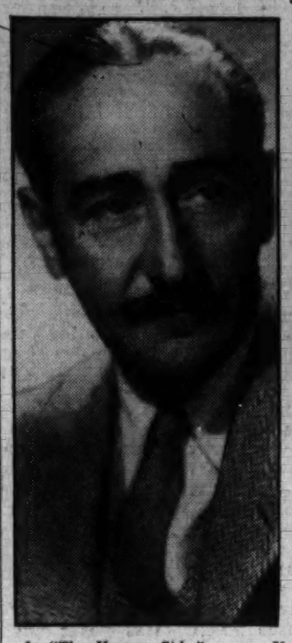

Tickets for the midnight public preview of Mae West's "Belle of the Nineties," at the Earle tonight at 11:15, are on sale at the box office of all the Warner Theaters in the Capital, at no increase in prices . . . The Columbia Players let no grass grow under their feet in selecting a new opening play for their season to supplant Frank B. Elser's "Low Bridge," which suddenly became "The Farmer Takes a Wife," opening the National Theater's season on Monday night, October 8 . . . Lula Vollmer's "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" is the substitute play . . . They are already at work on it . . . Brooke Johns, the gentleman farmer, who, when he isn't operating his night club in a duded-up barn, out Norbeck way, Wednesday and Saturday nights, is staging benefits for worthy causes, is at it again . . . Tomorrow night he will put on a benefit for the St. Paul M. E. Church South, 4700 Thirteenth street northwest . . . As m. c., he will present Evelyn Tyner, pianist; Henry Haviland, prestidigitator-Magician to youse guys in suspenders—Dement Bonifant, the 11-year-old "cowboy singer;" the Ryan Twins, dancers, and others . . . The Columbia Players, by the way, are selling a season subscription ticket, good for their complete list of six plays, for $3.50 . . . This is a slight change in tariff from last season's five-play subscription . . . And speaking of the nonprofessional theater—as we seem to have been doing a good deal today—Harold A. Long, chairman of the drama committee of the Arts Club, was host at the formal opening of the club's newly landscaped garden last night . . . "Pageant of Opera Airs" was presented . . . Marian Chace and her dancers shared stellar honors on the bill . . . Dick Powell, appearing in person at the Earle this week, was host at a rout in the Warner clubrooms on the seventh floor of the Earle Theater Building after last night's last performance . . . His associates on the bill, executives of the Warner organization, the dramatic desks of the local press and other friends were his guests at a soiree which, I keenly regret, this column was prevented from attending by Wednesday night's habitual press of official duties . . . The latest from the subterranean grapevine is that Phil Lampkin is to present Wilfred Smith from the orchestra pit as vocal soloist in his overture numbers at Loew's Fox . . . Would this be beginning tomorrow? . . . It wasn't exactly peaches and cream for everybody at Loew's Fox this week during the running off of the anniversary stage bill . . . Virginia Walters, one of the Fox Rhythmettes, broke one of her ribs in a collision with an unseen obstacle in leaving the stage in a hurry after one of the ensemble numbers . . . Yes, to revert very briefly, Wilfred Smith is the young man with the operatic voice who has sung from the Fox pit on previous occasions . . . Nice pipes he has . . . Amos 'n' Andy, Fokine Ballet, Ed Lowry, George Sidney and Eleanor Powell, all at the Fox soon . . . Whoopee!

"—and West Is West" Note.

In "Belle of the Nineties," which all of Washington probably will try to see tonight, Mae West is offered the world with a pink bow on it by John Miljan, as Ace, the gambler, but turns it down in favor of Roger Pryor, as the young prize-fighter.

Exercises a sort of Pryor lean, as you might say!

Stars of Today's New Films

Theaters Offer Agreeable Fare For Fall Trade

Mae West and Ben Bernie Are Among New Week's Star Attractions.

What it is confidently expected will prove to be a record-breaking picture engagement will be inaugurated at the Earle Theater tonight at 11:15 o'clock when Mae West's latest contribution to the world's feverish excitements, "Belle of the Nineties," will launch itself in the Capital. Despite censorial rumors to the contrary, this is typical Mae West from first flash to last—a story comparable to "She Done Him Wrong" and better than "I'm No Angel." In it the star is supported by a cast of excellent selection, headed by Roger Pryor, as her prize fighter lover; Johnny Mack Brown, John Miljan, Katherine De Mille, Warren Hymer and a host of others. The scene of the play is first a Northern city and later, for the most colorful episodes of the drama, New Orleans, where Ruby is the reigning beauty of the Sensation House. On the stage, Bert Walton, raconteur, will headline the bill. Other acts, beginning tomorrow, will be provided by Larry Adler, artist on the harmonica; Herbert, Lynne and Pearl in "The Sky's the Limit," and Betty Adair and Dick Richards in "Living Jewels." Universal News and orchestra will complete the bill.

* * * *

Beginning this morning at the Rialto Theater, the chief feature of the screen program will be "The Human Side," described as a deeply moving subject, starring Adolphe Menjou. In his supporting cast are such popular luminaries as Doris Kenyon, Betty Lawford, Joseph Cawthorne, Reginald Owen, Charlotte Henry, Master Dickie Moore and many others. The story concerns the love affairs of an irresponsible theatrical producer, who fascinates and irritates those dearest to him but is "always human." The bill will be completed by short sound subjects.

* * * *

The "yowsahs," sapient observations and musical novelties habitually supplied by Ben Bernie and "all the lads" will furnish the chief stage attraction for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater. Assisting the instrumental ensemble during this engagement, the Old Maestro will present Pat Kennedy, the unmasked tenor; Col. Manny Praeger and his Little German Band, Dick Stabile and his saxophone, Billy Wingus and Billy Severin in novelties, and other surprises. On the screen the major feature will be "Charlie Chan in London," with Warner Oland in the title role.

* * * *

"She Was a Lady," written by the daughter of Irvin S. Cobb, the famous humorist and short-story writer, is the principal film attraction announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Columbia Theater. The story centers in the experiences of a young girl compelled to overcome the almost insuperable obstacles to her career imposed by an unfortunate family skeleton. Helen Twelvetrees appears in the role of the heroine, supported by Donald Woods, late of the National Theater Players; Monroe Owsley and others of note.

* * * *

Fraught with beauty, charm and a gallery of matchless performances, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," it is announced, will continue for a second week, beginning tomorrow, at the Palace, with Norma Shearer, Fredric March and Charles Laughton sharing stellar honors. The picture was adapted from the Rudolph Besier stage play in which Katharine Cornell achieved so great a triumph. The supporting cast is led by Maureen O'Sullivan, Una O'Connor, Ralph Forbes and Flush, the spaniel.

* * * *

To satisfy the demand of those who were unable to see it during its recent engagement at the Earle, the Warner Brothers' production of "Dames" will be presented on F street for the week beginning tomorrow, at the Metropolitan Theater. In this lively musical subject the foremost roles are played by Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert, Guy Kibbee and ZaSu Pitts. A full 15-minute newsreel, a Betty Boop cartoon comedy, "Little Pal," and a Grantland Rice "Spotlight" added.

* * * *

So popular has the new talking version of "The Count of Monte Cristo" proved at RKO-Keith's Theater that it will be retained as the outstanding feature of the bill for a third consecutive week, beginning tomorrow. The title role of this famous old melodrama is played by Robert Donat, with Elissa Landi, Louis Calhern, Sidney Blackmer and O. P. Heggie heading the support. The feature is supplemented by short sound subjects, including the latest issue of the Pathe News.

* * * *

At the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the usual matinee performance Sunday afternoon, the attraction will be "Frolics," a new production of the Independent Burlesque Association, in which the principal performers are George Broadhurst, Dawn Delees, "Miss Cleveland of 1931;" Bill "Scratch" Wallace, tramp comedian; Ralph Ruby, Dean Blake and others. The guest artist of the week will be Ann Corio, whose revelatory artistry needs no introduction to Capital audiences.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

ANOTHER solution is proposed to save the jobs of 1,800 employes of Alcohol Tax Unit, Internal Revenue, who are slated for dismissal under the McKellar "rider" to the emergency appropriation act. These Civil Service workers can be placed legally on a furlough basis until Congress can reconsider the act, several attorneys declared last night.

BAKER

Meanwhile, machinery of the American Federation of Labor's unit, the American Federation of Government Employes, swung into action yesterday with the following statement:

"* * * This federation is completely opposed to such undermining of the Civil Service, as was revealed by the adoption at its convention in New York this month of a resolution covering this matter. It holds that the sponsors of the legislation did not intend it to be as inclusive as the Attorney General has assumed in his ruling on the subject, and notes that Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell is quoted as expressing a similar view. The question originally arose in connection with the alleged political affiliations of a relatively small group of employes, and apparently did not involve many who have been brought within the scope of the legislation by the Attorney General's ruling.

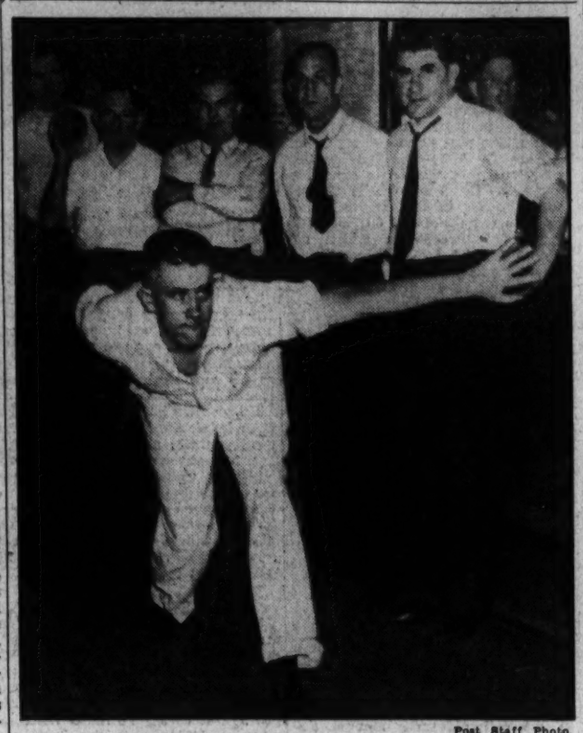

"Inasmuch as the rider was rushed through Congress at the close of the session, when no suitable opportunity was given to examine its provisions, it is felt that Congress should, and probably will wish to reconsider it when it assembles in January. Certain members of this organization have suggested that pending the new session of Congress, it might be possible to pay the salaries of the employes affected from Public Works appropriation funds until the matter can be reconsidered by Congress * * *"

It is understood that letters of protest have already been sent by messenger from AFGE headquarters to President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau.

The gravity and scope of the McKellar rider, which was pointed out first by the Federal Diary, was not realized by even Senator McKellar himself at the time of its passage, it is said. The Tennessean is reported to have said that the Alcohol Tax Unit is "being loaded with Republicans" and then pushed through the amendment to the emergency appropriations act apparently to compel about 700 investigators (formerly with the Prohibition Unit, Bureau of Investigation, Justice) to take again open competitive Civil Service examinations. However, the Attorney General has just ruled that the amendment applies to all employes shifted from the old Prohibition Unit to Internal Revenue.

The investigative examinations begin at Civil Service Commission tomorrow. The commission is reported to be preparing for other examinations for the 1,800, which include clerical, legal and virtually all types of office work. This report persists despite the apparent impracticability and expense of such a project. It is recalled that approximately 60,000 persons applied for the stenographic and typist examinations alone recently throughout the country.

But, beneath it all, employe leaders stress, is the principle whether merit system employes who have entered the Civil Service through examinations are to be required to pass another examination (which likely will never be held) to hold the same position even after 15 to 25 years of experience, or be subjected to spoilsmanship tactics, with the American taxpayers bearing the additional burden.

Famous Old Race Track Melodrama to Be Filmed Again; Radio Police Car Stories Bought for Screen; News Notes and Gossip of Hollywood.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Sept. 26.—"In Old Kentucky," famous old melodrama, will come to life once again on the screen. It has been made twice before, 'way back in the silent days, and once again during the early talkies. This time it is to see fulfillment with a cast including Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres, the duo seen in "Servant's Entrance," and Henry Wallthall. The start is scheduled for January. John Ford or Henry King will direct the picture, taken from the original by Charles T. Dazey, long an old warhorse of the stage.

JEANETTE M'DONALD

Police Radio Stories For Cary Grant.

This stunt of combining short stories and transforming them into a single picture is becoming a vogue. Here, for instance, is Paramount, which has purchased four tales by Carl Detzler, which appeared in a National magazine, concerning police radio work. The title of the picture will be "Car 99," and it looks as if Cary Grant were to be in the bright lights. The company also has ambitions to build up a new group of stars, including Dean Jagger, Lloyd Nolan and Fred MacMurray. They, too, will be cast in the picture. C. Gardner Sullivan is to do the screen play.

France Wants Jeanette Again.

Jeanette MacDonald is wanted in France again. She has just received an offer from Henri Varna, under whose supervision she formerly worked. She achieved success under his direction at the Empire Theater, and he desires to present her in a revue at the Casino de Paree. Under the circumstances it is scarcely likely that Miss MacDonald will be able to accept as the production of "Naughty Marietta" is still in the offing, and maybe not so far in the offing at that. "The Duchess of Delmonico's" is also being considered.

Pageant of The Film World.

Additions to the cast of the "White Cockatoo," which is about ready for production, include John Eldridge and Gordon Wescott, while Ruth Donnelly will play a comedy role. Margaret Lindsay and Ricardo Cortez are the leads . . . Jean Muir's work in "As the Earth Turns" is scoring a hit in England, according to latest reports. . . . William Henry, cast as Lysander in "Midsummer Night's Dream," has been given a long term contract by M.-G.-M. . . . Hugh Walpole is going to divert his attention long enough from pictures to lecture at the University of Southern California, October 4. His subject will be "The Return of the Hero to the Novel." . . . Lyle Talbot has been taking tests for the role Clark Gable originally was expected to do in "Repeal."

Stocks Lose Fight to Extend Brisk Rallies

Prices Decline Four-tenths as Sales Fall Off to 794,760 Shares.

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—The stock market eased off today after encouraging obstacles in attempting to carry on the brisk advance of the preceding session.

Undercurrents of returning confidence in financial markets were strengthened by additional evidence of seasonal business expansion, but bulls were in no hurry to extend their positions.

An active run of trading in stocks around the opening, with no appreciable advance in prices, indicated the market had entered a zone of increased supply. The market backed away and the list turned irregular while trading quieted.

Traders Study News.

In search of stimulus for a renewal of the advance in stocks, traders scanned the Washington news closely coincident with the return of President Roosevelt to the White House. Details of the NRA reorganization plans were waited for any light they might throw on the Administration's policies.

Utility and alcohol shares forged ahead in early trading. American Commercial Alcohol, Schenley, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and other members of the group were up fractionally to more than a point at one time, but their gains were shaved or eliminated before the close.

U. S. Smelting responded with a net gain of about a point to the declaration of another dividend of $2 a share on the common. Merchandise shares, generally, held firm as trade reports continued to stress the relatively favorable trend of retail buying of goods.

Traction Shares Weaken.

In midst of discussion of a local transit tax, New York City Traction shares weakened, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit losing 2¼ points. Rail shares softened with the general list. Sante Fe, New York Central and Union Pacific were among the carrier issues that yielded some of their previous gains.

Among prominent trading stocks, American Can, General Electric, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel and Johns Manville retreated to show fractional losses at the close.

Turnover was 794,760 shares, against 839,085 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks dipped four-tenths of a point to 72.2.

The Iron Age, in its weekly summary, confirmed other reports of increased steel demand, prompted in part by an urge to replenish inventory after the summer lull. Pointing out that the trend in steel production now was uniformly upward, the Iron Age estimated current output at 23½ per cent of capacity, a gain of 2½ points over a week ago.

Power Output Decline.

The decline in electric power output, compared with last year, narrowed to ½ of 1 per cent last week from 1.8 the previous week, according to the Edison Electric Institute's figures. Individual reports of railroads indicated a moderate decrease in loadings as a whole last week and additional carriers reported declines in net operating income for August, compared with the like month last year.

Net operating income of 33 railroads last month totaled $18,477,000, a decrease of 29.2 per cent, compared with last year.

Foreign exchanges rallied against the dollar after further declines in early trading. The British pound recovered to $4.97, after touching $4.96. United States Government bonds sagged a bit in face of indications that the Treasury's September refunding operation had met with fair success.

Commodities' Advancing Trend Is Found Under Definite Check

Foodstuffs and Grains Lead in General Slow-up; Weakness in Cash Markets Is Reflected Also by Dun & Bradstreet's Index.

New York, Sept. 26.—A definite check to the advancing trend in commodities, especially in foodstuffs and grains, was noted in the futures as well as cash markets during the past week.

Analysis of the latest weekly compilation of wholesale prices, as prepared by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., showed that individual price changes were alike at 30 each, following six weeks in which advances and 22 declines, and in the preceding week there were 31 advances and 22 declines, and in the same week of last year they were 45 and 47, respectively.

The weakness in cash markets was reflected in the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Commodity Index, which dropped from the high of 120.95 on August 29, to 117.20 on September 14, the lowest since August 6. A moderate recovery brought the index for September 17 to 117.51, or about 1 per cent below a week ago, but still 12.4 per cent higher than last year, when the index stood at 104.50.

Foodstuffs Turn Easier.

Foodstuffs displayed the greatest weakness in the past week, after the group, as a whole, had established the record of reporting more advances than declines for nine weeks in succession. This week, advances numbered only 11, as against 18 declines, as compared with 18 and 9, respectively, in the preceding period. Some liquidation in the coffee futures market appeared, as a result of a partial release of exchange restrictions and reports of needed rains in Brazil, causing some reaction.

Local spot prices held unchanged. Reports from Brazil indicated that the destruction program was nearing its end and that early next year the government may extend the freedom of exchange to coffee.

The butter market took on a better tone, 92-score extras advancing ½ cent, to 25½ cents per pound. Late advices indicated some decrease in production and it was reported that the Government would shortly reenter the market for further relief purposes. Fresh mixed-colored eggs continued firm, especially on the finer selections, while fancy whites showed an advance of 2 cents per dozen. Refrigerators were easier and some weakness developed in futures, due to less favorable comparison of withdrawals from storage as compared to last year.

Grain Markets Weaker.

The grain markets, as a whole, turned weaker this week, following the recent exhibition of strength. Demand tapered off and offerings increased moderately. A further depressing influence was the weakness in foreign markets and domestic prices declined to an export basis at seaboard terminals.

In the cash markets at New York, rye and barley declined the sharpest, the former losing 3¾ cents and the latter 3¼ cents from last week's quotations. Oats declined 1½ cents, wheat 1 cent and corn ¾ cent under last week's levels. Flour was steady at the close at prices ranging from 10 cents to 30 cents under the previous quotations.

A large supply of live hogs depressed the market early last week, carrying prices down 40 cents to 50 cents per hundredweight, but a rally in the closing days of last week and on Monday of this week advanced prices sufficiently to show a gain of 25 cents per hundredweight for the week. The top price rose to $7.50, the highest since September 6.

Cattle Sales Larger.

Cattle marketings last week were the largest in several years, with prices off about 15 cents from a week ago.

Lambs also declined, being quoted about 40 cents lower at the close. Trading in cash lard and futures was active last week and, with consumption and exports heavy, stocks showed a large decrease. Closing prices were slightly higher than last week.

Sugar futures maintained a firm price level, advancing slightly in the week, despite a stagnant raw market brought about by the uncertainty as to the Washington plans for controlling the 1935 distribution. Traders were also awaiting the clarification of the recent Cuban export decree. The refined market was active, with withdrawals not quite as heavy as in the previous week.

Firmness in Hides.

More firmness has been noted in the hide market since the announcement of the Government intention not to tan hides and to discontinue buying cattle, except in cases where farmers were unable to purchase feed. Out of the 11 items listed, 8 advanced this week, the increases ranging from a low of ¼ cent on No. 1 buffs to a high of 1½ cents on Chicago city calfskins. Leather prices were unchanged, with buying restricted, as tanners are being pressed for price concessions.

As the strike in the textile industry appeared to be nearing its final stages, and a number of mills already have reopened, there was not the rush to buy cotton goods reported a week earlier.

Demand was sufficiently large, however, to keep the price structure firm, with a slight advance carrying standard brown sheetings, brown sheetings, 4-yard, and 38½-inch print cloths, 64 by 60s, above the positions occupied at this time a year ago. Although the downtrend of raw cotton prices has been checked, the upswing was not sufficiently strong to recover all the ground lost.

Hudson Auto Sales Gain 61.5 Per Cent

New York, Sept. 26.—Retail sales of Hudson Motor Car Co. in the United States totaled 46,689 cars for the eight months ended August 31, including both Hudson and Terraplane cars, it was announced today. This total represents an increase of 61.5 per cent, as compared with sales of 28,896 cars reported for the corresponding period in 1933.

Total sales for the eight months were 14 per cent in excess of the total sales of 40,151 cars reported for the full year 1933. The above figures do not include Canadian shipments or cars shipped for export, which likewise showed a comparable increase.

Bonds Holding Steady Tone; Prices Gain

Trading Is Fairly Active; Sales Volume Rises to $11,748,000.

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—The bond market maintained a steady tone in today's moderately active market. Domestic corporate issues, especially carrier loans, were again the favorites. All classes of Government bonds, however, were a trifle lower.

Transfers aggregated $11,748,000 par value compared with $10,740,000 on Tuesday.

Of this total the turnover in Governments amounted to $3,140,000 compared with $1,490,000 the day before. The Standard Statistics Co. average of 60 domestic corporate loans advanced four-tenths of a point to 83.5.

Cheaper Bonds Active.

Following up the improved technical position of lower-priced carrier bonds, this group was the most active throughout the session.

Baltimore & Ohio 5s closed 2 points higher at 69½, Pere Marquette 5s were 2⅞ better at 75, and Wabash 5s advanced 2 points to 18. Others selling around a point higher included some obligations of Western Maryland, Texas & Pacific, St. Louis-San Francisco, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Northern Pacific, and Missouri-Kansas-Texas.

Prime investment bonds moved within a more restricted range. American Telephone 4½s were ¼ higher at 107⅞, while the debenture 5s lost an equal amount at 108¾.

Fractional Gains Staged.

Fractional improvement occurred in some issues of Brooklyn Edison, Chesapeake Corporation, Chicago Union Station, Consumers Power, Detroit Edison, New England Telegraph and Telephone, Philadelphia Electric, and Public Service Gas and Electric. Canadian National Railways obligations and all but one issue of Chesapeake & Ohio loans sold a trifle lower.

A new issue of Home Owners Loan bonds, the 2¾ per cent series "B," were admitted to trading and closed at 93.10, after opening at 93.12. The other two issues were minor fractions lower, as were all of the Treasury loans and Liberties.

The foreign sections showed no important change. German and Japanese issues were steady and Argentines were inclined to softness.

Curb's Prices Close Mixed In Active Sales

Specialties Record Gains; Trading Volume Totals 152,000 Shares.

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Curb Market closed mildly irregular today. Trading was again rather active. Some specialties pushed up for sizable gains.

The list was generally narrow throughout the session. Utilities ruled fairly steady while alcohols and others encountered profit taking.

Singer Manufacturing soared 5 points to close at 195, a new high mark for 1934 to date. Bell telephone of Canada also moved up sharply on light trading. Parker Rust Proof and Newmont Mining firmed around a point each.

Fractional recessions appeared in Swift & Co., Swift Internacional, Aluminum Company of America, Distillers Corporation - Seagrams, Sherwin Williams and Lake Shore. Hiram Walker lost a point. Electric Bond & Share, Pioneer Gold, International Petroleum and American Cyanamid B were all fairly steady.

Transfers, which approximated 152,000 shares, were about the same as the previous session.

Insurance Stocks Higher for Week

New York, Sept. 26.—Insurance stocks in the New York City market registered an improvement during the past week. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, amounted to $436,431,000 on September 21, compared with $428,777,000 on September 14, an increase of $7,654,000, or 1.79 per cent.

The current average yield of the 20 issues of 4.19 per cent compares with a yield of 4.26 per cent a week ago. The current market value is equal to 1.08 times the current liquidating value, against 1.06 times on September 14.

Combined operating earnings from underwriting and net investment income are now 10.53 per cent on market, as compared with 10.72 per cent at the close of the previous week, and based upon current figures the 20 issues are now quoted at an average of 9.5 times their combined operating earnings, against 9.3 on September 14.

Wool Markets.

Boston, Sept. 26 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—The demand for greasy combing domestic wool in Boston remained mostly very dull. Sales were closed on medium fleeces in a few cases. Graded strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼ blood Ohio and similar wool brought 29@30 cents in the grease for a very moderate quantity. A round lot of Kentucky wool comprising combing and clothing staple of mixed 56s, ⅜ blood and 48s, 50s, ¼ blood qualities was sold at around 30 cents in the grease.

London, Sept. 26 (AP).—There were 10,055 bales of wool offered at the auction today, of which 8,621 were sold. Demand was irregular, and better quality greasies sold well to the home trade and the continent. Lack of interest was evident in scoured types, several of which were withdrawn.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—With trading fairly active, prices on the stock exchange developed irregularity today. Gilt-edged securities were inclined to ease on profit taking, but home rails recovered after early weakness. Transatlantic issues and German bonds held firmer, while kaffirs and oil shares turned easier, the latter after a firm start. A feature was the strength in tobacco stocks. The market closed irregular.

Paris—After a weak opening, prices on the bourse steadied today. The session was marked by slight gains in industrials, bank stocks and gold mining issues, while rentes held close to Tuesday's level. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Buying orders caused a recovery on the boerse today, where prices improved. The closing tone was optimistic.

Wheat Values Sink Again as Buying Wanes

Plan to Import Feedstuffs Blamed; Other Grains Join Decline.

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Virtual disappearance of the sudden display of buying power that late yesterday put grain prices up led to an irregular downward trend today.

Announcement from Washington that $50,000,000 would be used to import foreign feedstuffs had a general bearish effect, although some leading trade authorities contended that the importation program would only apply to hay and forage products and not to grains.

Another factor conducive to downturns of quotations was an unofficial report that seeding of domestic winter wheat was making rapid progress, with 75 per cent of the work completed in Kansas.

Wheat Closes Easy.

After maximum setbacks of a cent a bushel, wheat closed easy ⅜ to ⅞ under yesterday's finish, December new, 1.03½-⅝; corn, also ⅜ to ⅞ down, December new, 78⅛; oats unchanged to ¾ off, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Contributing to weakness of wheat prices was an unofficial forecast indicating that a good deal of rain was to be expected the next month or two in the greater part of the agricultural areas east of the Rockies, and that temperatures would be rather moderate except in Canada. Bears in wheat laid stress, too, on reports that the heaviest rains of the year have fallen over practically the whole of Northwestern States, and that continued soaking in Canada would restore subsoil moisture to some extent, giving promise of a better spring crop next year than has been harvested the past two seasons.

Moderate Buying Develops.

Moderate buying which developed at one stage caused a transient rally in the wheat futures market, but upturns were soon checked as a result of profit-taking. The brief show of speculative demand came from a few houses with Eastern connections. Some observers said it was apparently based on evidence that considerable cash wheat had been disposed of here both today and during the past few days as well.

Despite unfavorable weather, corn and oats declined with wheat. Shipping call for corn was almost zero.

A cargo of rye which arrived in Chicago from Buffalo today acted as a drag on that grain.

Provisions averaged lower, responsive to downturns of hog values and of grains.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Gasoline—Pressure of gasoline produced outside the legal quotas is said to be an unsettling influence in the bulk market. The legal product is moving at 4 cents to 3⅞ cents a gallon, against reported quotations of 2¾ cents for some of the so-called illegal product.

Commodity prices—Following the halting tendency of last week, commodity prices assumed a mixture of trends in the current week, with the majority of changes on the up side, says Dun & Bradstreet. The agency's daily commodity index stood at 117.85 on September 24, against 117.51 for September 17.

Hosiery—Total production for July was 6,443,000 dozen pairs, against 8,257,000 dozen pairs in June and 9,992,000 dozen pairs in May, according to the monthly statistical bulletin of the hosiery code authority. Total stocks on hand at the end of July were 18,353,000 dozen pairs, against 18,164,000 dozen pairs at the end of June.

Floor covering—It is reported in the trade that department stores in various sections are expecting a sizable expansion of buying in rugs and carpets during the next few weeks.

Cotton Turns Heavy Under Selling Drive

December Closes at 12.57 as General Market Drops 7 to 12 Points.

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Cotton turned heavy today following early steadiness and sold within a few points of Tuesday's lows under moderate Southern selling and liquidation. A favorable weekly weather report, declines in grains and hesitancy to make fresh commitments owing to a number of uncertainties were factors mentioned in connection with the decline. December eased from 12.72 to 12.57 and closed at the low, with final prices barely steady net 7 to 12 points lower.

The market was steady at the outset, registering advances of 2 to 6 points and gaining slightly during the first few minutes. Demand failed to broaden, however, and the market sagged slowly under moderate Southern and New Orleans offerings.

Publication of the weekly weather report, which told of favorable conditions for harvesting the crop, except in the northeastern part of the belt, appeared to bring in a little more selling.

Forecast Indicates Frost.

Some hesitancy was noted, however, when the official forecast pointed to probable frost in northwestern Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle tonight. In the continued absence of outstanding support, prices eased further in the afternoon. October sold off from 12.57 to 12.42 and May from 12.90 to 12.76, all deliveries ending at the lows for the day.

There were no additional October notices today and pressure in the spot month was noticeably lighter. Quietness of the market was attributed partly to a disposition to await publication of end-September private crop estimates, which are expected within the next few days. Exports today 11,976, making 616,835 so far this season. Port receipts, 29,336; United States port stocks, 2,744,049.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firmer on renewed covering and buying by houses with cotton connections today, but after showing gains of 10 to 21 points offerings increased and reactions followed under liquidation and selling by refining interests, with final prices 3 to 6 points net higher. Sales were 113 contracts.

The easier turn to cotton and the fractional reaction in lard offset the hog strength. Crude oil remained firm. Bleachable spot nominal; October closed 7.95; December, 7.96; January, 8.00 March, 8.13.

Paper Business Better.

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—A. H. Chamberlain, New York, secretary of the National Paper Trade Association in convention here, said business in the trade was "somewhat better than 1933, and considerably better than 1932." A fall improvement was just beginning, he added.

4 Basic Farm Commodities Double in Price

Values Rise 101 Per Cent Above 1932 Average; Up 35 in Year.

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Market value of wheat, corn, hogs and cotton, the four basic commodities defined by the agricultural adjustment act, was shown today to be 101 per cent higher than the average of late September, 1932.

Whereas late in April this year the Chicago market prices of these commodities averaged 37 per cent higher than April, 1932, they now average 101 per cent above the corresponding date two years ago. Early in June this year these prices averaged only 71.5 per cent higher than the corresponding date in 1932.

Compared with a year ago the basic farm products now average 35 per cent higher, corn and hogs showing the greatest percentage of increase. Figures in hogs do not include the $2.25 per hundredweight processing tax, which, after Government collection, is an indirect benefit to producers.

The average price of hogs today is approximately 47 per cent higher than a year ago and 67 per cent higher than two years ago. Based on the Chicago figure hogs sold Tuesday at an average of about $6.70, not including the tax. This shows a $2.18 increase over September 25, 1933, and $2.76 over September 24, 1932.

Corn, on the basis of December futures prices before trading today, sold at 79 cents a bushel, 28 cents, or about 54 per cent, higher than a year ago and 50 cents, or about 172 per cent, higher than two years ago.

December wheat, selling about $1.04, was 14 cents higher than a year ago and 50 cents above prices two years ago, an advance of 92 per cent compared with September 25, 1932.

Chicago cotton prices, based on quotations for October deliveries, were about 27 per cent higher than a year ago and 73 per cent higher than two years ago.

Demand to Aid Cotton Prices, Expert Says

C. T. Revere Calls Reaction in Values Temporary; Exports Decline.

New York, Sept. 26.—There are many factors in the cotton situation which give evidence of stability and indicate that the market should respond favorably to constructve developments relating to demand, in the opinion of C. T. Revere, economist for Munds, Winslow & Potter, in his current study of cotton market conditions.

"In considering the present situation of cotton, it should be kept clearly in mind that the failure of the market to advance to much higher levels as a result of the reduction in the size of the American crop by more than 3,500,000 bales has been due to several factors which may not be permanent in their influence," Mr. Revere states.

While the recent action of the securities markets and the textile strike have been important factors influencing the cotton market, he adds, exports also have declined because of the difficulties surrounding the ability of continental importers to finance purchases of American cotton.

Bankhead Act Outlook.

Offsetting this, however, is the possibility of suspension of the provisions of the Bankhead act for this season. As a result of the acreage reduction and the disastrous drought in the Southwest, the crop reduction even exceeded the expectation of the proponents of the program.

The various factors in the present situation, Mr. Revere states, "should operate to provide resistance to a downward tendency," but "the market requires the stmulus of constructive developments to bring about a higher level.

"These must take the form of increased consumption in the United States and a great improvement in the export demand.

Suggestions for Improvement.

"Insofar as the domestic situation is concerned, we think the constructive developments could be provided by a reduction in the processing tax and a settlement of the strike on a basis that would not increase manufacturing costs with their inevitable accompaniment of higher prices for consumers. As for exports, some means must be provided to effect payments for our cotton."

Regarding foreign crops, Mr. Revere states that there is a chance that total world production outside the United States will not show an increase of 1,500,000 bales this season, and possibly not more than 1,000,000 bales.

This is offset by a reduction of about 3,500,000 bales in American production. Thus, "we believe that the situation contains certain undoubted elements of stability, and with the present liquidated situation in cotton, we think the market is in a position to respond substantially to constructive developments relating to demand."

Gossip of New York Markets

By Charles A. Jagger.

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—The creeping rise in commercial bank loans in progress since mid-July prompts the question of whether, at last, a real reflation of credit is starting.

The loans of reporting member banks in 91 leading cities, other than the advances against security collateral, have gained approximately $265,000,000 since July 18. Gains in the two latest weeks have been small, amounting to only $11,000,000 for the last week.

Bank loans bulged temporarily in the late summer of 1933. However, which was the first notable upturn after the long years of deflation. So it is possible that the current upturn, and the one last year, merely indicates that credit has once more started to respond to seasonal influences. It is normal for credit to expand coincident to the autumn movement of goods.

Bankers resent the charge that they are pulling the purse strings too closely when it comes to making loans, and are thus hampering recovery. They point out that virtually nothing has come of the authorization by the last Congress for the Federal Reserve Banks and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make direct loans to industry and to individuals.

It is regarded as probable that the Administration's efforts to unify the work of the bank examiners, and to adopt a more liberal policy in the classification of loans, may speed the reflation of bank credit, but some conservative bankers express concern lest liberalism regarding bank loans be overdone. There has been a decided effort to correct the mistakes on the side of liberalism made in the boom years.

The deflation of bank credit in this country, while it has been more severe, has had its counterpart abroad. Advances of the London banks declined steadily until a few months ago, and while the decline has been checked, they have not increased much.

Review of Freight Loadings

By Theodore Prince & Co.

New York, Sept. 26.—Carloadings for the month of August, as in July, made an unfavorable camparison with the like 1933 month; August loadings were about 4% below the August, 1933, level. This decline in carloadings portends a decrease in gross revenues from the like 1933 month for the second time this year. In fact, aggregate gross revenues and net railway operating income for the month of August will continue the unsatisfactory comparison with the corresponding 1933 months, witnessed particularly in July, 1934, and extending back as far as May, 1934.

The August, 1934, railroad earnings showing will make a poor comparison with the like 1933 month in that gross revenues will probably be lower as a result of a decline in traffic and net railway operating income will be curtailed not only because of increased wage costs and higher material costs, but by the recently enacted compulsory pension bill. With traffic continuing below the 1933 level, the cost of the "New Deal" to the railroads will, of course, be particularly noticeable. Unless there is a substantial pickup in traffic, earnings comparisons in coming months with the like 1933 months will be unsatisfactory.

In July, 1934, gross earnings were lower than in July, 1933, as a result of a decline in traffic; net railway operating income was cut into by increased wage costs brought about by the restoration on July 1 of 2½ per cent of the 1932 10 per cent wage cut. July, 1934, gross revenues showed a decrease of 6 per cent from the July, 1933, level, while net railway operating income declined 45.6 per cent.

In May and June of this year, although gross earnings showed an increase over the like 1933 months, net railway operating income declined, apparently in reflection of the relatively heavy expenditures for maintenance made by the railroads in an effort to have maintenance programs well under way before the 2½ per cent wage restoration became effective on July 1. Thus, in May, despite an increase of 10.5 per cent of gross revenues over May, 1933, net railway operating income declined 3.8 per cent from May, 1933; in June, the showing was similar in that although gross revenues increased 1.6 per cent over June, 1933, net railway operating income declined 30.1 per cent from the June, 1933, level.

The possible beneficial effect of any increase in earnings brought about by freight-rate increases recently applied for will probably not be seen until the first of next year. The Interstate Commerce Commission has set October 1 as the date for a hearing on the petition of the railroads for an increase in existing freight rates and it will probably take several months before any decision is handed down.

As a result of an increase in other income, in June the carriers were able to cover their fixed charges with a surplus of roughly $5,870,000, whereas in the two preceding months fixed charges were not covered. For the first six months of 1934 the Class I railroads reported a net loss, after charges, of about $24,854,000, against a net loss of $101,204,000 in the 1933 first half. We believe that July earnings, not yet available in detail, may show a net loss after charges, and that the same condition is likely to prevail in August.

Steel Output Rate Rises to 23½ Per Cent

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—A further rise in steel demand, accompanied by a 2½-point gain in production, said the weekly Iron Age review today, has buoyed up the hopes of the trade and stiffened resistance to pressure against prices. Ingot production is estimated at 23½ per cent, against 21 per cent for last week.

"Part of the increase," asserted the review, "is attributable to larger releases from the automobile industry, but much of it is due to heavier replenishment buying.

"Further acceleration of purchases for stock replacement is now looked for, since many steel consumers are believed to have allowed their inventories to fall below normal levels.

"Among other factors encouraging freer buying is the lingering fear of eventual currency inflation, although generally speaking the tone of business is more confident and less uncertain, influenced no doubt by the ending of the textile strike.

"The trend of production in contrast with recent weeks is now uniformly upward and some of the gains have been substantial. At Chicago output rose 4½ points, to 26½ per cent; in the Wheeling district the increase was 5 points, to 26 per cent, and at Cleveland 3 pjoints, to 24 per cent.

"A continued negative market factor is scrap, which, although increasingly sluggish, has given further ground."

U. S. Dolla[r] Surges Ahea[d] To New Leve[l]

British Pound Contin[ues] to Decline, Yielding Half Cent.

By W. R. Huff.

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—The dollar surged further ahead in exchange trading today, arousing keen discussion of what would be the next phase of the international currency spectacle.

The British pound fell another notch, yielding ½ cent in the early trading in New York, to $4.96½, the lowest price since the dollar found its new level against gold last February, the pound gave every indication of deliberate and orderly depreciation, in the opinion of currency experts.

With the sterling rate only 1 cents above its old dollar parity foreign exchange circles here expect to see the former relationship between dollar and pound reestablished through the operations of the British exchange control. The latter has apparently been accumulating dollar balances with the intention of depressing the rate.

Implications Seen.

Observers read two implications into this anticipated development: A growing distrust of European gold currencies on the part of the British authorities, and, conversely, a growing confidence in the stability of the dollar.

Talk of any early stabilization of currencies in general, however, was viewed as premature. It is not believed that any important governments, excepting the gold bloc nations, are prepared to discuss the subject.

London, Sept. 26 (AP).—Talk of an early stabilization of the United States dollar and the British pound was renewed today in financial quarters as a result of the decision of gold bloc nations at Geneva yesterday to work for the universalization of gold as the basis of currency.

The British, while wondering whether the French franc can long stick to its gold standard, regard the Continental situation as so uncertain economically and politically that a growing belief that the dollar is the best currency to tie to is reported.

Authoritative sources consider the presence here of Professors George F. Warren and Frank A. Pearson, of Cornell University, United States currency experts, as bolstering the belief that "pre-stabilization maneuvers" may be undertaken shortly here and in Washington.

Fund Buying Dollars.

The British stabilization fund was reported to be buying dollars, thus at least partly accounting for the firming of the dollar price. However, informed quarters said that there was so much seasonal demand for funds that these activities "should not be given excessive importance." At the same time they admitted the fund "may be building up a 'long' position on dollars with the view toward early stabilization negotiations."

Financial leaders were represented as expecting that President Roosevelt will further devaluate the dollar in the belief that stabilization would be the logical means of avoiding "violent fluctuations" in case devaluation took place.

American business quarters in London said they believed there was "apparently some understanding between the British and American stabilization funds because of the way the two currencies act relative to each other—the lack of violent fluctuations lately could not just happen."

It was reported that during the past few days local refiners bought about 98,000 bags of Cubas from store at the 2.90 level and it was believed that a much larger amount had been sold, and that outport refiners paid as high as 2.96, although details were lacking.

Withdrawals of refined continue of seasonably proportions, but new business was only moderate and supplied through second hands. Prices were unchanged at 4.75 for fine granulated with second hands at about 10 points less.

Walt Mason Himself

Third Degree.

The sinner comes before the beak, and when he is allowed to speak, he tells sad tales of third degrees, of cops who kicked him on the knees, and nearly spoiled his trusty nose by hitting it with garden hose, and choked him till his face turned blue, and broke a costly rib or two. And now and then his tale of grief may gain a general belief, for it is known beyond dispute that cops have mauled some sad galoot; such instances no doubt are rare, the cop is not a grizzly bear; he oft is human and inclined to be forgiving bland and kind. But once a delegate was jugged, and he was by policemen slugged; in court he showed his busted nose, his damaged hat and twisted toes, and so gave rise, by wounds like these, to that grim tale of third degrees. And now all prisoners insist that peelers took them by the wrist, and slammed them up against the wall, and gave their heads an overhaul, and threatened them with heavy fines, and telescoped their divers spines. The cops will sweat a hundred years before this bogie disappears. It's different in English courts; it doesn't help the sad-eyed sports to say cops dragged them from their beds and sat upon their weary heads. The cops must treat the felons there with deep respect and anxious care. No foolish questions are allowed when thieves are pinched among the crowd, and courtesy must still prevail when they're escorted to the jail. If some crazed prisoner arose to say that cops stamped on his toes, all men would laugh at such a bloke, for there the third degree's a joke.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

WITH continued thirst for details of the Morro Castle investigation, A. B. S. listeners are complaining because the account was cut into yesterday to flash developments in the Lindbergh kidnaping hearing from the Bronx County courthouse in New York.

"We don't understand why you cut in when there's real stuff on the Morro Castle hearing," is the complaint coming to nearly every A. B. S. station. Objections were voiced when A. B. S. cut off four or five times for 10 minutes to air what was termed as a "rehash" of newspaper accounts of the Lindbergh story.

Apparently, sidelights on the kidnaping held less interest. Voices of police officials who figured in capture of the suspect and members of the district attorney's staff were expected to be heard . . . but Frank Knight, A. B. S. announcer, who handled the ship broadcast, found the kidnaping hearing dull by comparison.

The Morro Castle broadcast concludes today with officers of the Ward Line and lawyers representing the company appearing before the board. WOL will continue carrying the account from 9 to 11 a. m. and from 12:30 to 3:30 p. m. But details of the Lindbergh hearing will also be included at intervals.

It has been asked why N. B. C. and C. B. S. have paid so little attention to the ship broadcast. Some have assumed that A. B. S. was engineering a "scoop" or something. Actually, N. B. C. and C. B. S. networks are too cluttered up with commercial and regular sustaining spots that must go on. It was impossible for them to clear their chains to accommodate the ship or the Lindbergh hearing.

A. B. S. thereby gains a tremendous boost and a carload of valuable publicity, not to mention countless new listeners who left rival station programs to dial the Morro Castle series. One local station even went so far as to graph the rising curve of interest that indicated how avidly Washington listeners caught on to the broadcast.

BOB TROUT, whose rhythmical accents you've missed from WJSV due to his meandering in the West Indies, will be greeted by a telegram when his boat lands at Philadelphia this morning, telling him to hasten here to keep intact his record of presenting President Roosevelt to C. B. S. listeners.

The Chief Executive speaks from the White House at 9:45 p. m. today, making the closing address of the New York Herald Tribune's conference on current problems. It's an N. B. C. show and is being directed from New York . . . so C. B. S. will merely synchronize. Carleton Smith, N. B. C. Presidential announcer, will be at the President's side, however, to tell him when to go on and to sign him off. C. B. S. will also be on hand for a pick-up.

His remarks will close the conference that discusses "The Changing Status of Women" today with Dorothy Thompson, journalist; Lady Rhondda, editor; Frau Wurm, former Reichstag member; Emily Post, and Mme. Paul Dupuy, editor, contributing remarks. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt will be heard in a discussion of "Forward or Backward," while Gov. John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, and Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, will be heard before the President's speech.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will present the sixth in his series of intimate talks to the Nation, reporting on the progress of the Administration, this Sunday night, September 30, from 10 to 10:30 o'clock.

His latest "fireside chat" will come from the diplomatic room of the White House and will be relayed to listeners through the facilities of all major networks—both the blue and the red of N. B. C., and the C. B. S. and A. B. S. chains.

Andre Kostelanetz (musical director)—"I realize more than ever that American music is the reigning favorite of both continents. I am glad that this is so."

Roxy (he ran a theater)—"It is second nature for . . . people who are radio wise . . . to get the program on and off the air on time, without making it a problem in higher mathematics."

Lucille Peterson (singer with Gershwin's new series)—"I prefer 'torch songs,' although no one would ever call me a 'torch singer' . . . I'd never sing a number that I personally dislike. That'd be a 'torture song.'"

WHEN he was a kid, Bill Coyle, WMAL'S sports expert, used to wear "ear muffs" and tune his crystal set to the great Graham McNamee to listen to his reporting of football games. Bill was something of a hero worshipper, he says . . . and now he is going to meet the master of fancy forensics.

They'll be together in the press box at the Navy-William and Mary game Saturday at Annapolis, Md. This is the last place where Bill expected to meet McNamee . . . and he expects a real thrill and mentions it with all the enthusiasm that marks the Coyle antics these days.

Bill, however, doesn't expect to be asked to go on the air himself . . . Graham will probably ask him, though, when he learns of Bill's adoration. His intention is to pick up a few pointers on football broadcasting and profit by the famous delivery of Mr. McNamee, whose style has been often compared to Bill's. N. B. C. listeners will hear McNamee's account of the game at 1:45 p. m.

Candland Out Of Control Job

Ferdinand Kaufholz Put in Charge of U. S. Division.

Ferdinand Kaufholz has been named acting chief of the Division of Government Space Control, it was learned yesterday, replacing, at least temporarily, Harold A. Candland, who had headed this branch of the Interior Department since its organization last year.

Officials of the National Park Service, which has supervision over the division, were reluctant to discuss the sudden change. Inquiry revealed that Candland is considering taking a position with a governmental housing agency.

The Division of Government Space Control, which succeeded the Public Buildings Commission in 1933, is responsible for the housing and moving of practically all Federal departments and bureaus in Washington, its authority extending to both public-owned and leased buildings.

Candland's departure comes at a time when the division faces its most difficult assignments, allotment of space in the new Triangle buildings and moving the several departments and independent offices involved.

Kaufholz formerly was a technical adviser in the engineering division under Candland.

Roof Finished, Justice Building Dedication Set, Rain or Shine

Cummings Names Oct. 25 as Date of Elaborate Ceremonies.

Rain or shine, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings is going to get his new Department of Justice Building dedicated October 25.

The building was to have been dedicated May 13. But that day it rained just 15 minutes before the ceremony was to have got under way. And the building wasn't finished. It didn't have much of a roof. So the 4,000 or so attorneys who were to have attended went to a movie, or something, instead.

But on October 25 things are going to be different. If the sun shines, ceremonies will be held in the court. If not, they will be held inside. The roof is finished.

Furthermore, Attorney General Cummings intends to have such a dedication that will be a model for all future dedications. No halfway measures with him.

At least, so F. Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association, and a member of the committee in charge, said yesterday.

There will be engraved invitations and engraved programs.

President Roosevelt and all his Cabinet will be there. At least, they will be invited. And if they come, the Marine Band will play. And if they don't, the Navy Band, which doesn't play for Presidents so much, will be there.

All the judges of the Supreme Court have been invited. So have members of the District, Federal and Women's Bar Associations. The dedication will start at 3 p. m. If it rains at any point during the ceremony there will be a canopy to shelter dedicationers until they can get inside.

J. Crawford Biggs, Solicitor General, is honorary chairman of the committee. J. Spalding Flannery is chairman; Daniel Caldwell, vice president, and Richard H. Wilmer secretary. Officers of the District Bar Association are ex-officio members.

Marine Band Concerts Will Open Tomorrow

The winter concert schedule of the U. S. Marine Band was announced yesterday by Capt. Taylor Branson, leader.

There will be another hour for "shut-ins" at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Beginning October 9, the shut-in programs will be presented on Tuesdays at 11:30 a. m.

The regular concert schedule for the winter will be Mondays at 3 p. m. and Wednesday at 8 p. m. Tuesdays at 11:30 will be orchestral concerts. General band concerts will be held Fridays at 3 p. m. All programs will be given in the auditorium of the Marine barracks.

Holdup Killing Believed Error

Son's Burial Planned Here; Woman Doubts Part in Florida Crime.

John Reid, who was shot to death in Walton County, Fla., Saturday while allegedly fleeing in a filling station holdup, will be buried in Washington, said his mother, Mrs. Clara Emma Reid, of the 700 block of Quincy street northwest.

Mrs. Reid, mother of 12 children, expressed the belief her son had not participated in any crime.

Life followed death in Mrs. Reid's household when she received news her son was slain. Her seventeenth grandchild was born in her home the same day.

Arrangements for burial were made yesterday by Mrs. Reid as she endeavored to find John's widow and his two children, 11 and 13 years old, in New York State.

"Love of a road race probably led to John's death," said Mrs. Reid yesterday.

She explained that John refused to let other automobiles pass him on the highways, and consequently must have been mistaken for the holdup man.
